En route to the reformatory, Jane escapes and finds refuge in the pet shop of an escaped convict who is being blackmailed by another criminal.

Jane manages to get everybody-herself most of all—into trouble before the climax but she then puts as skillfully extricates them from their difficulties.

The Withers mim is more roguish than ever and further adds to the general hilarity by singing a brand new song "Then Came the Indians".

Charles Lloyd, the cast includes Jane Darwell, Ralph Morgan, Sara Haden, Harry Carey and Betty Jean Hales.

"Absolute Quiet"

"Puppy" Ends Tonight

W. C. Fields in "Poppy" the funniest feature presentation that the Bridge Theatre has offered its patrons in a long time, will be shown for the last time tonight commencing at 7.45 and 9.30 p.m. Rochelle Hudson and Richard Cromwell support W. AT THE CAPITOL

"Living Dangerously"

For the first time, the workings of the General Medical Council, are revealed to the public through the production "Living Dangerously," which opens at the Capitol today. One of the highlights of this amusement now offering is a sequence which shows Dr. Ernest Lee, Harley Street specialist brought before the General Council for unscrupulous partner, played by Arthur Margetson, who has brought a charge of unprofessional conduct against him. It is an intensely dramatic and at the same time an exceptionally interesting scene, because Dr. Lee's counsel, played by G.M.G. is carefully followed.

Elsa Krueger, one of the most popular leading men in Hollywood and one of the best known actors on Broadway plays the leading role in this subject. It is impossible to imagine a more thoroughly dramatic and exacting parts he fore the climax but she then passes as skillfully extricates them from their difficulties.

"Little Miss Nobody"
"Absolute Quiet"

Jane Withers returns to the lovable harum-scarum type of role that first brought her screen fame in "Little Miss Nobody", a Fox film which will be shown on a two-feature program at the Belle Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily.

The story of "Little Miss Nobody" —who incidentally turns out to be quite a somebody after all—is concerned with a mischievous orphan whose antics and pranks are the talk of the entire institution in charge of the orphan asylum's heads.

Jane is continually in hot water. As, for instance, when she begrudges the time Miss Dix is taking to find a valuable pocketbook and which turns out to be a ruse that douses him with a bucket of water—and when she steals a complete chicken dinner so that the children in the orphanage will not go hungry on Thanksgiving Day.

When she tries to be "very, very good" and do her good deed for the day, Jane really gets into trouble

OSHAWA TROUNCES BELLEVILLE TEAM BY 25-6 SCORE

Oshawa, July 13 (CP)—Oshawa chalked up its most decisive victory of the season Saturday, when they knocked out Belleville, 25-6 in a Central Ontario Baseball League senior game.

Getting little in the way of pitching, the easterners were easy marks for the slugging Oshawans, who ran up 24 runs in the first four innings.

Belleville faced superb hurling on the part of Jake Biddle and Johnny Turner, never being able to bunch their hits until the eighth, when they started a rally that netted them five runs.

Alex Weir, veteran outfielder of the visitors, took over their pitching duties in the third inning, and after a bad start, settled down to hold the Oshawa sluggers fairly well in check.

Bunjie Greatest Dog Expert Judged

Bunjie, three-year-old international champion bull dog, and perhaps the best dog of his breed, was judged in a show ring, who died early yesterday at Toronto, believed due to the heat. The greatest bull dog judged by him in the past twenty years, declared Mr. Walter Reeves of this city, internationally famed dog judge, lamenting his loss today.

The dog, owned by Reg. F. Sparks of Forest Hill, Toronto, was valued at $10,000.

"I knew Bunjie as every other dog judge in the country knew him," declared Mr. Reeves. "At the Royal Winter Fair last year I placed him best dog of all breeds entered for competition. He also took top honors at the Westminster Point New York. Perhaps the biggest dog show in the world.

"I'm sorry to hear of the loss of that great animal."

Dean's Injury May be 'Break' That Will Take 'Gas House Gang Out of Pennant Race

Will be Out For Week When Hit With Batted Ball

CUBS CLIMB

Double Loss to Cards And Even Split For Cubs Over Weekend

By RED FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

When it comes time to write the history of the 1936 Big League campaign, the "breaks" of the week-end just past may tell the story of the up-to-now tight and dizzy National League race.

Those breaks, if the gas house gang from St. Louis continues to live up to the pennant, can easily point to the events of those two days at the root of the end that's to come.

For, when Dizzy Dean was knocked out by Burgess Whitehead of the Giants in Saturday's game with the Giants, it took from the Cards the one man who has done more than any other to keep them up in the race. Take Dizzy away—and he'll be out for at least a week—and the Cardinal pitching staff is crippled to a degree.

Then, too, if things weren't bad enough, the daffy and doubt Dodgers picked this same week-end to get tough. They met the Cards in Brooklyn and administered a double setback, coming out a doubleheader win, 6-3 and 11-4, and thus knocked the Cards one game out of the league leadership.

Lead Only Half Game

With the fast-climbing Chicago Cubs breaking even with the Giants, winning a doubleheader opener 4-2 and then dropping the nightcap, 5-4 on the strength of a seven-run, second-inning New York rally, the Brooklyn double trouncing of the Cards skipped the St. Louis lead a half a game. At this mind, at a time when Dean, the one dependable St. Louis pitcher, is out of the lineup with a brain concussion.

Meantime, the Phillies were another cheaper in the sudden collapse of the Cincinnati Reds, Joe Bowman pitching a one-hitter, 4-0 shutout in the opener of a twin bill, enabling the Phillies to break a six game losing streak with the strength of a seven-run, second-inning New York rally, the Dodgers'

The Missing Man

by

Mary R. P. Hatch

"Perhaps not."

"But that fixed it in your mind."

That recalled it, sir."

"When do you usually make your trips, Mr. Barnstead?"

"I have no regular time."

"This time you went on Friday."

"Yes, sir."

"What date?"

"The fifteenth of May."

"How do you know?"

"I knew by my remembrances of the day and by my diary."

"Do you note the time of your trips in your diary?"

"Yes, sir."

"Does produce the book, if you have ? about you."

Mr. Barnstead took it from his pocket and handed it to the defendant's counsel, who, however, did not take it.

"No, read it yourself," Mr. Barnstead did so.

"Started for Bethel. Waited in Portland depot for Hurd. We went together."

"How, Mr. Barnstead, turn, if you please, to the following Thursday. What did you do that day?"

"Waited in Portland depot for Hurd a good hour. D—— late him for lack of punctuality," read Barnstead.

"Now, which of these dates was the one when you saw the men meet?"

"The first."

"The first."

"What makes you think so?"

"I do not think so; I am sure of it."

"Were you and Hurd go?"

"I went to Machias—Falls."

"What did you do then?"

"Took orders for goods?"

"Together?"

"Yes. He for his firm, I for mine."

"Did you stay all night?"

"Yes."

"Did you drink?"

"Yes, not a glass or two."

"Did you not drink more than a glass or two. Did you not drink better a dozen?"

"Perhaps."

"In short, were you not considerably worse for what you drank, so much so that you had to stay in bed a day or two?"

"I did."

"Wasn't your head in a confounded muddle, and didn't you tell Hurd so?"

"I presume so."

"Could you swear to any event that took place within a week or two of that time?"

"I can swear I went to Bethel and to Machanic Falls."

"Yes, that is in your note-book. Did you speak of meeting the witness, or seeing them meet, to your friend that week?"

"I don't recollect."

"He says you didn't. Did you talk it over the next Thursday when you dined together?"

"I think we did."

"Wasn't it the first time you spoke of it to him?"

"Yes, sir."

"You told it all over to him then?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you suppose you told it ever to him before?"

"You say that he says I did not."

"You don't recollect."

"No."

"Did you not tell it to him exactly as if it had happened that day, with all the details?"

"I think I did."

"Would you be likely to tell it in that way if it had not just happened?"

"In what way?"

"As if it was news."

"I don't recollect saying that it was news."

"Could you swear that it was not Thursday you first saw them meet?"

"No, I couldn't; but I think it was the Friday before."

Mr. Barnstead, slightly flushed and irate, left the witness-stand.

The deposition of Hannah Sargent was next read, which was in substance the same as mentioned by Mr. Morley in his opening address. By this it appeared evident that the main reason for believing the stolen child to have died rested with the anonymous letter written by her hand, from kindly motives, to the bereaved mother. The writing stated that, so far as the nurse knew, there was no especial reason for believing the child to have died except his long detention and lack of knowledge regarding his abduction.

Mrs. Hamilton's testimony came next, and was given in a graceful, though shrinking manner. She related the various tests to which she had subjected the five claimants at various times, and said that both had responded readily, but that the defendant invariably hesitated for a moment before replying, but that the plaintiff did not.

The judge at this juncture proposed that an adjournment to some test in the presence of the jury, if there was any point which remained unsettled in her own mind.

"There is one," said Mrs. Hamilton.

"Is it of a nature to be conclusive?" he asked.

"I think it is. It is something that I do not know myself, but that my husband does."

"Please state it."

"I wish to know the whereabouts of a small diamond button, or stud, that he gave me. It was his master's, and I told him I was afraid I should lose it if I wore it. He laughed, and said he would take care of it for me, and he did. I never asked to know where he kept it, and he never told me."

"I was suspicious that a wrong answer might be given, for, don't you perceive, sir, that I could not tell whether he answered correctly, not knowing myself?"

"One claimant may be taken into the next room while the other one answers," said the judge. The plaintiff, as the first party, may remain and answer first."

There was a decided stir in the court-room at the proposition, so out of the usual course, it was like a reminiscence of Eastern jurisdiction, and as the defendant arose and walked into the small office adjoining the court-room, yet beyond hearing, the audience hardly breathed, so deep was the feeling in expectation of something unusual about to take place.

But the answer was commonplace enough.

"I took it to the bank," said the plaintiff.

"For what purpose was the button used?"

"In what part of the bank did you keep it?"

"In a small drawer of the safe."

"Is it there now?"

"I don't know. I had forgotten the matter entirely till now."

THE TEST

A stillness as tense as to be almost painful succeeded the plaintiff's words, and the summons to appear the defendant while the plaintiff passed him on his way to the seclusion of the office.

Mr. Hamilton, for such he was, undoubtedly, whether the true or false claimant, was deeply moved, as was apparent to all when he stood in the witness-box before them all. His face was pallid, his eyes were gleaming, his hands were tightly clenched.

All glances were riveted upon him with astonishment as he said in a strange tone, not waiting to be questioned at all:

"I will go to get it. I will go to get it."

Twice he said it, and then stood looking at vacancy rather than at the judge.

The county looked at each other, the jurymen at the judge. There were several seconds of waiting.

Has the learned counsel for the plaintiff no objection?" asked Mr. Ferguson.

"None, whatever," replied Mr. Morley, criply: "if His Honor is willing, the prosecution has no objection."

A moment's reflection, and the judge directed that the counsel for both parties and the jurymen attend the defendant to his dwelling, if not too distant, and see the search take place. Meanwhile the court would adjourn until one o'clock. And His Honor went to dinner. The sheriff followed the thirteen, who filed down the street toward the bank building, no doubt the place to which the defendant was leading them. Tall, erect, impassive, he passed on in a dream, never hesitating, never looking, neither looking to the right nor to the left.

He led them to the bank and up the steps. Pushing open the door, Mr. Morley explained their errand to the cashier.

"It is in the vault, the safe, the small drawer," said the defendant, and the cashier successively opened each receptacle except the drawer.

"I have no key to that," he said. "I have never been able to find it. The directors told me nothing was ever kept in it, because it was not accounted a safe receptacle, being poorly constructed."

At this moment Tony Osborn came forward with a key. "I found it not long ago," he explained, "under the corner of the safe."

"It may be," said Mr. Morley, but the cashier handed it to the defendant who inserted it in the lock.

The jurymen crowded forward to see what was in the drawer. Nothing, evidently, but a piece of tissue paper—unless that paper contained the diamond stud.

It did.

A flash, a gleam, and the defendant thrust it into the hands of Mr. Morley, instead of his own counsel's.

"For my wife. Give to to her," and then he fell prone on the floor.

Had he fainted? Was it a fit? The doctor was called and pronounced it the last, but he soon revived and was in a short time apparently as well as ever. He attended the afternoon session of court, and was the centre of curious in-

When the cannibal warriors leaped out from ambush, Doc and Jerry fought with their clubs. Doc who first recovered his wits.

"Ya!" answered Dick as he turned to his two black comrades and asked: "Will you fight with us?"

"Shall we fight?" "Will you fight with us?"

"It isn't capture us, we die," Ukundo replied: "If we fight we die. All same die; but nicer to die by arrow as cooking pot." The giant Bulah nodded agreement, and now the brave little company of four prepared for battle against the three score Bagalla warriors.

Doc fitted an arrow to his bow and shot it at the oncoming blacks, but, sped by a hand that knew only described a graceful curve and struck upright in the ground a few feet from the boy's feet. The warriors shouted in derision and rushed forward.

Then Dick shot, but the string slipped from the notch in the end of the arrow and when he released the missile, it fell at his feet. It was a foregone conclusion that the three white boys and their loyal African comrades could not long resist the cannibals!

"I did not know then that there were two who looked alike."

"Think now that it was the defendant who went there on an evil errand of his own."

"I think it was he who placed the button on the safe, the cap by the river-bank, and presented the altered notes."

"Please confine yourself to facts, not theories, Mr. Osborn," said Mr. Ferguson, "unless you have facts to support your thoughts."

"Mr. Osborn," said Mr. Morley, "have you any reason for believing that the claimant is not the true Vans Hamilton?"

"None, sir, except the color of his hair. He has stood every test I have applied to him. His knows all about the affairs that took place at the bank when he was there together; he seems to be the true Van Hamilton as I knew him."

Osborn then gave several instances of tests which he had applied, all of which, the claimant had passed in a satisfactory manner.

Two witnesses testified that Solomon Marks had been seen by them near the mill on the day before the shooting of the plaintiff, and that it appeared to wish to avoid recognition.

Charge Unemployed Set Forests Ablaze In Order to Get Jobs As Firefighters

Forests of northern Ontario are reported to be dry as tinder, easily ignited by a careless cigarette butt. The picture of devastation shown ABOVE is still raging at Geraldtown, in the Lake Abitibi-Cochrane-Little Long Lac district, although forest rangers report that fire is now under control. The lives of more than 200 people were imperilled by this blaze, which was started by a burning cigarette, according to rangers. Property reached #2 and #3 in the path of the flames. Sudbury—July 12.—Thousands of dollars of small timber burned before incendiary fires last summer and the Ontario department of forests is now seeking ways and means to curb incendiarism in northern Ontario's forests.

Although few cases were taken to court, most of the incendiary fires were blamed on relief recipients seeking to supplement their relief earnings by regular fire-fighting wages paid through the department of forests. It was the pinch last year, whenever possible, to employ relief labor in combatting fires, with the result that relief recipients were enabled to notably increase their spending power.

Limited road work in the northern part of the province left the relief recipients without employment, although they received their regular monthly allowances. As a result they had the time to turn to fire-fighting.

Cut Off Cash Payment

But in their enthusiasm, forestry officials charge, they began setting the bush ablaze in order to increase their earnings. Now the department is considering a plan whereby fire-fighting work will be put into the same category as relief work and relief recipients will work out their relief combatting fires.

Fire-fighters receive 15 cents per hour when they are boarded and camped on the job, when they supply their own food. At this rate relief recipients were enjoying considerable increase in spending power.

Under this new plan, increased fires will mean no additional earning power but considerably increased labor, and consequently is expected to discourage those who would burn the forests for a few extra dollars.

Not only have relief recipients come under suspicion, but youths of school age have stumbled under the finger of suspicion, forestry officials alleging that they seek to increase their pocket allowances by fire-fighting. And if there aren't fires to fight, it is alleged they are prepared to start them.

Possibility that a system of employment will be introduced in an effort to nail the worst offenders is indicated, but whether the plan will come to fruition is a question that is under before the department. In any event serious efforts are being made to cover the fire losses through incendiarism.

She was badly burned nearly two-thirds of her body before she could be put out by the flames. The party had been camping one week, when the accident occurred.

they hope to have clear of debt with the day's proceeds. A newdais road was built from the hall through the shady maple grove on the farm of Mr. Percy Mumby and this grove provided beautiful shade from the blazing sun and made an ideal setting for the celebration of Central Hastings.

A large number of booths were erected and all did a rushing business in cooling drinks and ice cream, as the temperature was exceedingly high.

Provincial Constable Percy Gray of Marmora was on the scene and capably directed the traffic for the day and even with so large a gathering of cars and people everything went of orderly, largely due to the able management and to careful planning of every detail by the Springbrook members.

Master Unable to Attend

It was regretted that Mr. Wm. Stiles, master of Springbrook lodge, was unable to be present owing to the critical illness of his wife in Chatham Hospital, but his efficient committees carried everything thru successfully.

The ladies of Springbrook assisted by the wives of the Wellman's Lodge members catered to over fifteen hundred people who thoroughly enjoyed a delicious hot dinner in the United Church sheds, and three sittings were necessary in order that all who visited might be fed. A large number enjoyed a basket picnic in the grove while many more arrived early after dinner.

700 in Parade

At 2 p.m. the parade which took in the route of an hour to pass with about seven hundred Orangemen walking to the music of a large number of bands, formed in line in the Grove and paraded through the main streets.

The assembly was led by the Stirling Band, followed by Mr. Bryson Bush, the Representing Springbrook Lodge and Mr. Francis Jeffery, District Director, who were mounted on capable grays.

Lodges in Line

The following lodges marched in the order named and representatively as well as the ground from different other lodges who did not parade as a unit.

Allen Settlement L.O.L. 363.

Hinton L.O.L. 907.

Sulphide L.O.L. 322.

The Springbrook members were so busy entertaining that they thought it best to postpone the race in pleasure of marching.

Four Lady Lodges Walk

The four other lady lodges, Senlilac, Eldorado, Stirling and Premier walked the whole line of march and stood up splendidly despite the intense heat.

Some of the veteran Orangemen to be seen about the grounds were: Mr. H. A. Rollins, member of Allan's Settlement, No. 253, who has been honored as Past County Master of Central Hastings. Tanner Lodge 509 boasted two honoured members, who are crawling along in years, Messrs Warren Reid and William Hagerman. Mr. William McKechnie of Queensboro lodge walked with his lodge although he now resides at Mount Pleasant.

New Lodges

Wellman's L.O.L. 172 also were represented by two active Orangemen, Mr. Albert Fluhle and Mr. Theodore Reid. The members of Wellman's Lodge were resplendent with lovely new badges with 1832-1936 worked on them.

During the afternoon a ball game was staged between Sidney, Rawdon and Remmington and the winners played the final game in the evening with Sidney winning 12-13.

Mr. Sam Doxman, West Huntingdon, County Master and Mr. Hoeller Johnson, Tweed, who is District Master, were both present and were kept busy throughout the day.

Stirling Citizen Band in red basks were present and they delighted with several numbers in the forenoon and furnished suitable music during the program.

Mr. George Bailey, Springbrook, was the capable chairman and hundreds of people stood around the platform and seats while the speakers gave their messages.

Mr. Lorne Bateman, in the absence of Mr. Wm. Stiles, read a letter from Mr. Ernest P. Reid, Peterboro, who is Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario East.

The letter dealt at length with the recent legislation passed in the Ontario Legislature dealing with the Separate School question.

Pleasing Celebrations

Mr. W. Ernest Tummon of Tweed, past Grand Master and ex-M.P., extended congratulations to the hostess lodge at Springbrook for their splendid preparations to entertain so large a gathering.

He spoke of the pioneer celebrations in by-gone days and said for over seventy years the people of Ontario have been loyal to British institutions.

Mr. Tummon referred to the letter regarding Separate Schools and briefly told how these schools came to be established in Ontario.

In closing he challenged every man who had let his membership slide in the Orange Order to renew it at once before another week passed. Every Protestant should be as a faithful member of the cause.

Mr. Tummon, Mr. Sidney, a past County Master, referred to "The Battle of the Boyne" and urged that the principles for which it was fought into practice "Equal rights—to all and special privileges to none."

Greater Goal is Challenge

Mr. W. J. Cottrell, past County Master and present chaplain, said all the slogan of the Orange Order is "Whatsoever ye would be and on to a greater goal" and the Orange Association should not be content simply to go round and round, but rather press forward also at a higher and greater service so that the principles in general shall fulfil its place throughout the British Empire.

He said Central Hastings is third greatest in number of Lodges in Ontario East. Mr. Cottrell is also a member of Springbrook L.O.L. and worked faithfully all day and hoped the day's proceeds would extinguish the debt of this society.

Public Schools

Rev. J. E. Beckel of Rawdon circuit said today the country is interested in a Great Cause. He spoke of the changes in the past twenty-five years and said today: "We have a kindly attitude to our Roman Catholic friends but we are fighting for greater Orange principles. Today, we have to have every child enjoy our public schools and the Bible taught in the schools are not religious institutions."

Rev. Mr. Price, Arthurdale, said 24 years ago King William crossed the Boyne and we are celebrating today the commemoration of that great event.

He said the Orange Order stood for Britain's judicial language, one official school, with British laws and institutions.

Canon Swayne Speaks

Canon W. H. Swayne, Bonarlaw, one of the oldest ministers in the order declared "we are celebrating Anglo-Saxon principles which the Battle of the Boyne established and confirmed in Old England for all time. We have that sense of liberty and equality which the Anglo-Saxon people must maintain it. We want equal rights for every one."

Rev. H. A. Revoy of Springbrook Circuit, heartily welcomed the guests and admonished the audience to attend their various church services on the morrow.

Several other clergy were called upon to speak but did not respond as the hour was late and they were —Rev. W. J. Scott, M.A., B.D., Rector of Trinity; Rev. A. H. Connell, Stirling, Anglican; Rev. J. A. Redford, St. Andrew's Church; Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth, Marmora.

The band rendered "The National Anthem" and then the various other fife and drum bands delighted with musical numbers.

The Springbrook ladies served a fifteen cent supper and over six hundred remained for the evening meal.

So another milestone is crossed and Springbrook is well be proud of their successful event.

JOHN BEALE OF TRENTON, HURT

Crashing headlong from the bicycle he was riding into an automobile driven by Everett Murphy when they met at a "blind" corner in Wellington, Ontario, early Saturday night, John Beale, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Beale, of Trenton, Ontario, suffered painful injuries, dislocating his wrist and receiving severe bruises and lacerations of the legs.

With the view of the intersecting road obscured by a high board fence, Beale rode toward the corner, totally unaware of the approaching automobile. They met at the corner and Murphy had no time to swerve his car to avoid the accident.

Beale was taken to the summer home of his grandmother, Mrs. Taylor, where he is recovering from his injuries. No blame was attached to Murphy.

Pop was smoking and thinking to himself and me was making problems of things sirsle and strate things crosked, saying, I wonder if that laundry man left muddy footprints on the hall carpet? I forgot to remind him to wipe his feet, and it was raining quite hard, O dear, she said.

If you didn't notice any footprints, 10 to eleven there weren't any to notice, pop said, and ma said, I hope so, I'm sure, but I'll never calm my peace of mind till I go down and see with my own beliering eyes.

O, take it easy, pop said. Don't believe every calamity that occurs to your imagination. If I told you the straw that I smell gas coming up from the kitchin, you'd be positive you smelt it too, he said, and ma said, I'd do nothing of the kind, I flatter myself I have my own nose to dictate to me what I smell.

Well that's very peculiar, because I actually do smell gas, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum dont say a thing like that even in a joke. You do you or dont you? she said.

Use your nose and take your choice, pop said, and ma said, I really believe I do detect a slite wif But my lands Willyum, you surely wouldn't have the criminal laziness to sit there and smell gas and do nothing sout it? she said.

My lips are sealed, you can use your own discretion, you admitted you had a nose, pop said, and ma said, Nobody could have such a low sense of humor as to claim they smelt gas out of a blue sky, but I've known Nora to be careless about the gas range before, she said.

And she smelt a couple of smells in the air with her nose up high, saying, I'm going down and look, not because I'm by nature nosyfriend, but it will give me a good opportunity to see if the laundry man axually did leave any marks.

And she went down, and there wasn't any gas or any footprints either, being relieved about the footprints but mad about the gas, pa.

COLORFUL PARADE IS WITNESSED BY LARGE CONCOURSE

1,500 IN PARADE

"Walk" Takes More Than Hour to Pass Given Point

Through gaily decorated streets, lined with cars and packed by a solid wall of humanity, 1,500 Orangemen marched on the "Dot-ous Twelfth" in this city on Monday, the parade being the largest and most colorful, the residents of this and surrounding district have witnessed in many years. Thirty eight lodges, from Frankford, Lennox and Addington, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Peterboro counties, headed by bands and accompanied by lodge officers present and practically all that started from the fairgrounds at 1.45 P.M. Mayhem Lodge, Frankford, apparently fresh and wishing that it had been a little longer. The route followed was from the fair grounds to Front Street by way of Bridge Street to Coleman Street, the Upper Bridge and thence to West Moira Street, where the thoroughfare to Coleman Street and thence by the shortest route to West Bridge Street and disbanded at the place of beginning. Immediately the parade was dismissed, with the singing of the National Anthem and three cheers for His Majesty King Edward VIII., the assembly gathered around the platform where the various speeches of the afternoon were delivered.

There were 1,500 marchers, which took nearly three hours to pass in an hour to pass a given point but in the grounds and along the line of march hundreds of Orangemen and women belonging to organizations of the Orange Order and Sisterhood, Sharing the bad all attempted the long march and those who did marchers would have been the result. The parade was formed up and marched under the capable direction of D. M. Farrell, Chief Director of Ceremonies, and Harry Cayen, Trenton, William Taylor, Trenton and Joseph Sidwell, Prince Edward County acting as marshals. There were too long waits between lodges on the march and the lodges moved with a quickness of step, that would have done credit to a company of militia.

A number of lodges merited special mention both for uniform and marching ability, but the palm must also should be singled out for the excellence of the music and their uniforms. Each lodge carried with their own fife and drum band but in the bands of organizations were equally distributed in the parade, which kept up the interest of the on-lookers during the whole parade.

An incident in the parade, that

Pigs are Good Music Critics

(By Howard W. Blakeslee (Associated Press Science Editor)

They uncurled their tails and walked around and round, waving them in fairly good time to the music. But when "the latest pop" was played, the pigs curled up their tails and walked out.

The experiment, directed by Dr. Howard W. Liddell, reveals the pig as an unusual animal, subject for testing at the physiological laboratory on which are based the scientific experiences of hearing and performing music.

These pigs not only uncurled and waved their tails at good musical rhythm, they also breathed in time to the music. Their breathing seemed to grow progressively shallower and shallower.

The pigs' music test was incidental to a study of nerve reactions which the physiologists have been conducting with animals for several years. The experiments show there is a sound basis for the musical appreciation of the pig.

HISTORY OF SCHOOLS

References Made to Recent Amendments to Assessment Act

That repeal of the Assessment Act relating to taxes is necessary to the well-being of Ontario was the gist of remarks heard by peopling thousands yesterday at the Fair Grounds, when addresses were delivered during the following the Orange parade.

Thousands Hear Addresses

Immediately following the return of the parade to the Fair Grounds, thousands of people thronged the grandstand and the immediate vicinity of a temporary platform, which had been erected, a loud-speaking system, supplied by the Stewart-Warner Company, broadcasted the addresses.

Following the invocation by the Rev. Dr. Owen, Mayor Harry Ellis extended a cordial invitation to the visitors. Mayor Ellis has been mayor in Belleville for twenty-two years, His Worship said, "and I have never had a better time than on this day I saw today. The city is yours and I hope you will take advantage of it. We extend to you a cordial welcome and hope that you will enjoy your stay with us."

James Bell, M.P.P., for East Hastings, Ont., was the first chairman, said in his introductory remarks he would briefly to the school, for there

Child Leads Them

"I would like to supplement the remarks made by a former speaker," said Mr. H. B. Petterly. "This grand parade is a witness of today reminded me of a poem from that great book the Bible, 'And a little child shall lead them'; a little child led veterans of 90, 67, 56 and 39 to victory. We have been members of the order for over seventy years. A Act of 1861 was passed allowing Roman Catholics the right to have Separate Schools. Every one knows how that right was abused to no other organization than that of having been paid to support the Separate Schools." concluded Mr. Bell.

But when the act of 1863 was incorporated the hierarchy said the act was not good enough and demanded further concessions which were granted."

Estimate is Made

"While it is difficult to obtain exact figures a fair estimate is that to Belleville, over two thousand dollars will be paid in the public funds to separate schools," said Mr. Petterly.

"I therefore urge everyone not to overlook these conditions to study them. The only remedy is studying and going after these matters in the Orange lodge and I suggest that you link yourselves with it and see that proper representatives are sent to the different legislators who will see that no further discrimination is practiced."

"I'm glad," said Mr. W. H. Ireland, ex-M.P.P., "and proud to be Seen and Heard During Orange Walk

Furveying to the wants of thirsty watchers along the route of march yesterday was an ambitious young business man in the person of seven-year-old John Gess.

In a miniature refreshment booth erected on the lawn of his home the youngster surrounded by a battery of admiring children, said ice tea, at three cents the glass or if you preferred lemonade, John's price was five cents the glass.

Twirling drumsticks in the white-gauntlined hands of drummers of the Kingston Fife and Drum Band drew the admiration of the crowd outside the Fair Grounds gates. Whirling and twirling in efficient fashion, the drummers exhibited their drumstick calisthenics in a manner which bespoke long practice.

So intense was the heat near the Fair Ground's gates that tar on the road surface was reduced to a sticky substance, much to the annoyance of an attractive young lady who inadvertently stepped out of her chair to shoo to place a dainty foot in the gooey mass.

Tall and dashing-looking members of Mohawk Lodge No. 49 elicited applause from spectators with their well appointed uniforms and their straight carriage as they marched by.

Breaks Record for 48 Hours of Driving

Bonnerville, Utah, July 14—Joe Eyston broke the world's record for 48 hours of continuous driving.

He gained more than 1,000 miles. Both times and distance remained unofficial until A.A.A. officials pending final checking.

The Englishman, who started his record run Sunday at 12.01 a.m. Pacific Standard Time, shattered a dozen or more official international records for various distances on the 48 hour run, Sunday-Monday.

He set his new marks on a 10-mile circular course within sight of the Bonneville salt flats speedway on which his countryman, Sir Malcolm Campbell, last year tore up the all-time measured mile record of 301 m.p.h.

Eyston, alternating at the wheel with his relief driver, Bert Denly, of Hollywood, Calif., piloted a record with a 12-cylinder airplane motor streamlined car.

The car is streamlined with a stabbing fin at the rear. The driver sits low under a sliding hood which may be pulled open if desired.

SHIP OF SUPPLY GOES TO ARCTIC

10,000 Mile Journey by Nascopie is Begun

Montreal, July 14 (CP) — The northern-bound ship of supply, the battered old steamer Nascopie, slid out of Montreal today on her yearly, circle of 10,000 miles of Arctic.

Bearing necessities for the men and women of Canada's outposts, the Hudson's Bay Company's veteran of the trade lanes drew from harbor to a symphony of shrieking whistles and sirens as harbor craft gave her a rousing send-off.

Bunting fluttered from every line on the ship and the crew mustered and mowed a crowded parade of colors at the stern. The coats of Northwest Mounted Policemen mingled with the gaiety of women passenger's summer frocks. The marines blew her away of the crew.

The salesman arrived armed with a bulky portfolio, the salesman said he represented a New York concern which guaranteed that "we brought no money".

The salesman wanted to sell his "rain producer" to the municipality and suggested which the farmers of the township be called together for a sales talk.

"How long will it take to produce rain?" asked the Reve.

"Two days or two weeks," was the answer.

"We'll have it by then or it will be no use," returned the Reve.

"Why didn't you sell it to the farmers of New York State?" inquired the agricultural representative.

"He wanted to make more money," replied the salesman.

"Pulling the leg of the farmers of Brantford Township for salmon-ers", said Mr. Stanley.

Sunderland, Corbyville, ran out of control, jumped the curb and crashed into a tree on Dundas street East, late last night. Mr. Sunderland was proceeding easterly on Dundas Street at a moderate rate of speed when the ashes from his cigarette suddenly blew into his eye, dimmed from the sudden pain, Mr. Sunderland, he informed police, instinctively raised his hands to protect his eyes and relieve the pain and in so doing the car got out of control. LITTLE "GREENIES" CAN'T TAKE IT

The water in the bay and harbor has become so warm during the past week of parching heat that even the frogs can't take it, it is reported by an observer. Hundreds of "greenies" nightly desert the tepid water exchange in the shore walls of the harbor to spend the night in the thick green grass of Victoria Park, much to the consternation of park visitors and campers-out, who have been using the park's free bathing quarters since the beginning of the heat wave.

P. E. COUNTY HARD HIT BY DROUGHT

According to the weekly report issued by the Minister of Agriculture this week, Prince Edward County has been one of the worst affected areas of the Province as the result of the long period of drought and heat wave. Crops have been affected very seriously by the drought. Hundreds of acres of the many instances farmers are feeding hay or silage. Milk production has been cut in half. Practically all crops are withering. If spring grain is to amount to anything, rain must come within a day or so to save the situation. Most of the corn, Raspberries are also about finished, states the report.

Hastings County has not been so seriously affected, although rain and plenty of it is necessary to save pasture and field crops of all varieties. In fact, the county is still providing sufficient forage for stock, although in certain areas pasture is very short.

BATHING BEACH PROJECT STARTS, PLANS ARE LAID

Strong Executive Named to Begin Immediate Work

R. MONCRIEFF PRES.

Fifteen public spirited citizens, leaders of various phases of local activ ic endeavor met in this city last evening to launch the first active move toward immediate construction of a civic bathing beach and ultimate development of the waterfront south of the city.

The move was decided upon following what was declared by those present to be an apparent lapse of interest in the project which had been discussed time and again by various local service organizations, and for which a committee was named some time ago to make a complete survey and report of the scheme. This, it was declared, had not been done.

The meeting, held in the office of Mr. G. A. Freeman, general manager of the Stephens-Adamson Manufacturing Company of local ic tured by the election of officers, which named Mr. Reg. Moncrieff, president; Mark Fenwick, secretary-treasurer of the Belleville Sargent and Co. Ltd., vice-president and Geo. Finch, first vice-president.

Committee Empowered

The executive committee charged with authority to prepare the first plans for action consists of Jack H. Martin, manager of the Frontenac Paper Box Company; G. A. Freeman; D. R. Thomson (engineer); Maurice Callaghan; W. B. Deacon, president of the Deacon Shirt Company; Harry Smith and Timothy Sullivan. The meeting and election of officers was presided over by Mr. Reg Moncrieff.

Highly optimistic over the scheme now that the first concrete action has been launched, President Moncrieff today pointed to the pressing need of the oft-mooted beach.

"The first thing we've got to do now is to start a public subscription fund. If anyone wants to contribute to this we'll be glad to receive any contribution, no matter how small, and make suitable recognition for the gift. This will be about our first move.

"As far as work on the scheme goes, the move is to clean up this location in the bay, situated between the General Hospital and the Stephens Adamson plant—possibly the best site in the whole bay for the beach. During the past week or so I've taken it upon myself to do some of the work in this direction, with the aid of several youths of the city who have helped me and the weeds and some debris

Construction at Safe

"Our next step will be the construction of some rafts, bath houses where clothing can be changed, and the boat of all sorts, and other play equipment for the smallest children.

"For those who do not know that location, it might be pointed out that very little work will be needed to put that beach into condition. We do need sand for the beach proper, but we already have a sandy bottom with a perfect, natural breakwater there which will make it safe for even the smallest children. Good swimmers can step outside the bar which makes the breakwater, while those less experienced and the children can paddle around in the few feet of water inside it. There is some 150 feet or more out from the shore on a natural sandy bottom in perfect safety even if there is a swift, pointed out president Moncrieff.

Tree Along Shore

"Trees will be planted along the bay shore later, providing a cool shade for those using said picnicking. A good road can be laid out by the city engineers and cars will be able to drive right up to the beach. There isn't another safe place along the city where this can be done.

"For hear some of the residents remark that the beach would cost thousands. Nothing of the sort. A few hundreds for a start would go a long way toward creating a perfect beach there. Remember, we're not building for ourselves alone, but for posterity, for the generations to come. Now is the chance for some of the public spirited citizens to get together and push the thing along. We can't do it alone."

Following the meeting last evening an inspection was made of the waterfront at the location named by the members present.

an Orangeman.".

Repeal is Urged

Rev. F. Beecar in strong verbal support of the repeal of the Assessment Act charges and of the Orange Order said: "In not the time ripe for the Dominion to consolidate?"

Public School

"And the first piece of legislature which should be passed is the abolishment of separate schools for separate schools which have no right to exist since they have full right to the public public schools for children of all denominations. That time is coming rapidly when you shall be called to action, and decide that our public schools shall be free, and that instead of the separate schools say they are to be supported by private patronage.

"And we ask you to vote when the next government comes in power that the principle of issue be wiped out of existence."

Orangeism And Open Bible

"The Orange Lodge was founded upon an open Bible," declared the Rev. I. B. Taylor, stressing the principles of the Orange Order. A working of the Orange Order was examined and described an Orange celebration in Kingston during the dark days of 1914-18.

"To come back to the present," he declared, "I am sure the day will soon come when the Assessment Act will be repealed and that the Public Schools will receive the support of not only the public but of the Roman Catholics."

New Spirit Seen

"I detected today in the splendid parade," declared Mr. W. R. Tunnison, "that there is a new spirit which has been noticeably absent in the parades of the past few years. It is a spirit of unity and harmony. It was such that I believe that no parades in the future will ever be held with such enthusiasm as there on Saturday and Monday."

"We are the important question of Separate School maintenance which was when the saying was passing through a difficult period?" queried the speaker. "For over 70 years the Separate Schools have lived in loyalty to the act of 1872."

"Now, I am not going to say that a better way to have taken in connection with the school tax question, but I do say that we have the case through the courts. "We have secured a decision of the courts," he said, "and had this proceeding been taken there would not have been any murmur from the people."

He urged repeal of the Assessment Act amendment relating to school grants, declaring that a referendum on the question: "Are you or are you not in favor or Separate Schools?" that the vote of 1934 would never yet voted on this matter.

Grand Master's Address

The address of the Grand Master, of Ontario East, R. P. Reid, who was unable to attend the meeting, Mr. Clarke, declared Orangeism had been the mainstay on behalf of the public schools of Ontario. "And in fighting for the rights of the majority we have also been fighting for the rights of the minority for we are not asking for separate schools for public school supporters of this province that we are not willing to grant to those who differ from us because of religious beliefs."

The Grand Master referred to the amendment of the Assessment Act referring to school tax apportionment, and declared that in fairness any corporation covered by section 44 should be taxed for Roman Catholic and Separate School supporter shall require, by notice in writing, that all shares or interests held by him, in this and any succeeding year, assessed against the corporation shall be deemed to be shares or or membership in the capital corporation, and the director of said corporation shall notify the clerk of the municipality that a per centum of the school assessments, according to the number of shares so held by him, shall be assessed and rated for Roman Catholic Separate School purposes, and the directors may or may not accept any notice as given. But now it is compulsory under section 33B.

Ratio Of Taxes

"A corporation having share capital of which more than one-half of the shares is owned by one other corporation or corporations, the head office of which is not in the province, by such other or corporation, which by reason of paragraph 1 of section 44 of this act or members and the wide distribution in point of residence of such shareholders it is impossible for them to ascertain which of its shareholders, if any, are Roman Catholic and Separate School supporters or the ratio which the number of shares or membership held by Roman Catholics. If any, who are Separate School supporters, bears to all the shares issued by or membership of the corporation, shall require by notice to the clerk of the municipality in or for which a separate school exists, that the land, business and income liable for taxation for school purposes, in respect to which such corporation is assessed within the municipality or school section in or for which the said Separate School exists, be assessed, assessed and rated for school purposes, as provided as follows: The whole of the assessments of a corporation, governed by this section, in a municipality or school section in or for which a separate school exists, shall be divided for the purposes of taxation between public and separate schools in the same ratio as the total assessments of all the rateable property in such municipality or school section assessed according to the last revised assessment roll to persons who are supporters of the Public Schools and Separate School Supporters."

The grandmaster pointed out that according to section XIII it was not necessary for any corporation to have one dollar's worth of stock held by a separate school supporter. Yet the corporation must pay according to the proportion of Public and Separate School assessments in any municipality.

Repeal Advocated

While there is money involved Grand Master, the Orange Order is more concerned with the principle involved. His address:

"The task of the Orange Association and the Orange Order supporters of this province is to secure at the earliest opportunity, the repeal of this iniquitous law. Until we are pledging ourselves to do everything in make that repeal possible. It is not necessary for me to tell you that the Orange Association is not alone in this fight as Synods, conferences, assemblies, etc., of all Protestant denominations not only protested against this fiendish piece of legislation, but by production and passing or the bill, have continued to protest against its passage and I am pleased to say that we are all one for repeal."

Religious Teaching in the School

The Grand Master referred to the agitation in certain quarters for the teaching of religion in the public schools of Ontario. "The Orange Order has always taken the stand that the teaching of religion should not be substituted by the state and the law as it exists at present, is sufficient if amendments be made use of.

"Further that religion would be taught?" he asked. "Would it be the Roman Catholic, Anglican, Presbyterian, Baptist, or some other denomination? Remember there are many Roman Catholics attending public schools in this province and they certainly would not, and certainly not approve or public school teachers instructing in their children. I agree, many of our teachers are qualified to teach religion, but I am very much of the opinion that our children receive their early religious education in the homes and Sunday schools of the various faiths."

The singing of the National Anthem brought the speeches to a close, and the crowd turned its attention to a baseball game being played on the Fair Grounds diamond.

POLICE COURT

Stolen from its parking place at the corner of Bridge and Bleecker, a truck, the property of the Montrose Dairy, was recovered in Trenton this morning by the Chief of Police. Three nursing sisters from Belleville who were together during their years of overseas service will leave this part in the near future and revisit the scenes which they vividly remember. They are Misses Hattie Mastin of this city, Stella Jenkins and Grace Waters of Utica, N.Y.

COLORFUL PARADE

was worthy of note was the inclusion in the parade of the funeral cortege of a departed brother. The funeral of Charles R. Boyle, joined the parade as Moodie St., and Bridge Street west, and proceeded as part of it to the corner of Bridge Street and Front Road, Belleville cemetery, where interment was made.

Chief Flag Bearer

Charles Casselman, member of Benjamin Lodge No. 774, under whose auspices the parade was conducted was the chief flag-bearer and following were two cars containing some of the oldest members in years of membership. In a car driven by George A. Reid rode Thomas Sullivan of this city a member of the order for 66 years, while in a car driven by R. B. Pelley were Isaac Barlow a member for 64 years, Wm. Reid for 63 years and nearly 87 years of age, R. Alford a member for 59 years and just approaching the ninety mark. In the line of march were many with fifty years or more of membership behind them and the youngest with their badges of merit for nearly three miles to the Cemetery. In fact some of the older members stood the test better than their younger brethren.

Weather conditions could not have been better, the cool, refreshing mercury hovered in the high eighties, a strong breeze blew out of the northeast and practically during the whole time the march was in progress, the sun was obscured by friendly clouds. There was no report of any fainting spells and were many noticed dropping out. The step was not as quick towards the end as at the beginning, which was only natural but all marched with a steady swing, marched behind the colors and displayed the spirit which has been preserved through the centuries. Delightful shade was rendered from limbers of trees and from the main grandstand being filled to capacity long before the address began.

Kingston Band Leads

Kingston Fife and Drum Band of 30 pieces with the normal strength of 45, dressed in natty uniforms with flowing capes over the shoulders led the parade. Next in order of the parade and then followed the lodge of Jerry L.O.B.A. Lodge of Kingston, the women members appearing in pure white with orange umbrellas. Then came the Kingston Fife and Drum Band of Kingston and the lodge of Kingston with spectators as 32 members paraded directly in front of them with orange sashes. Then followed the band of the Johnstone Kilties, Stirling Brass Band, Stirling Fife and Drum Band of Trenton, 34 strong and then the lodge of Trenton under the direction of Jamie Clarke and Jack Hall. Then came lodges of Shannonville Orange Lodge and Frankford No. 940 appeared to be the largest contingent in the parade but there was no prize given for the largest.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS JOIN FOR SESSION

Sunday morning Rednerseville Sunday School visited Albury Sunday School and Park at Albury but attendance was set when one hundred and thirty members were present.

Mr. Bernard Redner and Mr. Roy Redner motored to Albury in the combined school. The regular form was followed and during the meeting little Miss Joan Redner rendered sang a duet.

Immediately after the class period Yvonne Bowerman and her sister Mr. Jean Bowerman and Mr. Douglas Hough of Toronto rendered an inspiring piano solo. The attendance was splendid and showed success and sometime in the near future the school may be invited to pay a return visit to Redners Grove. We hope the attendance increases as rapidly as it has in the past.

Mr. J. A. Hough and family spent the week end at their cottage on the Bay of Quinte.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. G. Thompson spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hitchings.

The heat has been unbearable the last few days and the hay fields are fast drying up. Rain is needed badly. A thunderstorm with a welcome rain fell Saturday morning but was not heavy enough to give any relief to the parched lands.

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon except Sunday and holidays and printed by The Ontario Intelligencer Building Print Shop, Belleville.

THE PLACE OF THE WEATHER

Canada's names became involved with the weather record during the heat spell, some of the places belying their names entirely. At Ice Lake on Sunday the mercury registered 104.

Even at sundown (Manitoba) the mercury reached 104. Those who live in Utopia, Ont., had to be content with 94 but Garden of Eden, N.S. was more pleasant with 69. Allumetta (Match) Island in Quebec, struck a happy medium with 78. Kettle Rapids, Man., boiled at 104 but Frost Village, Que., did better at only 84 and breeze, Sask., was even cooler with 82.

Asbestos, Que., kept cool at 76 but other places that failed to live up to their names were: Coldwater and Balmy Beach in Ontario, with 94 and 92 respectively; and Glacier, B.C., with 82. Zephyr, Ont., was anything but refreshing at 94. Airy in Northern Ontario registered 90.

NATIONAL ANTHEM

The singing at recent meetings of "O Canada" which all can hum but of which so few know the words prompts the Sudbury Star to say that this national hymn will never become popular. The Woodstock Sentinel Review says if the song is ever to be generally used at the conclusion of a program it will have to be after the people have learned the verse.

The similar situation is seen in Belleville. How very few outside of the members of the Women's Canadian Club know the words! The Sentinel Review says there is no reason that the people should learn one or more of the dozen different versions of "O Canada" unless they so desire.

There was once a time every boy and girl in Belleville knew "The Maple Leaf". That was when they were taught the words in school. "O Canada" might be learned if there was a decision as to the version to be used and the aid of the school teachers was called in to popularize "O Canada".

Who knows whether "O Canada" will become popular. The difference of versions no doubt is a handicap.

But everyone as the Sentinel Review remarks knows "God Save the King". The people can be depended upon to sing this anthem when it is called for.

WASTE RECEPTACLES ON STREETS

Receptacles for small bits of waste paper on the main streets have been suggested as advisable by a citizen, who notes the large amount of small bits of paper which are thrown into the gutter. In summer time the needs of such a handy receptacle here and there is felt. In winter the need is not so great naturally because snow and ice keep paper from flying about with the wind.

The Parks Board provides baskets for the parks so that the latter may not be littered with discarded greasy papers. The parks commissioners find the use of baskets very helpful in maintaining cleanliness in the parks.

The same would probably work out successfully on the streets.

But if they were provided, these individuals who discard small empty packets must be taught to use them. Today it seems so easy to throw away an empty package without the slightest care where it is going to fall. While there are times when individuals have small papers they want to throw away, they should not dispose of them in the manner in which many of them do. No one would think of throwing a bootbox into the street or a large piece of wrapping paper, but the little carton is thrown away as if it did not mean anything to the street's condition.

One has only to think of cigaret packets and wrappers off candy, littering the streets.

ANXIETY IN EUROPE

Europe has a new worry—the fear of a real rapprochement of Germany and Austria and whatever that may imply in a world which is newly arranging itself. Belatedness of Italy and Hungary to such an understanding is another interesting factor. A four nation bloc in Central Europe, cutting off the small powers in South East Europe and Britain and France in the west might be very threatening.

For the past year or more European political movements have been the disturber of peace of mind. And the world must just wait while the shifting goes on.

If all the misfortunes of mankind were cast into a public stock, in order to be equally distributed among the whole species, those who now think themselves the most unhappy would prefer the share they are already possessed of before that which would fall to them by such a division. —Socrates.

SERVICE

He entered Misery's rude abode,
Helped tottering Age across the road,

Led home a wandering child, and Watered a thirsty herd that lowed,—

Thus was his time beguiled.

But as the evening shadows crept
Across his day, this servant wept

To see so little done;
For much he vowed when he had stept

Forth with the morning sun.

Dark-hooded Night showed him to bed,
Pillowed his disappointed head—

Thus had his hopes expired,
When Peace, God's angel, softly said:

"Twas all that God required."

WILLIAM F. CODY FAMOUS THE WORLD OVER AS "BUFFALO BILL", departed this life some time ago and a huge rough boulder marks his last resting place on the summit of Mount Lookout, in Colorado, the western country he loved so well. "Buffalo Bill" is dead, but like John Brown of Ossawatomy (or wherever it was) his spirit goes marching on. Just now Buffalo Bill is disturbing the folks behind the Texas Centennial. It was proposed to erect a statue to Buffalo Bill at the great World's Fair which Texas is presenting to the world in sections—one at Dallas, another at Fort Worth, each one claiming to be "The Big Top", with a number of Sideshows in various other places throughout the State. However, to get back to Buffalo Bill. When it was publicly suggested that in carrying out the spirit of giving the Texas Centennial a wild western flavor a statue should be erected of Buffalo Bill, the "bloody shirt" came waving out of retirement and the United Daughters of the Confederacy reared right up on their hind legs in holy horror, pointing out that Buffalo Bill was that heinous thing south of the Mason and Dixon line, "a Union Spy" during the war between the North and South. It was proposed to erect a duplicate of Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney's statue of the Civil War scout at Cody, Wyoming. Cody acted as army scout during the war and of course wore no uniform. The unreconstructed Rebs in Texas opine it would be a scandalous thing to put up a statue to "A Union Spy" at the Texas Centennial Exposition and nary a statue to General John B. Hood and General Albert Sidney Johnson, who did valiant duty for the Confederate cause on many bloody battle fields. So if Buffalo Bill comes to Texas during the Centennial he'd better come a-shootin'.

DOWN NICARAGUA WAY THERE IS A JOB OPEN FOR SOMEBODY, for the President of that turbulent little nation had just been fired from office, and took it on the lam, not lingering for any argument —in fact the ex-president was so anxious to leave the country quickly that he flew. General Anastasio Somoza, in command of the National Guard, trained by U. S. Marines, is in control, and will name the new president. Juan Bautista Sacasa, regularly elected president, spent six days on the top of a dead volcano where the presidential palace is situated, waiting for the storm to blow over, but he was told that he was through, so he flew to a nearby friendly country where he stated that it would be beneath his dignity to remain in Nicaragua and kick up a fuss. Somoza will now pick a presidential candidate and go through the motions of a general election to confirm him in office. The revolution cost sixteen lives, a new low record for that country.

FRANCE WENT SO FAR TO THE LEFT IN THE RECENT ELECTIONS that a mantle of communism has fallen over the country. The first symptons of a change due to a decided swing to the left was the startling fact that the desire to work left thousands, and strikes spread even to the ships in the harbors where the sailors demanded an eight-hour day and a chicken in every pot instead of "salt horse". Even the help in hotels quit work but refused to quit the hotels—they even refused to wait upon themselves. So far there has been no extreme violence for President Blum, himself a left winger, has given orders to the gendarmes not to hurt anybody. All men now being free and equal in France the question of who is to wash the hired man's feet is again an acute one.

A new crisis in European affairs is parcelled in the announcement from Vienna that Germany and Austria had patched up their difficulties and were now in accord. The announcement's significance, it is reported, lies in the apparent alliance of Hitler and Mussolini linking Germany, Italy, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria and Poland in compact with the additional possibility that France's strong ally, the Little Entente, will be broken if Rou-mania and Yugoslavia line up. This places France and Russia in a difficult spot. The situation was further accentuated when Mussolini ordered the 40,000 troops withdrawn from Libya in accordance with her agreement with Britain, to be sent to the French border. The map ABOVE shows the new European line-up.

DYNAMITE STOLEN FROM TALC MINE

Eight Boxes Missing And Police Investigate Theft

Provincial Police today are investigating the reported theft of eight boxes of dynamite from the property of the Canada Talc Mining Company at Madoc. The robbery was discovered recently by Mine Foreman A. Cowley and reported to Sergeant Harry Thompson and Constables Robinson and Kidd being dispatched to the mine today to investigate the robbery. The dynamite was Polar Extra No. 1 Gelatin dynamite and was kept in the mine magazine.

Inspector Frank Gardner, of the O.P.P. this afternoon stated the dynamite was removed from the magazine some time over the week-end and that access to the magazine had been made by the use of a key. The key to the magazine was kept in the compressor room and was reported missing yesterday by Compressman Gordon Reid. The key was still missing when the police arrived at the mine today. Marks in the ground were clearly distinguishable where the eight boxes of dynamite had been lifted over a rear fence on the Canada Talc property.

Previous complaints relative to the theft of explosives from the same properties have been received by the Provincial Police authorities on previous occasions. They object the robbers had in stealing dynamite could be ascertained, police today stated.

BERRIES COOKING ON THE BUSHES

Crop of Raspberries Will be Total Loss Unless Rain Falls

"We don't know what we shall do if rain does not come soon," stated a prominent Pickering farmer this morning, although he has a crop of pale looking raspberries, at one of the dullest midweek markets of the season.

"Our berries are cooking on the bushes and we shall be a total loss if we don't get much needed moisture. For with most of the fruit ripening to pick peas for the market and dry conditions soon actually cooking in the pods" he said.

Few vendors and as few purchasers combined to make a listless market in the sugary heat. Red cherries were in abundance, selling mostly at twenty-five cents the basket but vendors asked fifty cents the basket for the first but the prices dropped to forty cents later in the morning when a few vendors left. Sweet cherries were scarce and commanded seventy-five cents per six quart basket but many of the fruit was of poor quality.

New potatoes continue to hold well with good samples bringing two dollars the bag with small ones moving slowly at $1.00.

New peas showing signs of the effect of the drought in evidence this week, with twenty five cents the quart being asked by vendors.

Red and white currants sold slowly at 10 cents the box with late crop strawberries selling few but there at two boxes for 25 cents.

Vegetables were scarce until several purchasers being disappointed at the lack of cabbage. A choice sample of cauliflower brought ready buyers at 10 and 20 cents.

A few pairs of broiler chickens brought 80 cents. Asparagus, beets, onions and carrots remained about at five cents. Fish vendors did not put in an appearance.

BIG THERMOMETER IS NOW MISSING

Officials of the J. E. Walmsley Co. local wholesale grocers wondered today if the present heat wave had anything to do with the matter after discovering this morning that a large thermometer which for years past had kept residents informed of the temperatures had been stolen during the night. Most of the thermometer or the thief has been learned.

$15,000 DAMAGE AT OWEN SOUND

Three Business Houses Affected by Fire, Water and Smoke

The fire broke out in the Manjuris place and spread. The fire brigade had a stiff battle to get it under control.

The interior of the store was practically burned. The damage to the Manjuris store was estimated at $10,000 and while there was no fire in either of the other stores they were damaged by smoke.

Great Britain to Bolster Precaution

A supplementary civil service estimate filed in the House of Commons asked an additional $4,300,000 with which to purchase gas masks. Of this amount, $135,000 was earmarked for the purchase and adaptation of two factories producing masks in the Manchester area.

An additional $25,000 was allotted for the civilian anti-gas school.

The supplementary estimate, totalling $56,081,000 of which $14,464,900 was for a cattle tuberculin, pushed the total of 1936 supplementary estimates to $41,802,000 beyond the amount provided for in the budget drawn up by Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain.

The gas masks are to be stored in convenient centres throughout the country and will not be issued to the public unless their use becomes necessary.

Methods of distribution in the event of an emergency are to be worked out with arrangements made to allow the public to buy the gas masks and become accustomed to them.

Charge Germany Has Started Refortification of Heligoland

The British House of Commons was startled this week when it was revealed by Lord Cranborne, under-secretary for foreign affairs, that Germany was further violating the Versailles treaty by refortifying Heligoland. Lord Cranborne stated that Germany had advised no one, and that the right of inspection was denied Heligoland, German naval fortress in the North Sea during the world war, was demilitarized after the war. Two towers remain, one at top of cliff and the other on the shore line. An air review of Heligoland is shown ABOVE.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Manitoba & Eastern

L. A. Dunham, consulting engineer, of New York City followed examination of the property of Manitoba and Eastern Mines in the Temagami area for a group of New American principals, states in conclusion that continuation of progress a the present rate soon should place the company among the important gold producers of Ontario. Mr. Dunham made his first inspection of the property in February of this year, and it was on his report that officials of Manitoba and Eastern were successful in interesting United States capital and resume development.

Market interest continues to be confined to special industries on indications at the present rate soon should dustry has the spotlight and as a result most of the activity is confined to the "specialty" stocks. Most of the few outsiders to get any particular attention is Canadian Oil, the preferred issue being probably the most active on the board yesterday.

The advance which the preferred stock at Canada General Company has had is a direct reflection that this year's business is showing an improvement over that of a year ago and it also brings up the question that the common may probably be able to do some refinancing of its two issues before long to the advantage of the company.

Canada Leads the United States in Production of Gold if the Philippine Islands are Excluded

While complete returns on gold production for the first half of 1936 from the mines of the United States and Canada are not yet available, a fairly active approximation can be made from data already issued, permitting a comparison of the progress of the industry in both countries.

So much has been said of the mounting gold output throughout the world that it may come as a surprise to note that such increases as are shown, both in Canada and the United States, are by no means sensational and appear to be only proportionate to the new capital and labor that have gone into the industry.

Relying on the rate of gold production as reported for the first four months as a basis of estimate for the half year, Canadian production may amount to about 1,740,000 ounces valued at $60,900,000. That of the United States, including the Philippine Islands, may reach 1,830,000 ounces, valued at $64,000,000.

Due to seasonal influences, the output for the second half of the year will probably be substantially higher in both countries, without taking into account any new discoveries that may be made.

By comparison, the Canadian output is about 18 per cent ahead of the comparable period of 1935, and that of the United States 21 per cent larger. But neither country shows any increase over the July-December period of 1935.

Both places the United States ahead of Canada as a gold producer is not unlikely to last for the latter. Until the Philippine Islands were made independent of the country, their gold output was naturally included in American gold production figures. It would now appear necessary to segregate the two, on account of the new status of the Philippine Islands. If this is done and Philippine production is excluded from that of the United States as formerly reported, it would reduce American output for the first half of 1936, and thus place Canada favorably ahead of the United States as formerly report-

ROTARIANS GUESTS AT BOYS CAMP

Belleville Rotary Club members held this week's meeting at the Boys' Camp, Moira Lake, where the Camp O. C. Joe Shortt and his bunch of boys entertained the visitors with a very fine dinner, some rollicking songs and a cooling swim.

Joe Shortt welcomed the visitors and gave a resume of the history of the camp, its activities and benefits. A feature of the evening was the presentation to Past President F. B. Boyce, of a Past President's International Rotary gold pin, which brought forth some eloquent tributes of appreciation of the work of Mr. Boyce during his term of office, and acknowledgment by him of the splendid co-operation he had received all year from the members. Under the leadership of President Boyce the past year has been a banner one for Belleville Rotary Club. "Taking into consideration the large number of motor cars and congestion of traffic, the traffic in Belleville was quite orderly and fortunately no serious accidents were reported to us," stated Chief Kidd today in reference to the heavy traffic, that was observed in Belleville during the Orange celebration yesterday. "A collision that resulted in slight fender damage and another that saw the headlight of an automobile bent" were the only motor accidents reported to us," added Chief Kidd as he stated the crowd in Belleville yesterday proved quite orderly. "A few in town did over-step the mark and become slightly intoxicated but unless undue disturbances resulted the police department did not exercise too freely their powers in this matter," the Chief Constable stated today.

FORESIGHT PROBABLY SAVED BUILDINGS

Foresight of Fire Chief Wm. Lynch and city fire stations in posting fire apparatus and men in the Fair Grounds yesterday was largely instrumental in the reduction of several minor blazes, which broke out in different sections of the grounds, when careless visitors deposited burning cigarettes in patches of dry grass.

Fire engines answered an alarm at eleven-thirty last night when fire broke out in the vicinity of Bain's hospital, near the Bay shore. The blaze was extinguished before it reached threatening proportions.

IN MEMORIAM

KEKE—In loving memory of Ida Manella Keck, who passed away July 13th, 1935 in her 16th year.

We travelled life's road together,
Amid faith and hope and love,
And conquered life's battles together
With strength and comfort from God.

Too often said I would miss you,
Your words have proven too true,
I lost my best and dearest pal,
Heaven gained my all.
So those who have a daughter,
Treasure her with care,
You will never know her value
Till you see her empty chair.
Always remembered by Mother and Brother. J14-1t

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Walking Dead"

"The Walking Dead", a Warner Bros. picture, said to be the strangest and most unusual mystery thriller ever screened, opens at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow. Boris Karloff has the starring role while the brilliant cast includes Ricardo Cortez, Edmund Gwen, Marguerite Churchill, Warren Hull, Barton MacLane and Henry Hull.

The picture has as its central theme the bringing back to life of a man who has been electrocuted for murder, but whose innocence of the crime is proved immediately after his execution. The victim of a band of racketeers, who have framed him, the man who was dead walks as in a dream among the living to seek an unknown distinct, seemingly supernatural, of ferreting out the men who had caused his death.

The theme is fair raising enough in itself, but the strange occult methods by which the "dead" man proceeds to accomplish what is calculated to freeze the blood and make the flesh quiver.

The process of bringing the man to life is shown in detail and is done along the line of scientific experiments conducted by eminent doctors in the past several years.

Added Attraction

"P Man", an amusing and comedy relating the adventures of a boy who wanted to be an "G Man" but couldn't quite make the grade, opens tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre, with Jack Haley in the title role and a cast headed by Grace Bradley, William Brawley, Adrienne Marden and Onslow Stevens supporting him.

"P Man" deals with the fate of a country boy who goes to the city to make good at a Department of Justice operative, "thrown out of that organization's office every time he appears, he finally gets himself a job as a soda-fountain clerk in the meanwhile continues to make regular visits of the office of the Department. He makes such a pest of himself that a minor official finally decides to do something about it.

The "something" consists of first subjecting the victim to a series of "phoney" physical tests, which he passes with flying colors, and then the announcement that as a novelty he has been selected as "P Man" for a probationary period before graduating to become a "G Man".

But ultimately—and in spite of himself—he does make his the cause of Public Enemy No. 1 and wins the girl he loves.

AT THE BELLE

"Little Miss Nobody"

Bubbling with laughter and bursting with song, ragtail Jane Withers comes to the Belle today to the Belle Theatre in her joyous new Fox hit, "Little Miss Nobody."

The picture follows the adventures of a nancy orphan through a series of escapades both hilarious and pathetic. Featured in the story, supporting cast are Jane Darwell, Ralph Morgan, Alan Hadon, Harry Carey and Betty Jean Hainey.

Jane is a mischievous, nameless orphan who wins "Trouble" for her name. Her first action—oh, so harmless to be good, but only succeeds in getting in bad.

Her heart is as big as the sky, and many of her scrapes arise chiefly from the fact that she is constantly trying to shield her hopeless pal, Betsy Jean. Jane even goes so far as to let a kindly father appear to claim her, as to switch identities with Other Little Girl, to save her from being adopted by an arrogant newly-rich woman.

"Little Miss Nobody" is a rollicking new song hit, presents Jane with her opportunity to sing again and perform her inimitable dancing. The story is based on "The Adventures Tompert" by the well known and popular writer, Frederick Hazlitt Brennan.

"Absolute Quiet"

On the same program today and Wednesday, a splendid second feature attraction is also presented, entitled, "Absolute Quiet" and which features a cast of notables including Lionel Atwill, Irene Hervey, Raymond Walburn, Stuart Erwin, Sterling Holloway, Heyward, Wallace Ford and many others. It is a story packed with thrills, laughs and romance, produced by Edward Chodorov from the novel by Mary Borden. George Seitz's direction keeps the picture moving at a pretty pace, while the production of Producer John W. Considine, Jr., is excellent. The Metropolitan Studio director Edwin C. Hill, will also be presented in an interesting series of short subjects. Shows start daily at 2.30, 7.30 and 9.30 p.m. It's a two feature program today and tomorrow, so don't miss seeing it! ALSO remember that the Belle is refreshingly cool.

COOLER WEATHER IN WEST CANADA

Twenty-two Died in Manitoba From Heat Prostration

Winnipeg, July 14 (CP)—Residents throughout the heat-stricken Canadian Prairies today welcomed the prospect of cooler weather and a gentle rain, accompanied by what have brought relief to sun-scorched residents and parched crops.

While rain has been far from general during the past few days, severe electrical storms and heavy rains have touched many parts of the three prairie provinces, and in South-Central Manitoba, yesterday brought a quick drop in temperatures after more than a week when the 100 mark had been recorded on the southern thermometers.

Twenty-two persons had died in Manitoba from heat prostration during Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Early last night a high wind stirred the sultry air and a heavy rain storm followed. The temperatures dropped to 73 and after recovering to 80, began dropping again as further rain storms were felt intently.

The rains extended as far west as Brandon, 150 miles west of Winnipeg. There was no rain at Emerson, on the international boundary, but early south of Winnipeg, but the effect of the storms was felt there as the mercury dropped from a high of 106 to 84 during the night.

At Virden, too, 50 miles west of Brandon, no rain fell but the temperature dropped from 102 to 82.

Light scattered showers fell in some sections of Saskatchewan, but South-Eastern area of that Province had enjoyed heavy rains during the week. The rain did not extend into Alberta but the weather there was comparatively cool with high readings of 80 and 82 respectively yesterday in Edmonton and Calgary.

London, July 14 (CP Havas) — Mrs. Charles Bowman, mother of five children, was executed today after conviction on a charge of having poisoned her husband. Mrs. Bowman was the third woman executed in England during the past nine years. She was 33 years old.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Local wrestling fans who attended last night's Queensbury A. C. show at the Armories were well rewarded for their faithful attendance. Hats off to Jack Corcoran, Queensbury A. C. promoter, and his troupe of grapplers. Despite the hot weather and the muggy ring conditions, the boys staged three bang-up bouts and at no time during the evening did they indulge in row track of good clean wrestling. The show resulted in the finest exhibition of wrestling ever staged locally and the stay-at-homes to Belleville have a thing to thank Jack Marcier looked too good for Dan Sullivan, Toronto Canadian now in the fans a real exhibition as he applied more holds in less time than any wrestler we have seen. Marcier seemed quite proficient in the art of wrestling and we have holds more rapidly than any man we have ever seen in a local ring. Sullivan gave exhibition of how the various holds are applied.

The semi-final bout of the evening gave us the greatest bit of wrestling we have ever listed as a powerful giant weighing in at 260 pounds, Ted Le Beau of Hawkesbury, Ont. pitted against Al Dooley who given the appearance of a boxer, swung over to a local ring but last night Dooley was on the mat-wrestling end of the match. Instead of rough punishing holds, applied by Le Beau, Al Dooley was given a finally declared winner as Referee Wells disqualified Wright, the Hawkesbury lad, for the punishment he had given Dooley a sweet wrestling hold was the ground of his accomplishments. The best was Bills less than thrilling from the ringside, for he, too, had forwarded Wright out of the bump.

One of the highlights of the night's bouts came during the main scrap between Ted Rumburg and John Eatan. It seems Rumburg had a fine hold on the unfortunate on Eatan and as Referee Wells fell prostrate on the mat to watch the holds, the Wimbledon William wiggled about and finally got a full Nelson hold on Rumburg, the unmasked Unknown of old, is a fine looking blonde lassie of the gentler sex with the fair sex. About all one could hear during the main bout was feminine voices shouting words of encouragement to Rumburg and lusty hurrahs for Eatan. Incidentally, is no parlour wrestler is after all. The boys are built to see such a mere handful of fans turn out for such an outstanding bout. Jack Corcoran certainly enjoys the goodwill of the sporting public throughout town. Jack's bouts can always be depended upon regardless as to whether the fans come to the gallery or not. "A satisfied customer is our best method of advertising" and the last night as he took it on the chin financially

While on the subject of wrestling we understand the bitterness and grudge wrestling bout between Danny O'Mahon, the ex-champion, and Yvon Robert, the fiery French-Canadian, who attacked O'Mahony during a bout in Boston some time ago, will be held in Montreal at the end of July 1937. A capacity crowd is expected to jam the Forum for this much-talked-of grudge fight.

All roads and waterways lead to Massassaga Park tomorrow for the annual Belleville Yacht Club picnic. Agenda as we as land sports have been included on the program that is open to all. Special sailing and power boat races will be featured. This is a day since the citizens of Belleville were afforded the opportunity of an all-fashioned basket picnic at Massassaga Point. Shades of the Bay of Quinte, Lake Ontario and the Yerma. (Not the Verona).

Today's baseball question reads: "Who was the first man to steal in last half of the ninth, batter gets chance on balls, apparently forcing over winning run. Batter, however, does not go through formality of touching first base although runner on third scores. Game breaks up. Later, the batter man protests the game, claiming run was not legal until runner touched first base. No one was out at the time. What is proper ruling? Answer: No grounds for protest since losing team did not raise the question until after it occurred.

Regarding Saturday's ball game in Oshawa the Motor City sport scribe says—

Oshawa got 19 hits and 24 runs in the first 4 frames. That lead was enough for any ball game and the "Gin-Mies" were never in danger. "Jake" Biddle hurled the small half of the game and "Johnny" Turner finished the game. The latter of Turner's trouble in the 8th when Belleville suddenly looked like a ball club. Neither Oshawa pitcher had much work to do in any one inning.

Outside of their offensive strength which was displayed in the 8th, Belleville didn't look a thing in though such players as Mgr. Wetherall, St. Louis, Latchford and Gray, who tried to make a game of it, deserve plenty of credit for their trying. Given a couple of infielders and a pitcher, Bellville would be plenty tough to beat.

In the regular Saturday morning swim programme for the Preps and Juniors, William Yerrow and Kenneth Campbell just about cleaned up board with both men won two events while a fifth race run for the novices was captured by Wesley Mifflin. The following were the results of the five events

Chicago Cubs Gain First Place in National League

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

While it doesn't show in the standings—especially if you're busy watching their farmer battle the Cards and Cubs are staging ever in the National League—trouble threatens to be hurling just around the corner, ready to pounce on those blustering New York Yankees.

Since their stride was broken a week ago by the three-day layoff for the all-star game, the Yanks have had trouble regaining the form that put them far out in front of the rest of the American League. They did it once in an 18-5 rout of Cleveland, but they dropped two out of three to the Indians and wound up yesterday with the same short count against the White Sox when "efficient" John Whitehead held them to five hits for a 4-3 triumph.

Counting out the one big game, the Yanks have scored only 14 runs in five contests and four of them were by Lou Gehrig, fellow who apparently won't be stopped by anything. Their opponents tallied 36 times in those games. Gehrig smacked his 16th homer of the season yesterday with Red Rolfe on base to account for two of the Yanks runs as he pulled ahead of Jimmie Foxx in the home run league lead.

Just to make the prospect look darker, the Yanks tomorrow have to take on the Tigers, who are beginning to look like the Detroit club won last year's world series.

13th Win In 15 Starts

Detroit, which has climbed from fifth place to second inside of three weeks, made up its 13th victory in 15 starts by routing the Athletics 8-2 yesterday. Jurdo Lesser scattered nine Philadelphia hits, while Charley Gehringer led the attack on Rose and Caster with a pair of two doubles and a single, scoring three runs.

Cleveland's Indians moved up to the position for fourth place by routing the Red Sox 11-5 while the Washington tightened its hold on third with a 9-3 decision over Boston.

In the senior circuit the woes, which have been besetting the Cubs for nails since June, have got his head in the way of a line drive Saturday, kept right on cavorting with Dizzy and has now scheduled and scheduled and scheduled to improve. Yesterday's pitching duel reminiscent of the days when Tinker, Evers and Chance paraded for New York and hopes, the Cubs defeated the Giants 1-0 and moved into the lead in the percentage points ahead of St. Louis.

Big Bill Lee set the Giants down with four hits, while Carl Hubbell gave Chicago only four hits. Lee's mate, Nether allowed a fully earned run but a solid lapse plus a timely hit in the fourth gave the Cubs the only run. A pass and a sacrifice put Billy Herman on second. Whitehead tried to catch Herman off the bag as he reached the middle mark. But Herman was there, rambled on to third. Ken O'Dea, who had replaced Gabby Hartnett behind the plate singled the runner home.

Thor Jim Chaplin of the Bees celebrated his 29th birthday by giving the Phillies six-hit pitching job and a 6-1 victory over Pittsburgh's Pirates, while a heavy hitting barrage in the fifth and ninth innings drove Bucky Walter to cover and enabled the Reds to defeat the Phillies 6-4 in the other National League game. It was the fifth straight triumph for the Bees and Frochnall's second win in eight games.

Montreal, July 14—(CP)—Nineteen boxers, some of them more battered than others, and all of them more marked up than 24 hours ago, were over the first hurdle today on the fistic trail that will lead to Canadian representation in the Berlin Olympics.

And by the same token there were 19 fighters—more or less—less than there 19. Left by the wayside last night, the first night of battling in the Olympic boxing trials.

Three Canadian champions placed their titles on the first nighters sill in the hunt for Dominion titles and Olympic honors, and a unanimous decision when the trials end—Wednesday night.

Two of these, Irving Pease, middleweight titleholder from Toronto, and Leo Rodier, featherweight from Montreal, gained the Olympic ticket. For three rounds he demonstrated his class in craft and all of Montreal hanging on the ropes at the final bell.

Maurice Marcotte, featherweight champion, Montreal, made his second ring appearance in the three-round decision over Gamelin Dumas of Montreal.

A veteran of the ring wars, Marcotte had plenty of trouble with his foe but used consistent left hand. The crowd booed the decision. They booed when Referee Dumas who had traded blow or blow but the Montreal featherweight landed the most of the Westerner's.

Maurice Canyree, left-hander welter champion from St. Vital, Man., failed to impress in his first-round victory against Arthur Taylor of Montreal he gained the decision but for the most part the bout was a battle of footwork.

Best Fight of Night

Gordon Schmalitz of Kitchener, Ont., came back after dropping two rounds to Gus Demetriadis of Joggins, N.S., and closed with enough punching power in the last round for a unanimous decision as it was one of the best fights of the card.

Vandenburg faded badly after outboxing the Kitchener boy in the first round, but his bomber nicely and landed with solid rights. In the third, however, Schmalitz had the Martinmer groggy and scored with thumping blows while forcing Vandenburg to ropes. They fought at 147 pounds.

Seven other Ontario fighters besides Pease and Schmalitz advanced and two Manitobans and one British Columbian will fight at least once more in the trials.

Tuesday's other winners were Vince Bagnato, who decisioned Jim Chapenda of Edmonton in the lightweight division. Bill Humphries who slugged Adam Dupuis of Saint John, N.B., to a technical knockout in the first round of their bout in the same class, and Hervey Lacelles who won from Ottawa's Gerry Strang in a welter bout.

Bagnato and Hervey Lacelles took two bantamweight wins for Ontario, defeating Winstar Kinnear of Sydney, N.S., and Mike Martyk of St. Catharines, Ont., respectively. The other Ontario winner was Eddie Westwood who decisioned Bill Martin, welterweight from Red Deer, Alta.

The other Ontario scraper who survived the first round was middleweight Walter Franklin of Windsor.

Montreal's victors were Wally Cave and Reilly Potvin, lightweights, Ray Bastien, featherweight; Eddie Barsitani, middleweight, Harry Hurst, bantamweight and Ray McIntyre, welterweight

John Katan and Hal Rumburg Wrestle One Hour to Draw; Texas Ranger Disqualified

Wrestling Card Best Ever Staged in This City

MERCIER CLEVER

Main Bout Had Appearances of A Real Grudge Fight

Bellerville wrestling fans were treated to the most thrilling three bout wrestling card ever staged in the Bellerville Arena last night when Hal Rumburg, the unmasked marvel, grappled to a draw with the Whitney, villain, Jack Katan in the main bout of the evening. They go minutes of unbroken grappling, while in the preceding bouts the fans were afforded two of the finest and most thrilling bouts ever staged in Bellerville. In the main scrap of the evening Hal Rumburg, the blonde favorite from Spokane, forces John Katan, the Winnipeg mat-villain, to the limit as the contestants grappled for a draw after one full hour of thrilling wrestling. In the semi-final scrap Rube Wright the ex-Texas Ranger, drew the wrath of the fans and Referee Wells upon his head, for continued allegations of foul practices, and was disqualified. Al Dunlop, his Detroit opponent, was declared winner. Al Mercier, the French-Canadian grappler, put the modern art of grappling, experienced little difficulty in downing Dan Petroff, the Russian Lion in the opening bout, however.

Second Favorite Held

In the main bout of the evening Hal Rumburg, the ladies' blonde-haired favorite, who proved a modern Adonis, when exposed in scoring minus his conventional mask, was by no means a set down. However, won the first fall over the rough and nasty villainous John Katan after 30 minutes of exciting wrestling. Rumburg of softened Katan with a series of elbow smashes, that were as torrid as the present weather conditions, and following front chancery, pinned Katan's shoulders to the mat. After a short recess the boys returned to the squared circle and renewed hostilities, with Katan resorting to roughhouse tactics despite the cat-calls from the 500 fans present and warnings from Referee Wells. Katan gained a pounding advantage as he set methodically to work on Rumburg. "Give up or I'll break it off," Katan was heard about at the writhing Rumburg as the former applied the toe-hold, and with super strength the blonde-haired youth broke it. Rumburg rallied with a series of elbow smashes Katan finally gained his favorite hold, the Japanese Inside toe-hold and pinned Rumburg's shoulders to the mat after nearly 30 minutes.

Although Rumburg was the star grappler, by the grace of which the main bout was staged in Bellerville, the real wrestling card of the evening was the semi-final scrap between Rube Wright the ex-Texas Ranger, and Al Dunlop, his Detroit opponent. Wright declined winner, Al Mercier, the French-Canadian opponent, put the modern art of grappling, experienced little difficulty in downing Dan Petroff, the Russian Lion in the opening bout, however.

New Discus Mark Is Established by Adelaide Adams

Montreal, July 14.—(CP)—Decisive smashing of a four-year-old discus record placed a new name among Canadian Women's intermediate track and field athletics here today.

Miss Adelaide Adelaide left little doubt about her ability to smash through the Women's Junior, Intermediate and Junior Track and Field Championships here yesterday afternoon when she threw the discus 100 feet 6 1-2 inches to better the Canadian mark set by Ethel Catherwood in 1933, by 5 3-4 inches.

Only 24 hours after Senior championships and Olympic trials had been concluded the field was scoured for fresh talent. They decided 15 athletes with six of the championships going to Toronto.

Whitney's Florence Merriman was far in front in the Intermediate high jump. She came within three-eighths of an inch of equalling the mark established in the Senior Championships Saturday by Margaret Scott of Vancouver when she cleared five feet 1 3-8 inches.

In the West's other win came through Mary Pitts, ably of Winnipeg, who took the Intermediate running broad jump with a leap of 15 feet six inches.

Adelaide Adelaide Adams' win, Toronto counted victories through Edna Jordan, winner of the Intermediate 80-metre dash and the 100-metre dash. Hilda Pace in the 100-metre dash. Thelma Mantle's Junior 80-metre hurdle win and a first place by the Lakeside Athletic Club in the junior 400-metre relay race.

Ten titles went to Windsor, Ont., when Irene Ada swept to victory in the Senior Intermediate 80-metre dash and tossed the baseball 166 feet six inches. Eileen Howick of Ft. Lambert, Que., was another double winner, taking the Junior broad-jump and high jump.

FOXBORO WINS FROM MELROSE

Game is Played in Connection With Orange Celebration

Capitalizing on the misplays of their rivals, the Foxboro team of the South Hastings League staged a belated rally to defeat the Melrose nine, of the same loop, 6 to 3 in an abbreviated seven inning game of baseball played in conjunction with the Orangemen's celebration at the Fair Grounds yesterday.

The Melrose squad forged to the fore in the initial frame with a tally as Barriage drove home Kinnaird with a mighty triple to right field. Melrose added another counter in the third frame, after two were down, as Barriage was rifled around to third and scored on a wild pitch. Melrose concluded their scoring in the fourth as Kinnaird crossed the plate after Pascoe's fly to left.

On two hits, an error and one base on balls, Foxboro scored four runs in their half of the fourth frame. Again in the fifth the Foxboro nine made their hits count into runs as they capitalized on a walk, coupled by doubles by Stewart and Walt, to score two more runs and with a like number in the sixth.

The Ketcheson brothers, Harry and Clarence, shared the hurling duties for the winners, while Pascoe pitched the entire game for the Melrose nine, being touched for four hit ball in defeat, errors and walks accounting for the majority of the runs scored by the victorious Foxboro nine.

Canadian Olympic Team Much Stronger Than First Supposed

(By Elmer Dulmage)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, July 14.—(CP)—Like all true field events in the world, members of the Canadian Olympic team spoke with admiration today of the astonishingly-standard of performances in the United States trials last week-end. Those Americans, they agreed, can certainly run and jump.

But if the big crowds at the Berlin games do not startle the Canadians, accustomed to running and jumping in comparative privacy, Doyle Kennedy's unassisted forecast should run into stray ends of different Dominion Committees. "When Patrick J. Mulqueen will lead everyone this time."

"Certainly the performances recorded in the United States trials are astounding," conceded Mr. Mulqueen, chairman of the Canadian Olympic Committee. "When the question of comparing them with what our men did here last Friday and Saturday arises, however, don't forget two things:

"It rained both afternoons in Montreal and the weather was fine in New York. Our tracks softened by two thunderstorms, was not all a track for record-breaking. And in the second place we had no stars in the U.S. trials was much better."

Mr. Mulqueen and others mentioned Canada's five-foot-11 in the 200-metre final was one of the best performances recorded anywhere. But compared generally with the U.S. tryouts, Canadian clockings were scarcely impressive. Following is a comparative table of times made by winners:

	United States	Canada
100 metres	10.3	10.4
200 metres	20.7	21.0
400 metres	46.7	46.6

One answer is that Jesse Owens, in a new world record time of 21 seconds for the 200-metre dash around one turn, had a host of great sprinters at his heels. He was on a lightning-fast track. Everything clicked perfectly for the United States trials.

Owens Wins Easily

The 20-year-old McPhee won easily in Molson Stadium. He was never in danger of losing after 30 yards. In addition, he ran in a driving rain on a track that was anything but fast. It is a fact that the Westmount flash hasn't been thoroughly tested in two years.

Owens had to travel at his best to win the 100 metres in 10.3 while McPhee was not hard-pressed to win in 10.4. Owens equalled the world record of 10.3 in the British Empire games in Canada, no doubt, however, that Canada's Johnny Loaring is several shades inferior to Archie Williams, winner of the United States 400-metres in 46.6.

Here are comparisons of times in two of the longer runs:

	United States	Canada
800 metres	1:52.8	1:53
5000 metres	15:39.8	15:06.8

Especially in the 800 metres, the comparison actually makes our Phil Edwards look good. Remarked Mr. Mulqueen, "In the United States trials Woodruff broke off a strong field in 1:51. Edwards, an extraordinary runner, won in 1:53. He hasn't after record time on that track."

Even the optimistic head of the Canadian team didn't try to minimize the portent of these differences

	United States	Canada
110 hurdles	15.3	14.3
400 hurdles	54.0	53.4
High jump	6-6	6-3

There was no doubt that the powerful United States team is better fortified to carry forward a sweep of victories of Berlin than Canada. The Canadians just hope to pick off something here and there.

TORONTO LEAFS KICK OVER TEAMS WITH REGULARITY

Playing Best Ball of Any Team in International

NEWARK IDLE

Rochester Appears to be Unstoppable in Victories

(By the Associated Press)

Toronto Maple Leafs, deeply buried in sixth place in the International League and having little speed of going either up or down, are threatening to give the circuit's apple cart a couple of solid boots if not to kick it over entirely.

In a little over a week the Leafs have knocked the Newark Bears right out of the lead by taking three games out of a series of four, bowled over the fourth-place Baltimore Orioles twice in three attempts, lost two to Rochester's speeding Red Wings, then came back to take it out on Baltimore again by winning last night's game 8-4.

Just to make their task a trifle more amazing, the Leafs got only five hits off Jim Bivin last night while St Johnson gave no eight blows. A bit of wildness in the seventh, when Toronto put together a winning three-run rally, made the big difference. Two unearned runs crossed the plate in that inning while Bivin's wild pitch let another score in the fifth. The Orioles made a great comeback effort, scoring twice in the ninth, Johnson halted them short of a tie.

Buffalo's third-place Bisons slugged their hands full with second-division opposition but they pulled out an eighth-inning 6-4 decision over Albany Senators and crept a half game closer to Newark. The Bears and Montreal Royals were idle.

Although Carl Fischer was treated for eleven hits, he hung up his seventh straight win since Jimmie the Bison, whose batting has been made a wild heave with two out in the eighth and the bases clear when come home from second with the winning run.

Rochester, apparently unstoppable, hammered out a 14-13 victory over the Syracuse Chiefs in a daylight encounter to run its winning streak to 13 straight. Jimmie Brown by the Wings and nine hits off four pitchers failed to stop the Red Wings as they slammed out 19 hits, including two homers, a triple and a single by Louis Boutin and a double by wallop by Jimmy Brown.

The Missing Man

by

Mary R. P. Hatch

Next, several citizens of Grovedale were examined, and they testified that they believed the plaintiff to be Vere Hamilton, for he had told them of many instances known only to himself and those that he seemed familiar with all their past lives, while the other did not. He had not even recognized them when they first met until some word of their had wrought them to his recollection. When he immediately professed to known all about them. One of these witnesses was William Seavey, the foreman in the mill owned in part by Mr. Hamilton. The testimony of these witnesses was very strong, and upon it the plaintiff's counsel relied much for the success of the case. They were subjected to a severe cross-questions, but nothing could shake their testimony. They were evidently sincere, and when they left the witness stand the case of the prosecution looked brighter than it had at all.

Miss Chase and Mrs. O'Neil were then examined, but their testimony in a way known to the reader, and, besides, it was unimportant to the real case at issue. Conductor Libby's words were listened to with the closest attention, for they proved conclusively that Mr. Hamilton appeared strangely on the train, that he remained in it at the time, but did not suspect that then he was laboring under a lapse of memory.

The last witness to be called was a man from Valparaiso, who testified to the fact that Ashley was known to him, and that he had visited the defendant as the man. The plaintiff he had never seen but once before. He stated that he had been engaged in certain nefarious undertakings with Ashley, whom he knew to have been in Boston at the very date when altered notes was presented at the bank. Moreover, he testified that the plaintiff had once come to the place where he lodged and made inquiries after Ashley; said he thought he was his twin brother. Witness said he had answered evasively and said not him anything about Ashley, for fear of the ladies' anger. That since then he had been converted under the auspices of the Salvation Army and had seen in a newspaper the advertisement inserted by the plaintiff's counsel for information regarding the suit, and he had answered it in person.

This was as direct a piece of testimony as had been offered, and with that of the last witness was decidedly in favor of the prosecution. The counsel had done wisely to reserve it for the last, and Morley and Stevens rejoiced to see how acutely the witness resisted the efforts of the opposition to break up his testimony. When he left the witness-stand the case closed for the plaintiff, there was a stir among the audience, and when the Partners, too, left their room did not betide their minds, who were more than half persuaded of the claims of the plaintiff.

It was now the fourth day of the trial and an adjournment was called until the following day at nine o'clock. Comments were heard on all sides as the crowd surged into the street, and it was evident at this juncture that the sympathy was pretty evenly divided between the claimants.

CHAPTER IX

THE DEFENCE

Mr. Ferguson spoke for upwards of an hour in an easy, graceful manner natural to him, and his outline of the case held the corapt attention of every person in the court-room that morning. There was little of labored argument, but starting with the supposition that his client was suffering a fraudulent attempt at ejection from his own premises, he proceeded to put the matter before the laymen in this light. He said in substance something like the following:

"You have listened to the argument of the learned counsel for the plaintiff, and to the testimony offered, with great attention, and indeed it has well merited attention, for Mr. Morley can do anything that any one can in a good case, while in a good one it rests with none to excel him. But this is a most unjust, most fraudulent claim; its equal was never, perhaps, before known in judicial history. Claims to estates are not so rare, but was it ever known before, the attempt to claim a man's wife and family, in addition to his property. And was it ever witnessed, the conniving of the wife to aid the false claimant in his endeavors to oust her lawful husband from his true place? The astounding assumption of the whole plan for the prosecution has blinded us somewhat to its aspect. But let us now look at it as it stands.

"My client, who is none other than the Hon. Vere Hamilton,—as you can see for yourself, his looks fully corroborating my statements,—returns after an absence of many months to his home. He has been in the habit of taking his yearly outings in May, as he is inclined to bilious difficulties and is not so well able to pursue his business in the spring as in the summer. Far from making any mystery of the matter, he has invariably told his wife that he went away for his health. On one or two occasions he had other business of a special nature connected with the mill which was believed best to keep secret for a time.

"You all know how fast it, and that ladies are sometimes apt to mention such matters in their confidences with other women, so that they leak out, often to the serious detriment of their husbands' business. Knowing this, Mr. Hamilton did not always explain the full reason of his trips, and his wife chose to make a mystery of them. They had nothing to do with seeking for a twin brother. That silly fiddle-faddle has no part in the defence. The only other children born to the Hamilton parents were a boy and a girl, who died in their infancy. The confession of Hannah Sargent is of no account she having told at least half a dozen different stories about the matter.

"When Mr. Hamilton was away he was taken with a peculiar malady, a species of insanity. He forgot his name, place of residence, everything. You have heard it all explained in the evidence for the prosecution, embodied in the words of Mr. Libby and others, who, however make the mistake of confounding the false claimant with the true. Mr. Barnstead, I shall prove to the evidence of his friend Hurd, did not see Hamilton on the fifteenth; that it was the next Thursday that he witnessed the meeting at Portland depot, instead of Friday, when Mr. Hamilton left home. Mr. Hamilton went on his way unseen by Mr. Barnstead, but on the day Thursday following he saf the claimant, who at that time had light hair and resembled Mr. Hamilton strongly. In fact, the claimant is none other than the notorious Ashley, who got cornered at Portland depot that very day and was arrested by the sheriff from Goodwill, Harrison County, Nebraska.

"Mr. Barnstead testified that he looked bewildered. No wonder that he did not know what to do when he saw the officers watching him, for he has thought the only thing he could do was to plead mental aberration! The officer watched him, and he knew he was recognized. With the fertility of resources for which he is noted, Ashley decided to walk up to the officer, pretend he did not know his own name and perhaps get a chance to escape, being handcuffed. "What is my name?' he asks the officer; 'you appear to know me.'

"No wonder the officer looks surprised at the question, but the answer came readily. 'Your name is Henry Ashley. I know you well.' Of course he did. There was more. Mr. Barnstead says, and they walked off together. No doubt the officer thought best to make the arrest as quiet as possible, and as we know (for Mr. Barnstead is a reliable witness so far as he understands the facts) Ashley walked right into the clutches of the law. Why? Because there was no other course open, and he deemed it best to do so; and his experience of criminals had proved that it is always best to go quietly when arrest is unavoidable.

"You will recollect that Mr. Barnstead in his testimony could not swear that he saw the meeting take place Friday; but Mr. Hurd is ready to affirm on his oath, that it was nearly a week later that he heard the account from Mr. Barnstead, and that it was told to him as if it occurred on Thursday. You will remember that when cross-questioned he was not sure, neither was he impressed with the great resemblance between the 'two who met at the depot. In fact, he owned that he might not have thought of it at all if he had not heard, afterwards of the likeness between the claimant and Hamilton. It was not remarkable, Sheriff Bedell had long whiskers, eyes of dark brown and a height correspondingly to that of the claimant. Here is the photograph," and Mr. Ferguson laid it before the jurymen.

"Unfortunately for us, the original died two months ago, but he is described by a witness as answering to the description given of him by Mrs. Barstead. We shall also produce evidence and the statements of the newspapers to prove that on May twenty-five Sheriff Bedell arrested near Portland depot the celebrated bank defaulter, Henry Ashley, and the presumption is, it was three days later that Mr. Barnstead saw them.

"Ashley was taken to Goodwill and incarcerated in jail there, and it was in that town his hair changed from light to dark. This prosecution does not deny that this man, the prisoner, was the claimant, or that it was from the remarkable change in the color of his hair took place. It would be useless to do. They only venture to put in the plea that he was arrested in the place of another, and to base that they are compelled to set up the absurd story of the twin brother. There is no twin brother, for he died in infancy.

"Ashley was visited next morning in jail by his wife. He denied that she was his wife, and she did not contradict him until afterwards. Then she said that she was his wife. Ashley got clear on the plea of being insane, and was sent to the asylum, from there he escaped, who supposed to have been drowned, worked a while at a mill, and then came to Grovedale, where he got employment in the mill here. He had in some way the remarkable change in the color of his hair took place. It would be useless to do. They only venture to put in the plea that he was arrested in the place of another, and to base that they are compelled to set up the absurd story of the twin brother. Nor were the savages daunted by the pitiful preparation of the resisters. With wild shrieks they closed in. "Here they come!" exclaimed Dick; "goodbye, Dou"; "Goodbye Dick," his cousin replied; "don't let them take you alive." "Poor mother!" Dick breathed.

Vimy Wreath Is Dedicated

Impressive Ceremony Held At Monument Park

Picton—A most impressive service was held on Sunday morning, July 12th, at Monument Park, when the wreath of the Council that is to be placed on the memorial at Vimy two weeks from today, was dedicated. The line of march formed at the armories at half-past ten, and by Sergeant Major Jas. Mercer to the Park. The regimental band played. Behind the band marched members of the County Council and the veterans wearing berets and arm bands, Rev. R. J. Scott of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church conducted the service in the presence of a large and representative gathering. He offered prayer, and read the lesson "Turn your swords into plough-shares and your spears into pruning-hooks". Mr. Scott spoke of the dedication service at Vimy in honour of the sixty thousand Canadians who are buried in France. The names of eleven thousand, he said, would be inscribed on the memorial, the others were wiped out, leaving no trace. The King is to attend this dedication service at Vimy, two weeks from today. Even when the King followed the bier of his beloved father, he remembered to salute the tomb of the unknown soldier as he passed. Six thousand Canadian pilgrims will attend this service in France, while untold thousands will be there in spirit. The wreath from this County, along with those from all parts of Canada will commemorate those brave fellows who laid down their lives. Comrade Frank Starr handed the wreath to Warden Frank Hawkins who presented it with a few appropriate words to Lt. Col. C. E. Mathews who will carry it to Vimy. Rev. Mr. Scott dedicated the wreath to the honour and glory of God, to the cause of peace throughout the world and to those who did not come back. He quoted Sidney How's fine poem in closing the service. For you, our Dead, beyond the sea, Who gave your lives U bold us free, By us, who keep your memory, What can be said?

We cannot add to your praises right, Lost heroes of an endless flight; Whose souls into the endless night, Too soon have fled.

We call you friends, cherish, bless, Your sacred names; no words express

The measure of our thankfulness, To you, our Dead.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows was wrastling along just wrastling along and we didn't notice the empty house with the broken windows being suppose to be haunted and Pete Simkins said, I wonder if there's really ghosts inside? I would be afraid to crawl through one of the windows and some fellow said, he's the nerve to go ahead of me, he said.

I don't advise you to, because I know all about it, for the simple reason because I've been in there Sam Cross said.

What being the biggest liar around and I said, Why, how, when?

I smoke out one Friday the 13th in the everybody else was asleep, and I came around to the house and crept through the back fents just when the clocks was striking twelve oclock midnite, Sam Cross said.

O boy, was that a sensation. The kitchin door was open so I walked in to it with my fingers crossed, and it is so dark in there I could hear sounds but I couldn't see them, he said.

My baliceny what sounds, for instants? Pudz Simkins said, and Sam Cross said, sounds like chains and the sounds of groans, and the sounds of rattling bones, that's what scared me. And then suddenly all of a sudden I saw an axual ghost. Wowie, maybe you don't think that was a sensation, he said. How did you see it if it was so dark? I said, and Sam said, I saw it because it was all lighted up inside, that's how, and I kept my fingers crossed and wawked right in to it with my fingers crossed, and it was so dark in there I could hear it breathe

MAYORS PROMISED RELIEF CUT BY HEPBURN

GOVT TO ABSORB 10 P. C. RELIEF CUT MAYORS ARE TOLD

Premier Hepburn Sympathetic to Plea of Large Deputation

HOUSING SCHEME

Entered Into in Small Way as An Experiment

Toronto, July 15 (CP)—Premier Hepburn today told a deputation of Ontario mayors that the provincial government would absorb for this month the 10 per cent relief cut made by the Dominion government.

The deputation, representing a number of Ontario municipalities, waited on the premier and cabinet and presented claims that the municipalities had exhausted their financial revenue because of heavy relief costs.

The deputation was headed by Mayor J. Albert Smith of Kitchener and urged that the provincial government absorb the 10 per cent cut in federal grants rather than pass it along to the municipalities.

Further Survey.

The premier's statement was fell by implication to indicate the Ontario government may make a further survey of the situation, as was considered likely that further representations would be made by the City of Ottawa to have the cut restored.

While urging the government to take up the burden of the 10 per cent cut the deputation also presented a resolution requesting that the opinion of the Ontario Mayors Association on the question of direct relief should be borne by the Dominion government.

"We appreciate," declared Premier Hepburn, who stated that every effort had been made to have the Ottawa government continue relief grants on the previous basis.

"We would like to write a new language to improve our views on them and we will do our best to do it in this connection," stated Welfare-Minister Croll when asked to make further representations to Ottawa in connection with relief.

The premier said the province was contributing considerably more money for relief than was paid by the Dominion government. In April the sum of $1,000,000 was paid and there had been $1,144,000 as against the Dominion contribution of $857,000. In May the Ontario figure was $942,000 and in June $911,943 compared to the Dominion figure.

Easier Into Housing.

The deputation also urged the department that the government was entering into a housing scheme in a small way and not extensively. This he said would indicate if the depression had passed. Relief of taxes on property from heavy taxes was the only way to stimulate the building industry.

"There certainly is no inducement for anyone to own home building as an investment," said Premier Hepburn.

The premier repeated his observation that further taxes on the part of the province would increase their own purpose. He cited the falling off in revenue when the amusement tax was raised.

"We will have to worry along as best we can. We do not want to step out for new taxes," he said.

The premier in concluding said the mayors if they knew of any cases of starvation or malnutrition in the province as was alleged by an unemployed delegation a few days ago, hospital facilities were given that such cases existed.

Other Resolutions.

The deputation presented resolutions asking that the province should be relieved of payment in connection with old age pensions; for an equitable share of income tax; and for the revision of the Ontario Municipal Act.

TERRIBLE SEVEN DAY PERIOD ENDS

No Rain Falls But Cooling Breezes Blow

(By the Canadian Press)

Ontario today revelled in cooling breezes and a welcome absence of heat after the most terrible seven days in the province's history.

The weather bureau reported but although badly needed, if crops are to be saved by the rainfall, the absence was scarcely noted by city dwellers in their relief at the passing of the heat wave.

Toronto reported a noon temperature of 80 degrees compared with 90 Tuesday and a brisk breeze made it seem even cooler. Residents enjoyed their best sleep in a week last night.

Hamilton basked in a mere 82. At Stratford the mercury dropped to 53 during the night from a maximum of 95 but by eight o'clock had climbed back to 74. Guelph's noon temperature slid down to 80 from its 91 top during the day and at mid-morning it was back to 73.

Britain enjoyed cooling breezes from the north and at noon the reading was 75 degrees, three lower than thermometers registered at 9 o'clock.

BRITAIN ARMING LEST WAR COME INSIDE TWO YEARS

Statement Made by Lord Eustace Percy at Conservative Meeting

'FAILURE' CHARGED

Says Britain Lacks Skilled Labor For War Materials

London, July 15 (CP-Havas) — Great Britain is arming against the possibility of a war which may come in two years, Lord Eustace Percy, former minister without portfolio in the Baldwin cabinet, told a meeting of Conservatives here today.

"Our rearmament has had failed during the past few years to 'look ahead' in questions of national defence.

"The whole of our production of war material is being delayed by a lack of skilled labor which could have been trained during the depression," he declared.

Great Britain formally has invoked the escape clause of the 1930 London Naval Treaty to add 40,000 tons of over-age destroyers, it was learned authoritatively today.

U. S., Japan Notified.

Sir Robert L. Craigie of the foreign office handed a note on the matter to the Japanese embassy. A similar note from an American official was handed to United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham.

The United States automatically stepped into British relation with an extra 40,000 tons and Japan 28,133 tons of destroyers.

Under the treaty, the destroyer holiday of the five nations were to be reduced by Dec. 31, to 150,000 tons each for Great Britain and the United States and to 105,500 tons for Japan.

Britain and the United States, despite the new increase, have other power tonnage which must be brought up or scuttled under the treaty by the end of the year, unless the escalator clause is invoked.

Latest figures available here show that Britain has a total of 304,000 tons, of which 85,000 tons is underage, compared with 180,000 tons now allowed.

The United States has 227,000 tons of destroyers, but only 80,000 tons of which is over-age, compared with 181,333 tons she is now entitled to keep under the pact.

Japan has 132,000 tons, of which 85,000 is under-age, compared with 181,333 tons she is now entitled to keep under the pact.

SETTLEMENT NEAR GERALDTON BURNS

50 Inhabitants of Hard Rock Take to Lake to Escape Flames

(By The Canadian Press)

Two forest fires assumed serious proportions, one community was wiped out, two others threatened and scores of fire fighters battled a score of other blazes as a dry spell provided a fine repast for hungry flames throughout Ontario.

In the Thunder Bay district, the village of Jellicoe was wiped out and its inhabitants forced to take refuge on Little Long Lac to escape the flames. Others in the area took others to safety before the flames reached them.

Geraldton was a danger-spot as flames swept down on many of the town's inhabitants were ready to evacuate. A special train and a number of cars were on hand to hasten departure if necessary. An improved wind, however, turned it as flames, before plainly visible, passed the town by.

A welcome wind from the northwest brought renewed hope to the fire fighters battling flames on the Canadian National Railways, 60 miles north of Fort Frances. The town had been directly in the path of flames spreading over a two mile front, and a fire-train standing by to rush the inhabitants out of harm's way should the town prove prey to the blaze. A shift of wind sent flames nearly east in another direction, and townsfolk believed they were safe unless the wind reverted to the south.

212 1-2 Gallons per Capita Used Daily During Hot Wave

7-Day Total Reaches Twenty One And Half Million Gallons

ALL FILTERED

If you were a resident water consumer of Belleville during the past week's heat wave you used during the seven day period an average of 212½ gallons of water each day for every man, woman and child.

During that same period during the record heat wave you have consisted in boosting the total consumption of water pumped from the local plant to an unheard of total of 2,646,000 gallons per week day. Average daily consumption reached 3,040,000 gallons per day.

Following a check made by officials of the local water works department these official figures were announced today.

Every Drop Filtered.

In spite of the unprecedented demands made by a thirsty, heat baked citizenry during the hottest week on record, the local plant and system emerged with flying colors. And, in spite of the constant demand which at times strained the system to its capacity, not a single unstrained water through the mains received the sanitary filtration treatment accorded in normal times. This, in spite of the fact that by order issued at an early hour, loads of the day water was pumped through the filter beds to keep up with the demand for water.

"We're controlled by standards in this matter. The water has to be treated to that standard set by the Ontario Department of Health. We test every batch that goes through and it has to be right," stated Manager P. T. Austin today.

Saturday last week saw highest peak of consumption reached, however, with a total of almost four million gallons pumped. This is about one and one-half million gallons more than the whole city of Oshawa used during the same period. It should be pointed out, despite the fact that Belleville has only about half the same population.

"If water consumers of Belleville had been as careless as they are in other cities, then our consumption would have run out about half," stated the manager.

Few Fires Today.

"Luckily we had no heavy fires, now were we bothered too greatly by slugs, generally encountered in time of the year. Our plant, with a total capacity of about four million gallons a day, was nearly pressed to the limit some days, and if we had had a fire there would have been trouble in getting enough pressure to fight it. Which means that consumers in spite of the repeated requests for less water, did not heed the generally keen services in some homes were on all night, just creating a deliberate waste of the water.

The worth of that filtration plant has never been more aptly demonstrated than during the past heat wave. Every drop of water, filtered and safe, was supplied to the thirsty thousands."

Trade Commissioner To China is Here

With a view to extending export trade relations between Canada and the Orient, Dr. Malcolm Taylor, Canadian Trade Commissioner for Australia, the Philippine Islands and Indo-China, was in the city and extended tour of Ontario, visited the city yesterday and conferred with several Belleville and Picton manufacturers. Interviewed by The Intelligencer expressed their intention to closely study and co-operate with him to the fullest degree.

Mr. Duclos, whose trade empire encompasses a population of nearly millions of people, has had a colorful career, including time to the fighting parts of the Orient. After the conclusion of his business here he left for Port Hope and Cobourg.

C. N. R. Whistles Mark Centenary Of First Engine

Montreal, July 15—A salute of thousands of engine whistles, which for the first time from one end of the Dominion to the other will mark the centenary of the start of the first Canadian railway train and the commencement of the second century of service by the Canadian National Railway. Instructions issued from headquarters here today that the whistles of all engines under steam throughout the National System are to be sounded for one minute at noon on Tuesday July 21st. All C. N. shops and round house whistles will join in the salute.

N. System. Just one hundred years later the engines of the system will echo the starting whistle of the Dorchester. The salute will be given by the engines of the first train on the line or in the yards, and will be heard by millions of Canadians.

SANCTIONS BASIS USED BY ITALY

Country Virtually Stays off Basis to Develop Independence

Rome, July 15 (AP)—Flag-draped Italy emerged today from 349 days of war sanctions with praise for Premier Mussolini's "secure guidance."

The Fascist party directorate celebrated suspension of the penalties for aggression in Ethiopia by sending Il Duce a congratulatory message which said:

"After the victorious epilogue of Italy's Ethiopian campaign, the indomitable will, the end of the League of Nations adventure is consecrated by the unanimous adhesion of the right of Fascist Italy.

"The goal has been reached in a far from slackening pace which imposes upon the march on under your secure guidance."

Display In Rome.

Mussolini ordered a nationwide display of flags to greet removal of the sanctions and rumbled into a secret conference.

Newspapers of Il Duce's speeches were reprinted amid columns of description of efforts to nullify the penalties imposed by Geneva.

Economic and political circles, however, viewed the end with more strain, declaring Italy will operate on a virtually sanctioned basis for some time to come.

Mussolini, to carry out his determination to make the country self-sufficient as possible, must reorganize industry and luxury imports almost to zero.

Consequently, it was said, rigid control over foreign trade must be maintained for many months. Formation of a new cabinet is expected more than a year before sanctions were voted against the Fascists.

LIFT SANCTIONS AGAINST ITALY IN CANADA TODAY

251 Day Trade Restriction Due to War is Ended

SUFFERED LITTLE

Italian Lessons Will Soon Make Appearance in Canadian Market

Ottawa, July 15—(CP)—Canada today lifted sanctions against Italy, ending the 251-day trade restriction dictated by her conformity with a League of Nations decision resulting from the Italo-Ethiopian war.

This nation suffered little in percentage of trade. The League obligation restricting trade and suspending credit relations with the Mediterranean corporate state.

Italian goods entered entry into Canada by sanctions, probably will appear in Canada's hot-weather drinks tomorrow. Several carloads were reported yesterday parked on the Canada-United States border awaiting the end of sanctions. They will probably be delivered today at destination.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported a sharp decline in Canada's commercial trade with Italy. Its figures showed a drop in the six-months period, December to May, of exports from $1,946,578 in 1935-36 to $951,626 in 1935-36. Imports from Italy declined from $1,-537,041 to $987,000.

Cession of Possessions May be Debate Subject Of Colonial Countries

Morning Post Predicts British Will Propose Conference

TO CREATE A POOL

Portuguese Affirms His Country's Opposition to Scheme

London, July 15 (C.P.-Havas) — The Morning Post predicted today Great Britain might propose the holding of a conference of colonial powers to consider the possibility of ceding some possessions to countries like Germany and Holland.

The Conservative paper was commenting on an interview given in Prague by Count Pirow, South African defence minister, in which Pirow said there could be no permanent agreement with Germany "unless Germans are given adequate compensation for their colonies."

"In order to forestall criticism back at home and abroad, it is quite possible that the British government will propose the holding of a colonial conference," said the Morning Post.

"At this conference, various colonial powers might each be asked to make some contribution, in the view to creating a pool from which the unsatisfied powers would be invited to help themselves.

Cause of Germany in Poland

"Thus Portugal and Belgium, having colonies adjacent to Africa, might be asked to cede part of these to Germany or Poland."

Edmonton, July 15.—(CP)— A baby boy, born with its heart exposed, is dead, 82 hours after he was born to Mrs. Fred Sadonek, 37, at Mundare hospital, Alta., hospital.

The three-day-old infant died suddenly last night, at the University Hospital here. Dr. W. W. Swatrich, who delivered the child early Sunday, had rushed it here for special care.

The baby's death had been expected by attending medical men. "It was bound to have occurred sooner or later," they said one physician specially. Earlier yesterday, doctors had said "it was just a matter of how long we can keep it going."

Dr. E. Hitchin, acting superintendent of the hospital here, announced the baby's heart exposed, because it had no chest wall, "thumped" against the clothes every beat.

Only the pericardium, outer coat surrounding the normal heart, protected the baby's heart. Ordinarily this coat damp as they endeavored to prevent infection. The heart's two main vessels at the top and one at the bottom were exposed as was part of one lung.

The exposed part of the heart was two inches in width and three inches long. The infant was normal otherwise. It weighed eight pounds and up until the time of its death cried lustily for food.

ORDERED TO SHORE BY CLUB OFFICIAL

Members of the local South End Yachting and Athletic Club have not been content merely with the revival of boating and yachting in this district since the reorganization of their club, but are also keeping a watchful eye open for the safety of boating activities.

As one example, two small boys who ventured forth in the harbour last evening with a shaky, low-sided craft were ordered to shore by one of the official scouts of their danger in the fitness craft. A drive against these homemade and dangerous boats is being made by the club.

Babies of the city have been numbered among the chief sufferers of the heat wave which the first break was noted today, according to nurses at the local Victorian Order who have been devoting a large part of their time to lessons and advice to mothers on hot weather care of the infants.

HEAT HELPS TO KILL POTATO BUGS

The heat, although it has pretty well shrivelled potato patches in the district has also made its effect felt upon the bugs, too, reports a local resident, and the potato bug has become simplified. All gardeners have to do is to trip them off the plants with a stick into the ground during the heat of the day where the sun and dried ground does the rest.

No Cases Arose Out of Day's Events

Magistrate E. J. Boulter K.C., today referred to a police court story appearing in yesterday's issue, which did not try any cases of intoxication rising from the previous day's celebration. We had five long charges against the city intoxicated and fighting on the park. Then there was a man from Stockgrill, who was allowed to go free. The other case was partial of a local alimentary, and came into court after a young man became intoxicated and was left with him. None of the cases tried before me were in any way connected with the previous day's activities", His Worship clearly pointed out today.

Obituary

MRS. LOUISA H. LEWIS

Mrs. Louisa H. Lewis passed away at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. C. F. Wallbridge, 197 Charles Street, on Monday, July 14.

The late Mrs. Lewis, who was in her 95th year, was the widow of John Lewis, who was a prominent Belleville merchant in that city for many years. She was born in Prince Edward County, her parents being the Rev. Richard Jones and Mrs. Jones. Sixty-five years ago she came to make her home in Belleville and for a number of years occupied a prominent place in the social circles of the city. Mrs. Lewis was indeed a gentlewoman of the old school, highly gifted of character and a pleasing personality which attracted close friends, many of the older of whom have passed on long since.

When age and health permitted Mrs. Lewis was a leader in the work of the Women's Christian Association being at one time a most efficient president of the Association and always a friend to the poor and sick. Over a long period of time she was a regular attendant at Bridge Street Church and took an active part in church work. She served well her day and generation.

Surviving her are two step-sons Mr. Frank Lewis of Vancouver, B.C., and Mr. Alfred Lewis of Victoria, B.C., two grand-daughters, Miss Louise Wallbridge and Miss Jean Wallbridge, Belleville.

The funeral will be private on Thursday.

MEN SEEK JOBS AT EARLY HOUR

Fourteen Men Chosen To Go on Construction Work

Appreciation of and satisfaction in securing one of those rare things, a job, is evidenced by the early arrival of unemployed men gathered in the Men's Employment Bureau office this morning. For information to the number of fourteen men were needed for construction work on the C.N.R. tracks at Keene, Ont., near Peterborough, and just been received by Bureau officials.

Men, hurried to the office to apply for the jobs with a few optimists hanging back in the hope that more lucrative and lengthy highway jobs would be forthcoming.

Thirty-five men made application with many being turned away and the list rapidly filled. The fortunate ones will leave for their destination at six o'clock tomorrow morning. A boarding car will supply their wants. It is estimated that the work will last for two weeks according to the Bureau.

We have been receiving the best of co-operation from the railroads in things of this nature, said an official. Whenever jobs open up in this district local men are always given the preference. Of course there are some who shy at any sort of a job and unless the men are willing and anxious to work at any sort of thing."

"It's my first job in six months," said a young man, "and am I tickled. I hope it lasts six or seven years," he smiled.

DIAMOND DRILL REPORTED STOLEN

Theft of Dynamite Believed Sequel To Other Thefts

While investigating the theft of eight cases of dynamite from the premises of the Canada Talc Company at Madoc yesterday, Provincial Constable Robinson discovered a subsequent robbery at Kaladar, where from a road construction company's camp a diamond drill and other construction tools were reported stolen.

The theft of the dynamite at the Madoc talc mine came somewhat as a sequel to thefts of dynamite from other mines and road construction camps in the vicinity of Madoc and Kaladar during the past few months. On these occasions dynamite has been reported missing in small quantities, but the last theft of eight cases brought sudden police action and definite clues and possible arrests were intimated by Inspector Gardner.

"We believe they have a definite conviction, that may result in the apprehension of those responsible for numerous thefts in the vicinity of mines and road camps near Madoc and Tweed recently," stated the Inspector.

PADDLERS HALT HERE FOR NIGHT

Burned to Bronze, Two Boys Call Trip 'Best Holiday'

Bronzed to a dusky tan from weeks of exposure to the sun and wind in an open canoe, James Bellwood and Edward Poole, youthful, weary paddlers of the open water trails on route from their home, Hamilton, to the Thousand Islands district for a full summer's vacation, hailed briefly in the harbor early last evening before proceeding east to a suitable camping spot for the night.

Wearing only bathing trunks and broad smiles, the two youths in their versatile canoe displayed with pennants and trophies, and carrying a tent and full camping outfit, declared the trip so far as the best holiday ever attempted".

Travelling only, when fancy dictates, camping at convenient localities when fancy prompts, and with utter disregard for time or place, the trekkers of the past week say are enjoying themselves to the limit.

No untoward incident has so far marred their trip, unless the exception of being run down by a lake freighter near Toronto harbor which loomed suddenly upon them in the darkness of night about one week ago, threatening to crush them in her wash as she swept by with a confused jangle of engine room bells and frenzied whistles of her stern can be counted. There was also the incident of the summer water-spout on the lake just off Whitby, which feathered into the sky, slipped past them dangerously just yards off the starboard bow.

Faith in their craft which is of the sportsman type and therefore non-capsizable, and filled with a small sail which carries them rapidly along before a following wind permits the youthful enthusiasts to enjoy real thrills to the full.

Should any eventuality occur, both are good swimmers and have thoughtfully provided their craft with light type life preservers as part of the equipment.

After camping at Massassaga last evening the boys expected to reach Kingston early this afternoon, on another lap of their journey.

REPORTS GIVEN TO KIWANIS CLUB

Recent Convention at Washington Described By Delegates

Reports of the recent Washington convention of Kiwanis International by Frank Domenico and Leo B. Riggs at the luncheon of the Kiwanis Club here last week were most interesting and showed that the delegates enjoyed their trip and at the same time renewed their faith in the work that Kiwanis is doing. Mr. Riggs drove on the trip to and from Washington, while the President gave the members some of the highlights of the convention. Secretary George Griffin, who was one of the delegates was unable to be present due to his recent operation but reports from that institution report the scribe as progressing favorably and ready to receive visitors.

Harold Selden, reported the fine conduct of one member of the club that of three dozen swimming trunks for the children, unable to provide the same for use at the Victoria Park and the playgrounds. Jack McIntosh was the donor and this is not the first time that Jack has assisted in Kiwanis promotion. Eddie Shapiro suggested that the club bring to the attention of the Police Commission the cumbersome and hot clothing that is worn by the local police and request, that summer uniforms be provided. The member also requested that the registration slips of the boys and girls to be sent to camp be handed in at once. Ernie Pinkle asked if anything had been done to place street lights on Victoria Park stating it was a disgrace, that the park was not lighted. Mayor Harry Hill stated, that a report was being received from the Hydro as to the cost of the work.

Trip Described

Leo B. Riggs in describing the trip to Washington, stated there were 2 total absentees of the 1,600 in the United States and that very little "panhandling" was noted on the streets of the larger cities. The members paid all the expenses in the land to the south. A description of the hotel at Gettysburg was given and the viewing of the spot where Lincoln made his famous address. Mr. Riggs expressed his admiration for the fine roads in the States, all the main thoroughfares being four lane traffic. The Sunday procession of the first light of convention were vividly described and the Boys' Band that was formed and their high praise. The meeting of the President of the United States on the White House lawn was one of the highlights of the trip. The party of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Domino and Mr. and Mrs. Riggs returned by way of Philadelphia, New York and the long moving New York the a book, the trip there was delightful.

Frank Domenico told of each session of the convention in detail and mentioned the fine address, the member expressing that the hospitality of the Washington Kiwanians, who sponsored the convention was the finest ever met with. He also criticized the election of officers stating, that in most cases the election was held before the delegates had a chance to vote for their leader. There was given sufficient entertainment for a convention of 1,600 and the special delivered stated the president was the one given by C. Edgar Chandler of the Boy Scouts of Canadigation of Crime. In all the addresses high praise was given Canada and the work, that Kiwanis Clubs were doing. The strength of the International was given as 1,800 clubs with 90,000 membership. The thanks of the club for the excellent report were expressed by Cliff Barragar.

AS FRENCH POLICE ROUT DEMONSTRATION

Paris police roll their capes and use them as effectual "weapons"—especially against the women—as they break up the anti-Blum demonstration of 15,000 rightists in the Champs Elysees. A battle royal ensued in which the demonstrators used bottles taken from cafe terraces, chairs, canes, etc. The men demonstrators received the worst of the police clubs and 31 were hurt. Sixteen persons were arrested.

FIFTY CHILDREN LEARN TO SWIM

Swimming Lessons Given Gratis at "Y" Show Results

Fifty little urchins, who just ten days ago were either frightened of the water or could not swim a stroke, today lunged, dived or fell into the swimming pool at the Y.M.C.A. in orderly fashion and either swam or splashed, quite successfully, their way across the pool.

The fruits of the annual summer swimming school carried on at the "Y" grab by Instructor Ralph Morden today reached its zenith as the teen aged lads demonstrated the results of two weeks of careful training at the "Y". Of course some of these smaller lads are still water-shy, but we find those, who proved backward at the time during the school, this year are the most proficient pupils and are leading the others," explained Mr. Morden today.

Mr. Morden divides his bulky class into three groups, allowing each group a specified time for their each exercise, while the remaining two groups disport themselves in the structures or those in the water. Special arm and leg exercises are given to those exercises, during which the kiddies are either clinging to the sidewalls of the pool or in shallow water beyond danger. The long shouts of the boys, who show eagerness to learn swimming, clearly demonstrate the success and value of a city swimming class for "teen aged boys in Belleville. "All of these boys were non-swimmers when our classes commenced two weeks ago", said Mr. Morden as the little urchins gave a splendid exhibition of swimming after only six lessons each. The system used by Mr. Morden and his two assistants is recommended by the National Swimming Council and is fast proving its superior form of teaching.

HEAT WAVE END HELPS BUSINESS

Unusual Volume of Trade Reported by City Merchants

Merchants of the city enjoyed a varied trade today which was reported as almost comparable in quantity with Saturday shopping. During the day streets were crowded with shoppers, many of whom had deferred purchases of needed articles for a whole week during the heat wave, while telephone and bureau offices all reported the same unusual volume of business for mid-week.

History of St. Swithin's Day

For forty days and forty nights rain fell over the town of Winchester, England, but 966 years ago today thus giving rise to the superstition which persists even to this morning. Only three residents made an appearance at the police station in search of sleeping quarters.

According to history, St. Swithin, from whom today's anniversary first of his name, a counsellor to King Ethelwald of the Saxons and a favorite of rich and poor alike, but his death requested that his body be buried in a common grave near the old church. Years afterward his bones were moved to a fine new church, but the removal was unlawful, but with the removal, rain started to fall and refused to stop for forty days. It is the superstition grew that it had been caused because St. Swithin's wish had been disobeyed.

Legend or not, however, local weather historians pointed to the fact today that as far as local history is concerned, this district has never had wath of such duration.

And if the rain does start about this time would about fill the bill, however," remarked the city's unofficial weatherman today, gloomily at clear skies in which no hint of rain has yet appeared.

POLICE BLOTTER

Charged with intoxication and generally disturbing the peace, Madison Jones of this city, was arrested on Front Street this morning after 3.00 a.m. today by P. C. Taylor following complaints regarding disturbances in that section.

Jones, a resident of that part, is alleged to have been a source of annoyance by knocking on the doors of houses along West Moira Street and awakening the householders. He was booked as a drunk and will appear in Friday's police court.

Two local youths were apprehended during on a bicycle built to transport one person. As this is a violation of the Highway Traffic Act, the two lads were instructed to report to the Chief Constables office. Despite police court warnings by Magistrate Boulter relative to this practice, local cyclists continue to risk life and limb by riding two on a bicycle on crowded streets and highways.

Provincial Police today are searching for a Chevrolet coach, bearing license plates number 34-2774. Persons seeing this vehicle should immediately communicate with the police authorities. Its owner Frank Gardner said this morning.

Local streets and adjacent highways were free from serious motor accidents during the past 24 hours.

39 WOMEN, CHILDREN REACH PORT ARTHUR

Port Arthur, July 14.—(CP) — Thirty-nine women and children from the Bankfield District reached Port Arthur yesterday as forest fires continued menacing wide sections of Northern Ontario.

The women and children were ordered to leave Bankfield as Mrs. G. Geraldion district 160 miles east of here, last night by Ontario Forestry officials.

Picton and District

Picton—Several hundred people, packed in cars, enjoyed a splendid concert on Sunday evening, at nine o'clock, on Macaulay Park, given by the Picton Band.

The beach at the Outlet was a very busy place over the week-end. Several hundred people slept there in cars Saturday night and the place hummed with activity until the early hours of Sunday morning. Booths did a rushing business in hot dogs, ice-cream, and hamburgers until a late hour. On Sunday afternoon the place was so packed with cars that finally no more could be accommodated, and many drove disappointedly away. The two mile stretch of beach along Lake Ontario at least looked cool, which was about all that can be said of any place during the last few days.

CANADIAN AUTHORS

Canadian Authors' Association boasts a membership of 800 native authors. Prof. Pelham Edgar, president, states that the creative genius which has aloof gradually diminishing. He calls their position unsound and forgives them if they are not passionately fond of meetings, but if they possess an element of intellectual snobbery in the attitude he cannot so easily condone their lack of action.

Dr. Edgar has admitted that possibly creative geniuses in literature may not be passionately addicted to meetings. That surely is one sign of their greatness for if ever a time was overridden with meetings it is this age when a meeting has to be called for every little interest. If meetings were not so easy to call, possibly they would be more effective. Everyone has heard of endless meetings reaching no-where while an individual may achieve real success as others are talking. Yet meetings do some good, there have to be some of them for the sake of "the united front" which Dr. Edgar seeks.

These eight hundred Canadians, members of this writing guild, must be achieving something. It is no doubt admitted that not the majority are creators for that title is reserved for the few interpreters of any land. But there is no doubt that a solid body of writers is to be found here. Dr. Edgar is the author of an outstanding work on the novel, which while not creative, is an excellent work of criticism.

MORAL CONSCIENCE OF GENERATION

Religion is in a bad way when it permits the moral conscience of its generation to outrun it, declared Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick at Riverside Church, New York, on Sunday. "The assumption of conventional pictures is that men ought to become religious to become morally better. The realistic fact, however, is that often the most important and far-reaching ideals and endeavors of a generation are pioneering on ahead while organized religion is behind, stuck in the mud or reluctantly dragging its feet.

"It is not difficult to understand why religion is thus tempted to let the best moral conscience of its time go ahead of it. For one thing, religion has the inveterate habit of making everything it touches sacred. It is easy to pass from bicycles to automobiles or even to airplanes, because religion having nothing to do with them, bicycles do not become sacred. But it is far more different to pass from one religious creed or ritual or ethical idea to another, because religion always adds the powerfully preservative feeling of sacredness.

"When therefore religion becomes entangled with a moral or social custom, like slavery, or with a political system, like that its ancient books slavery accepted or approved, there a powerful bulwark is erected against attacks upon the system. As late as 1865 a lengthy and fervent defence of slavery was written in our own country by a Bishop. Moreover that Bishop did not only say that slavery was permissible; he said that it was a sacred institution of God, ordained long ago since the best conscience of the nation, North and South, had gone beyond it.

"There is a kind of religion, which far from being left behind by morals, has been the pioneer of morals—prophetic religion. Repeatedly in history, far ahead of the moral conscience of the people, prophetic religion has raised a great revolutionary truth and then that truth, like a pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night, has gone ahead and morals have come stumbling after. One such vanguard truth was the idea that all men are equal before God, who is no respecter of persons. Another such vanguard idea is the belief in the essential dignity and infinite value of every human soul.

"The more a man is pushed from behind the less of a man he is; the more a man is drawn from before, the more of a man he is."

"I do believe one thing God wants from a man is that he be truly alive," said Rev. Dr. Frederick Norwood, of the City Temple, London, preaching at Broadway Tabernacle Church, Broadway and Fifty-Sixth Street, New York. "I accept the challenge with all due confidence, but I am getting very particular about the objective of my offensive. I won't recognize the offensive of men dressed in slightly different clothes than myself and marching under different colored rags. I do accept the offensive against the mechanized forces of nature and spiritual wickedness in high places. All half to that offensive until I find the life of God burning in our hearts and minds."

Dr. Norwood said that life has never been anything but a fight. "The world, devoid of life, is nothing but a machine and we are always trying to tame and subordinate it to our uses. Nature is helping and hindering now, but life is the force that changes and modifies. Man has learned to make use not only of his instincts but of the accumulated wisdom of the ages and so is able to control many of nature's great forces, cutting his way through continents and even "practising contraception upon nature or bidding her be fruitful."

Yet in many ways man looks more trivial than his fathers. Proud with his command over nature which he can hand to his will, so proud, so vain, so destructive. "Now we are becoming alarmed by the forces we are exerting. The wheel is the symbol of our domination.

"If growing food were our only objective in farming, no one would go hungry, but we want to make profit. We sell to those who have the most money, which means we sell our food to those who already have the most food.

"Our fronts are bristling with guns and threatening to vomit forth poisonous gases which would make nature's breezes feeble and ghastly. Men and women must learn to live. They must go back to the fountain of life which is God. We are in the universe to release the powers he has put here for the services of mankind."

THINGS TO FORGET

If you see a tall fellow ahead of the crowd,
A leader of men, marching fearless and proud,
And you know of a tale worth telling aloud
Would unashis proud head to in anguish be bowed,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a skeleton hidden away
In a closet, and guarded, and kept from the day—
In the dark—and whose showing, whose sudden display
Would cause grief and sorrow and lifelong dismay—
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a thing that will darken the joy
Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy,
That will wipe out a smile, or the least way annoy
A fellow, or cause any gladness to cloy—
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

KINGSTON AND BROCKVILLE GOT RAIN BY THE BUCKETFUL MONDAY. Kingston even got hail to cool off the super-heated temperature, while at Brockville harness races had to be postponed because of the heavy downpour. But the sun smiled warmly on Belleville and not an orange ribbon was dampened except the procession which ten thousand or more people celebrated the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne.

FOR TWENTY YEARS A THREE FOOT THERMOMETER hung beside the door leading to the office of J. E. Walmsley and Co., wholesale grocers, Bridge Street. Sometime Monday evening some late reveler whose blood pressure must have been abnormally high, thought it would be a good idea to remove the thermometer and carry the temperature away with him. Hence Tuesday morning the place where the thermometer had hung for twenty years was vacant to the astonishment of many residents who made it a daily habit summer and winter to get the temperature from this faithful old servant famed for never telling a lie in the twenty long years it hung on the wall recording the variations of the Canadian climate. Whoever removed it destroyed an institution and if discovered should be dealt with severely—make the punishment fit the crime.

FOLKS RECEIVING RELIEF FROM THE MUNICIPALITY OF DESERONTO in future will cease to be recipients of relief if they own a motor car, according to a resolution recently passed in council that "that any persons owning, driving or operating a motor vehicle be not eligible to be enrolled on the relief list until 12 months after they have ceased to drive or operate such vehicles. After twelve months on their own they should be able to get along without relief. But shucks, when it comes to a choice between our motor car and relief we'll just naturally take the car—for with-out the car how could we possibly collect relief, and walk about all over creation keeping ahead of relief jobs?

MEMBERS OF THE TWENTY-FIRST BATTALION, C.E.F., going to Vimy will spend some time among the crosses that stretch row on row over Flanders Fields, and a beautiful floral tribute will be laid on the grave of Col. Elmer Jones, O.C. 21st Battalion, who was fatally wounded while crossing No Man's Land with Belleville comrades. Boy and man, civilian and soldier, Elmer Jones was one of the finest.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 15th, 1916

A partial eclipse of the moon was visible in this city last night, between 10.18 p.m. and 1.33 a.m. Many citizens witnessed the strange phenomenon.

"A Canadian Soldier's Diary from Belleville, Canada, to Dranoutre Canada" is the title of little booklet recently published in England, copies of which have been received in Belleville. The booklet which was written and published by Private Arthur F. Johnston of Perth, gives an interesting account of the visit of the 39th Battalion from its headquarters in this city to the training ground at Branshott.

Mr. W. S. Mines of this city is spending a few days at Trenton.

Mr. Everett Mastin of Stirling spent the week end with friends here.

Carnew; Skipper, Bert Black; Mate, H. Diamond; Wheelsman, G. Valentine; Steward, George Grills; Assistant Steward, D. Watkins; Deck Hands, Ah. Thompson and A. W. Smith.

The old boys will be here a week from yesterday.

The forty-first annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons of Canada opened in the Grand Opera House here this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, with R. W. Bro. W. H. White, J.G. Grand Master, on the throne, and all the other Grand officers present. On the stage beside the Grand Master were seated a large number of Past Grand Masters. The grand officers and delegates then marched to the Grit hall where they put on their regalia, formed in procession and marched back to the opera house. The grand officers in their beautiful regalia presented a fine appearance and a large gathering of citizens witnessed the parade. Before opening of the Grand Lodge, Major J. R. Walmsley, accompanied by Alf. E. R. Palliser welcomed the Grand Lodge to the city. R. W. Bro. Arthur McGinnis, P.D.D.G.M., responded and the Grand Lodge on behalf of the local Masonic lodges. Anglican Rector Protests Selection of Chaplains

Ottawa, July 15.—(CP)—Rev. R. H. Steacy, rector of All Saints' Anglican Church of Westboro, Ont., and brother of General of the Chaplain services of the Canadian forces overseas, last night protested to the Department of National Defence for not electing a chaplain, representing the Presbyterian Church, to take part in the Vimy Memorial unveiling July 26.

The Department announced selection of three chaplains of the active Canadian Chaplain service.

"As a priest of the Church of England and an overseas Chaplain in the Great War I most emphatically and religiously protest against this cruel, thoughtless and unrighteous act on the part of the Department of National Defence", Rev. Steacy said:

"The three churches whose standing in the Great War demands recognition and representation are the Presbyterian, the Roman Catholic and the Church of England," he said. "The Presbyterian Church has been placed over, by the order of Scotland recognise that fact."

POISON IVY

"Poison ivy is more prevalent in Ontario than in other parts of the Dominion and summer tourists and campers should be well warned to acquaint themselves with the plant itself and with the remedies for poisoning," says Officials of the Health Leagues of Canada.

The plant may be found growing in a variety of situations and can best be recognized from the fact that normally it is arranged in threes, similar to the strawberry plant. Unlike the wild strawberry leaves, the ivy leaves are smooth and somewhat leathery in appearance.

The irritating oil from the plant produces a severe inflammation of the skin which spreads from one part to another causing blisting and scratching. It is important, therefore, that soothing applications be used as soon as possible. Ordinary cold cream salts solution and the antiseptic effect of a small sugar of lead solution is also beneficial. Isolated patches of poison ivy inflammation may be painted with a day with, a one per cent solution of Potassium Permanganate. If this stains the skin, but the stain may be removed by gently scrubbing with soap and water.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and Harvey came over last nite, and ma was saying to Gladdis, "There's the most fascinating questionaire in this number, it is a test to determine if a man to saver, and the generel result gives their rating as husbands, I thawt it would be fun to try it on your father and Harvey, the instants some of the questions are Do you remember the first present he gave you, and so on and so forth.

It sounds fascinating, Gladdis said. Let's get a pencil and paper and get started on it, she said, and Harvey said, Anyway I guess I know my rating as a husband without an examination, I'm perfect, and I can give you any number of examples to prove it, he said.

Gladdis said, Harvey, rating is perfect too, pop said, and Gladdis said, O hark to the lark, and pop said, no, of Irish parents. That, it seems, is a good combination. From the time when, at an early age, Mr. Maher entered the dairy business as a junior, his keen ability, push and initiative, together with a genial Irish personality, have brought him steady advancement. He studied every branch of the business—designing, manufacturing and selling. Thus equipping himself the best informed and most capable man in the Reliance Dairy Company Limited, it was inevitable that he became president and that is just what happened.

As president of the Reliance Dairy Company Limited, Mr. Maher had the vision to see the possibilities of a group of retail dairy stores as outlets for his company's products. The Maher Shoe Stores as they stand today are the result, first, of Mr. Maher's imagination, and second, of his initiative in making his dreams come true.

Founded in 1911, the Reliance Shoe Company Limited has grown from a small beginning to a position of importance in the Dominion of Canada, distributing quality shoes for men, women and children from coast to coast. With its large daily capacity the company controls the manufacture in Canada, six of such well-known brands of shoes as The Astor, The Allen, The Traymore, The Albert and The Canadian Boy for men and boys; the Galsbury, Smart Set, and Kirby Jane for women; Tippety Toes and Hygeen Boy Shoes, and they are exclusive agents in Ontario for Frank Plimsoll cushion-sole shoes for children (no connection with the Hurlburt Co., Preston).

With quality merchandise and the good will of the shoe buying public the Maher Shoe Stores under the continued able management of Mr. Maher appear assured of a good income in the future as this organization has enjoyed in the past.

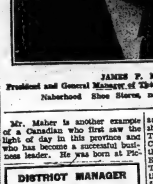
BELLEVILLE MANAGER

Born in Belleville, brought up and educated here, Allan Lennox is one of the type of young business man. He chose the shoe business for his vocation and began the study of foot comfort and welfare with the Leslie Shoe store, where he spent twelve years, then left the firm to become associated with the Reliance Shoe Company, Limited in Napiorhood Shoe Stores in Port Hope and Perth, and for the past two years has been manager of the Belleville Napiorhood store. Mr. Lennox has made a close study of footwear for comfort and took a course in Practipedics in Toronto.

R. P. Mowbray, Assistant Manager of the Belleville Napiorhood Shoe Store is a capable young business man with an intimate knowledge of the shoe business. Others on the staff are J. W. Bland, G. Forster, H. Carruthers.

BIG SHOE FIRM CHANGES NAME

Retail End of Large Canadian Shoe Business Takes Name of President



The shoe store, formerly known as Napiorhood Shoes, is now a Maher Shoe Store. In honour of the president and general manager of the company, Jamie Paterson Maher, this group of forty-five shoe stores has taken the name "Maher"—the name which means so much in the progressive management and steady growth of these stores in recent years.

Under the leadership of James P. Maher, this group of shoe stores, now known as the "Maher Shoe Stores," has grown to a major size shoe business.

Absolutely. For instants take breakfast. When your mother asks me to pass the sugar I practically never make her repeat the request more than 3 times and then I make a special effort to come from behind my paper and after passing her the butter I cheerfully rectify my mistake, he said.

I start in even before breakfast, Harvey said. On cold winter mornings I always thawtfully answer to Gladdis that she'd better get up and clean the bedroom becawse because I know she likes the room to be nice and warm before she dresses, he said, and ma said, O for land sakes they're all alike.

Mercifully, said pop said, Not at all, some are even better. For example take me. You can't deny that I frequently bring an unannounced front home to dinner with the most charming of the display of feminine beauty that can be found in the whole of Jersey City, and I'm constantly treating fact that I'm unusually late, he said, and Gladdis said, My stars they're rite, there's no use trying that alibi on me, so those 2, let's get started on bridge.

Weddings

ORR—HART

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hart, 102 North Front Street, was the scene yesterday afternoon of a very pretty wedding when Dorothy Ethel, only daughter of Bessie Mabel, Hartford, and the late Albert L. Orr, younger son of Mrs. Robert Orr, and the late Mr. Orr.

The ceremony which took place in the living room beneath an arch of colorful flowers and baby's breath was performed by the Rev. A. G. Sinclair, of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

The charming young bride, who was given in marriage by her father, made a lovely picture in her gown of white triple sheer, fashioned on long lines with high neckline finished with pleated ruffling, and long full sleeves, the long tulle veil was caught in cap effect and she carried pink roses. Miss Helen Wilson was bridesmaid and wore a becoming gown of shell pink triple sheer with fashioned on long lines. Her bouquet was of yellow roses and cornflowers.

Mr. Lorne Andrews, cousin of the groom, was groomsman. Wedding music was played by Mrs. Frank Rayfield, cousin of the bride, and during the signing of the register Mr. Rayfield sang "Chalice of You."

A buffet luncheon was served, following the ceremony, the guests being immediate friends and relatives. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Mr. Sinclair, and to the bridesmaid by the groom, the groomsman making the reply.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Orr left on a motor trip to Quebec, the bride travelling in a smart ensemble of yellow printed silk. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Both bride and groom are very popular members of the younger set in the city and the many beautiful gifts they received showed the esteem in which they are held by a large circle of friends.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon—One more outstanding weather item has been added to the list for 1936. However the farmers are quite optimistic. They think they have many things to be thankful for. The fall grain is fairly good. Hay has been a good crop. Corn is growing rapidly and with the rain approaching the Spring grain may be put to bed. The milk flow is decreasing but the price of cheese is advancing so much difference will be noted there. Those people residing on the Ridge Road are suffering intensely with the road dust. The traffic of late has been very heavy due to the fact that this is the shortest route from Madoc to Trenton. Hence the extra dust. A permanent surface seems to be the only remedy for this historical old Indian Trail.

Weather Conditions are Perfect for Outing

An armada of white winged craft filled with happy occupants pointed their bows toward the bay today headed for Massassaga Point, where the annual regatta of the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club will be held there today.

Purring power craft also laden with pretty basket-equipped pic-nickers, churned white waves in the bay to and from the Point during the day.

With weather conditions perfect for the outing, and with just sufficient breeze to make sailing races and other aquatic sports interesting, today's success was assured for future annual events.

The greater part of the day will be devoted to various land and water sports, with sufficient time out during the afternoon and early evening for the disposal of the large and complete lunches by the pic-nickers. For those who wish to attend the picnic during the afternoon or evening, a motor launch will be in transportation by water and boat has been arranged by members of the Club.

Not all the pic-nickers, however, arrived by the water route. Cars, too, held heir quota of outers, arriving by road within a reasonable condition.

The complete program of the day's events today has been carefully arranged during the past few weeks by the committee in charge, and will be as complete as the organization can make it.

HEAT WAVE IN WEST IS BROKEN

No Indication of Return of All Time High Records

Winnipeg, July 15—(CP)—Residents of the Canadian Prairies were confident today that the most severe general heat wave in the country's history had been broken.

While showers were reported in the last 24 hours only in sections of Southern Alberta, temperatures were moderate throughout the Canadian West and forecasts gave no indication of a return to the all-time high records established during the past ten days.

Medicine Hat, Alta., with a high mark of 94 yesterday, took over the unwanted distinction of being the Prairies hot spot, held the three previous days by Manitoba points. Inhabitants of the latter province were overjoyed as the thermometer became decidedly cooler following several thunder showers of Monday night.

Winnipeg recorded a high of 90 yesterday but this mark was well below the all-time high of 108 on Saturday and the 104 degrees reached on the two succeeding days. Elsewhere on the prairies yesterday temperatures were consistently in the 80's with Prince Albert, Sask., boasting a high of only 74.

Rain clouds hovered over Southern Alberta's parched farm lands in the Lethbridge district, 150 miles south of Calgary, was the only area to report a shower in the past 36 hours. Lethbridge had a downpour of 36 minutes in the afternoon and the temperature dropped nearly 30 degrees within a few minutes.

Edmonton, Alta., reported a heavy fall of the week upon Monday and the latest bulletin of the Federal Government crop report predicted damage to grain and to reduced yield of farmers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, were not as yet struggling at least part of their crops.

Six Persons Rescued From Burning Boat

Port Perry, Ont., July 15.—(CP) —Six persons, one of them a nonagenarian, were rescued from a burning launch by a motor boat party from shore in Lake Scugog last night.

Jack Smith, a local resident, noticed the flaming boat and rowed out to the rescue. Those aided, identified by Beatrice Sleep of Toronto, were those aboard, who managed to take an elderly couple, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart of Toronto, to shore. The latter's sister was also rescued from the boat.

A young man and girl, the other two on the boat, had jumped into the water and attempted to swim ashore. They were picked up by another boat, that came to the scene.

FIRE UNDER CONTROL

Geraldton, Ont., July 15.—(CP) —Reports today from Jonesville, one mile south of Geraldton in the Thunder Bay District, said a bush fire that threatened the little hamlet last night was now under control and little property damage was done.

Residents of the little Finnish settlement were fighting flames at one time—fled to the Little Long Lac mining property for safety.

Windsor, Ont., July 15 (CP)— Members of city council are not anticipating any trouble with aldermen this year. They turned down a company's offer to cover them on "loss and theft ornamentation" insurance.

Before they offer it to Queen's Park, suggested Alderman Thos. Bayeroft.

HIGHLIGHTS of HOME COOKING HISTORY

The "Million Dollar" ELEMENT

DURING the past 25 years, more than one million dollars has been spent in perfecting the famous HOTPOINT HI-SPEED CALROD ELEMENT. . . . After passing through the developmental stages of "open coil" and "can-in" elements—electric cookery has at last come into its own with this CALROD ELEMENT, made with non-deteriorating "INCONEL". The coil is not surrounded by any material which absorbs heat.

Every housewife who is interested in modern cookery is invited to visit our store and see these "million-dollar" elements which make it just as easy to clean as a pie plate . . . cook as fast as food will cook—and as easy to clean as a pie plate—and offer exceptionally economical long life. . . . If you are thinking of switching from old-fashioned, uncertain "fuel" cookery—be sure to see the new Hotpoint Ranges. Equipped with CALROD HI-SPEED ELEMENTS, they offer you clean, sure, trouble-free cookery for years to come. Why not decide to "go modern" and save money—the Hotpoint way?

G-MAN ON SPOT?

From a confidential source in the national capital it was learned that secret service agents are investigating activities of department of justice G-Men in the sensational kidnap cases they ended so successfully. Charges of shooting unarmed men and "double-crossing gangsters are being sifted, it was said. One investigating agent predicted that J. AT THE REGENT

"Till We Meet Again"
"If I Had a Million"

"England expects every man to do his duty".

This historic phrase sets the keynote for "Till We Meet Again" stirring story of a devotion to country that was strong enough to lead a man from the arms of his sweetheart. This mighty picture will be shown at the Bells Theatre as a two days engagement starting to-morrow (Thursday), with Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael sharing leading honors.

"Till We Meet Again" is a story of the War—but not of troops and cannon-fire—rather of the tortured suffering brought to the hearts of lovers, who realized that with the first blare of trumpets, their paths led them apart, probably never again to meet.

Marshall, an English actor, and Gertrude Michael, in the role of a Viennese actress in London, are madly in love, and plan to be married, just before the War breaks out. Mobilization wrecks these plans, and Marshall is sent by his fiancee to join his colors. She, unknown to her fiance, is a German secret service agent, and she, too, hurries to place herself under the leadership of her commanders.

Marshall's flimsy knowledge of languages causes him to be assigned to the Secret Service Division of the British Army! He penetrates into Germany disguised as a German soldier. On the verge of discovering secrets of vital importance, he is seen by Miss Michael, who accidentally gives him away to authorities, identifying him as an enemy spy.

The manner in which Marshall escapes from his German captors, and helps his sweetheart to evade the penalties which the Secret Service deals out to all agents who wish to break away from the service, furnishes the thrilling climax to this action-filled picture.

The supporting cast, headed by Lionel Atwill in the role of the German Secret Service chief and Hal Lahcorgn, plays the hero of British spy who sacrifices himself that Marshall may have a better chance to escape, is uniformly excellent.

And on the Same Program

Cast in various scenes of Paramount's romantic, dramatic comedy "If I Had a Million', which will be presented in addition to the above feature "Till We Meet Again" Thursday and Friday, matinee and evening at the Bells Theatre by return engagement by popular demand, are Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland, W. C. Fields and Alison Skipworth and Gary Cooper and Jack Oakie, the latter team having the support also of Roscoe Karns.

In addition to these stars, this exciting, emotional comedy drama also boasts other famous players such as Charles Laughton, May Robson, George Raft, Richard Bennett, Lucien Littlefield all appearing in impressive, and stirring and amusing roles.

"If I Had a Million" revolves around the sudden decision of Richard Bennett, a multi-millionaire, to fool his relatives and distribute his fortunes to a group of persons picked at random in a city directory. The manner in which these fortunate people receive their sudden wealth forms the riotous, romantic, pathetic and ironic plot of the film. Complete performances on the above two feature presentations and in addition a short musical gem "Meet The Colonel" commences each day at 2.20, 7.10 and 8.30 p.m.

Remember that the Bells Theatre is delightfully cool with a complete change of air every three minutes.

To-Night Only

Stuart Erwin, Irene Hervey and Lionel Atwill in the thrilling Mystery and romantic story "Absolute Quiet" and Little Jane Withers with Ralph Morgan and an all star cast in "Little Miss Nobody" a picture that you will long remember because of its highly amusing and emotional sequences, to-night. Last complete performance starting at 8.30 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Walking Dead"

What is proclaimed as an entirely new type of murder mystery thriller, now at the Capitol, under the startling title of "The Walking Dead," a Warner Bros. production starring Boris Karloff.

The picture deals with the resurrecting of a dead man, who walks again among his fellow men, waiting in a half dream, dazed, but possessing an unfailing and seemingly supernatural power to recognize the members of a band of crooks he had not known before as the persons who had framed him for murder and caused him to be electrocuted for a crime he did not commit.

The method shown in the picture for reviving the dead man parallels the experiments of Dr. Robert Cornish, the Berkeley, Calif., scientist, who claims to have brought a dead dog to life, and those of Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute and 4 Nobel prize winner.

The tipping table used by Dr. Cornish and the electrical appartus has been duplicated in detail and under the supervision of experts. So also was duplicated the "Liodbergh Heart," a living pulsating thing, invented by Dr. Cornish & Lideberyh, who assisted Dr. Carrel in his experiments.

This is the first time either of these reanimating mechanisms have been shown on the screen.

The claim that this picture will make the chills and thrills creep up the spine as no other film has done, is amply justified, not only by its theme, but by the fact that it was directed by Michael Curtiz.

Reacted by a brilliant cast, the characters stand out on the screen with startling vividness. Karloff, famous for his terror pictures, has the role of the walking dead man.

"F Man"

Also as an added attraction, with laughs galore, "F Man" rounds out a double bill worth seeing.

Put together a large cast of comedy favorites, headed by Jack Haley and William Frawley, a liberal dose of good-natured "kidding" of the sura of mystery which surrounds the "G Men"; and one of the funniest comedy situations ever brought to the screen—and you have "F Man", the hilarious comedy which opens today at the Capitol Theatre.

"F Man". in case you didn't know, is a word-for "G Man". Haley's work his way up the alphabet from "F to G" in the commission where William Frawley, a "G Man" with a habit of playing practical jokes, has his office. Haley is a soda jerker whose only ambition in life is to be a G-man, and that's the Haley takes his appointment seriously—so seriously that in trying to put over a specially brilliant piece of work he captures Public Enemy No. 1 single-handed, he not only upsets the careful plans of the "G Men" for the thug's capture, but also succeeds in slipping some very effective knockout drops into a malted milk being drunk by the Chief of the Department of Justice.

Corbyville Squad Draw First Blood in Playoff Series

The CIACO "Say Corbys" softball squad drew first blood in the special play-off series in the Industrial Softball League, when the Corbyville outfit defeated the Corbin "Blackmakers" 8 to 1 at the Yeoman Street grounds last evening. The game was a pitchers' duel, Cleo was in rare form as he limited the Corbin gang to four small hits, no two coming in any one inning.

The Ciaco nine batted around twice in the ball game in the first frame to score five runs and assuming the lead. Corbyville waited to take advantage and coasted through to victory. The second game of the two-out-of-three game series will be played at Corbyville on Thursday evening. Boyle, Moon and Sleeth man were the big willow-wielders for the Ciacos, while not to a single Corbin batter counted over one hit from the deliveries of Kiser. H. MONTREAL ROYALS MAY DUPLICATE FORMER STREAK

Equal Best Winning Streak But Can't Make Any Progress

Leafs Win From Albany in Night Game At Toronto

(By The Associated Press)

Led by Jake Wade, the southpaw "farm hand" from the Detroit Tigers, the Montreal Royals appear to be out to duplicate their winning home stand of last May, which carried them into the International League lead. They hung up nine victories in ten games then.

During the past week or so the Royals have equalled their best winning streak—six straight— and by turning back the Baltimore Orioles 6 to 4 last night made it seven victories in eight starts. Still they haven't been able to climb out of fifth place and the lead looks farther away than ever, with the Rochester Red Wings hanging up their eleventh straight triumph, a 6-4 decision over Newark's Bears.

Wade, the drifting force in Montreal's flight, hung up his third straight victory of the new streak last night when he gave only eight hits to the Orioles and struck out 13. Woodley Abernathy's 24th home run and one by Walter Gebbs gave the Birds three of their runs. In his two previous starts Wade had blanked Rochester and pitched a four-hitter against Newark.

Rochester's victory laid a few more dividends when 16,000 fans turned out to see the Wings shove Newark down into third place. Trailing 5-1 in the sixth despite Bob Weiland's 19th circuit clout, the Wings collected their winning tallies in two frames.

Buffalo blasted out an 8 to 1 victory over Syracuse in the afternoon. A four run blast in the third and homers by Johnny Dickshot and Marvin Owen gave Pitcher Orrell Sewell a comfortable working margin.

The Toronto Maple Leafs, who have found night games to their liking, came back to the right combination, turned back the Albany Senators 7-6 even though Bob McFarland had a big night at the plate for the Senators with a homer and three singles in five times up.

PERTH ROYALS REALLY "HOT"

League Leading Ottawa Squad Could Only Tie Perth

(By The Canadian Press)

Perth Royals, in the midst of a winning streak, appeared today to be a tough outfit for anybody in the Canadian-American Baseball League to stack up against, including league-leading Ottawa Senators.

Senators could do better than tie the Royals yesterday in an eight inning affair that was halted by darkness. A seven-run rally gave the tying run for Perth in the eighth inning. Meanwhile Cornwall outhelped Ogdensburg 10-7 while Massena and Brockville agreed to postpone their game.

Ottawa started out with a three-run lead in the first inning when Duke Denehe hoisted the ball for a homer and Cornwall crossed the plate for two more runs. Sperrick gave Perth some hope in the next inning, scoring their first run.

Both pitchers, Grabowski of Perth and Manager Jerome Ottawa, were yielding only seven hits each during the game.

Royals earned two runs in the seventh to even matters but Ottawa forged ahead again when Schearer crossed the plate on Duke Denehe's long fly. Tarleski then scored on a pass ball to save the day for Perth. Royals were good for 11 hits while Ottawa batters banged out seven.

Relief pitching by Kunes backed by heavy hitting brought Oswego an easy win over Ogdensburg as their pitcher, Nichols, weakened in the last four innings. Ogdensburg led by two runs at the end of the fourth after reaching Turkson for six hits.

Colts rallied to pick up five tallies in the last four innings while their pitcher, Kunes, held Ogdensburg to two hits. Kunes stamped himself as Oswego's big gun in the contest by earning three runs, one a homer.

Terry Moore, Outfielder, Hurt And Will Be Out For Few Days

TIGERS LOSE CHANCE

Lose to A's While The Yankees Had an Off Day

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer)

For Frankie Frisch, the Mickey Cochrane, it never rains but it pours, as far as the bad breaks of this baseball year are concerned.

It's getting so now, what with Dazzy Dean's ailing arm and Dizzy Dean's head hurt, that no one can blame the peppery pilot of the Cub Bruins if he begins to feel a little down on his luck.

The team's worry list only worries, for with the lump Surgeon Whitehead's line drive left on Dizzy's head last Saturday barely subsided to normal another batted ball took Terry Moore, outfield star and heavy hitter, out of action.

A freak hop by Brooklyn Babe Phelps' hit into the outfield sent Moore to the sidelines yesterday with an injured groin, out for a few days, at least. Terry's outfield mate, Pepper Martin, saved the day for the Cards, however, with a four-run homer in the last of the ninth for an 11-7 win over the Dodgers.

The Cards' look some solace in the victory, as Dizzy Dean may be back to pitch today, and since yesterday's triumph leaves them only a few percentage points back of the league-leading Cubs, who made it three out of four over the New York Giants with a 5-1 decision.

Cochrane Returns to Team

Also scheduled to return to the baseball front today, along with Dizzy Dean, is that other hard-luck guy, Mickey Cochrane, who will join his Detroit Tigers for a doubleheader with the league leading Yankees in New York, after a morning rest cure for his jangled nerves.

He is not expected to play for a few days, however. The Tigers lost a good chance to pick up ground on the Idle Yanks yesterday by failing against hard-working Harry Kelley, of the Athletics and piling down 10-3.

Clouting Cleveland Indians clinched the not so glittering Red Sox out of the first division and moved up to fourth place with a 5-2 win for a clean sweep of the series. Sensation Sigfried clouted the grip on third place, finding the Chicago White Sox in trouble and emerging on the long end of a 13-3 count.

The Phillies, who seem to be finding themselves to some extent, smothered slipping Cincinnati Reds, 9-8, while Woody Jensen's homer and Mace Brown's four-hit pitching enabled the Pirates to come from behind and stop the Braves 5-3.

U. S. Athletes Sail For Olympic Games

New York, July 15 (AP)—Hounded all the while by pressing financial obligations, 334 of the U.S. Olympic team's 383 members boarded the liner Manhattan today to sail for the Berlin games.

It took a good deal of private and public cadging to do it. But the team sails with its own expenses clean. An obligation of about $20,000 for running expenses remained, but there was even some hope that this might be wiped away before the games are over.

The team is scheduled to reach Berlin July 26. This will give six days of practice before the games start August 1.

Only three members of the women's swimming team were still trying early today to get the money necessary to go. These were Ann Cumming of Rodenio Beach, Calif.; Jeroldine Dickinson and Elizabeth Ryan, both of New York.

Hubert Smith of Kingston Moves Up In Boxing Tourney

Montreal, July 15.—(CP)—From the thinning ranks that will emerge tonight from three long sessions of leather battering, Canada will select the boxing champions to represent it at the Olympic games.

Nineteen hopefuls from scattered sections of the Dominion were eliminated last night in a varied program that saw three technical knockouts and one prompt KAYO.

Ontario scrapped hard most during the second-round preliminaries as 11 of them took beatings. Five Quebecers moved to the eliminines, two Maritimers and two Albertans accompanying them.

With the defeat of Gerald Parent of Saint John, N.B., and Win Holm of New Waterford, N.S., the Maritime hopes were left in the flailing fists of Canada's featherweight brother, Freddy. To the older Parren went one of last night's knockouts.

Defeat of Simonsbon's highly-fancied Jerry McPeake and Billy Pollard left the experts slightly dazed. Pollard entered the lightweight division before the superior boxing skill of Montreal's Walter Cave, while McPeake lost a disputable decision to Johnny Strathearn of Ottawa in the light-heavyweight class.

But Western Class still had a powerful group in the bid for titles. Hamilton Featherweight Champion Bill Marquart of Winnipeg, had a second straight victory to his credit and along with Jack Hill, of Regina, semi-finals will be Red St. Julien of Regina.

Kingston Man Survives

Last of the Montreal fighters, who for the most part showed consideration of all classes, were Mickey Hennessey, "Baby" McLeod, Ray McIntyre and Rollie Potvin.

The Heavyweight Division, limited to a semi-final and final by lack of entrants, features Montreal's Tommy Osborne and Tommy Burns and George Bird of St. Catharines.

Robert Smith's clever boxing won him a decision over the hard hitting Raymond Desnoit of Montreal. Smith, resident of Kingston, who holds the Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec Featherweight championship, was unable to match the French-Canadian's heavy punching but he displayed a neatly effective and smart defensive. Undaunted Regan ground Desnoit who was slow to get in his punches though they often jolted the Kingston boy, when they did strike.

Schmaltz a Winner

Gordon Schmaltz of Kitchener, pounded out a decision over George Law of Cornwall, Ont., in a slow Welterweight event. Both are clever fighters too tired to do much damage. Schmaltz's Lefty Law through the last stages of the bout, arms drooping, fought against one another. The stocky Kitchener boy had Law at his mercy many times but had not the punch to put him out of the way.

Billy Chiasson, a giant Red Gaelph, took a punishing defeat at the hands of Smith. Chiasson was pounded against the ropes with much of the second round and was staggered at least seven times. It was a repetition of the same performance given in the two previous bouts Potvin pinned him against the ropes and hit him mercilessly.

Three times Chiasson went down and once stayed down to the count of seven but dropped instantly to his feet and landed a few punches before he was knocked back through the ropes when the referee halted the fight. Gordon Richel, Regina, won a decision over Otello Mattinucci of Guelph.

Ontario's heavyweight champion and former Canadian Light Heavyweight title holder, Herb Clement of Kirkland Lake, took a comparatively easy decision over Harry Bray of Montreal. The Northern's steady right hand gave him a distinct lead over his opponent, who had the advantage of a longer reach but got little opportunity to make use of it.

Three local athletes, Bud Johnston, Dord Derry, Trenton, and Ralph McCabe were named as camp leaders for the Ontario Athletic Commission's athletic camp at Lake Couchiching recently. The three local lads are all students at the Belleville Collegiate and also take an active part in all school sports. The notice of the appointment of the three local lads was announced by W. J. "Peeney" Mills local representative on the Ontario Athletic Commission, who also made a personal trip to the camp at Lake Couchiching last week end on business.

A subsequent order for some 75 additional Olympic blazers was received by the Beacon Shirt Company yesterday. The original order was for 161 blazers. The coats are of the very best material obtainable in McGill scarlet, trimmed with white and will be worn in Berlin by the wearing "Canada, 1936 Olympics."

The local printers' softball team will launch out on Saturday and take on the fast printers' team from Kingston. This Kingston-Belleville softball series, of home and home games, has been a big annual event for some years and the boys look forward to it as a tournament of fun and entertainment. No person seems to care who wins or by what score, the main idea being to hit the ball as far and as often as possible. Naturally being printers they do not move about much agility, but sooner or later the ads is retired regardless of how many hands are employed, the teams call quits when it gets to the point that the hits for the bases are run out, singles being regarded as automatic outs, "I'll sumpin.' At any rate the printer boys intend to have their turn at the Cricket Field on Saturday regardless as to whether the Giants or the Cardinals are battling for first place or not.

Regarding the Napanee as Peterborough O.S.H.A. game on Saturday had the Lifluck City sport scribe had the following notes: Napanee had a few players on the first beat. Scarlotti came up with a runner on first and whammed the ball out of the park. Napanee won his home game. One of the terms in a whistling Rose Bowl, Napanee will be represented in the Rose Bowl by several feet in deep left. That is a noble ruling and only seen in Riverside once in as elderly dog's age. Card promptly followed with a hard smash to the right that bounded through the bushes and landed in the water at the edge of the bank. Both were labelled four-baggers in any park in the loop. In fact, Napanee's scorer in Riverside than any field in the circuit."

Considerable controversy was registered by the Oshawa sports writer recently when he considered that, that it was the official scorer's place to rule whether a run should be scored, second. That a run should have been counted on a certain play that cropped up during the Napanee-Oshawa game at Oshawa recently. Tops in distance the Oshawa scribe is all wet. The umpire-in-chief is the only person to say whether or not a run scores and not the official scorer. Interesting information, regarding the second part, however, is that Jack Kelly has been appointed the editor of the St. Louis Sporting News, an institution that has held recognized organ of organized baseball, with the result that Jack will again be the Oshawa scribe was wrong.

The situation arose as follows:—Two runners on bases, one out in the first and second with two out. A ground rule of two bases was in effect for a thrown ball into right and left field. As he tried to nip the Napanee runner on first, the latter apparently failed to touch second base. Now it seems the Oshawa official scorer ruled that he touched second base, after the previous runner had scored. Oshawa scribe contends, that due to the fact second base was not touched by the first runner scoring, no run should be scored as the runner on first had to be forced to second. We sent the question to the Sporting News and here is the answer: "Run counts if runner has crossed plate before third out is made. Don't see in this case not being a force. Play being retrospective and no bearing in this case." Run counts." There you are Georgie old Chappie, whether you like the race for first place between the old Charlie Good of the Toronto Star has to say is the matter.

Today the Belleville seniors are in Napanee and can climb out of the cellar position with a win over the locals, is equally as close as the race for first place between the Ponies and Chevies, who clash today at Kingston in a crucial game.

Gerald Berring's Class nine Lacas, Pirates, 7-1; showed too much class for the Carleton Athletics in the Industrial Softball loop play-offs last night when the Berry'Ms nine stepped into town and trimmed the "feckless" nine 11 to 1 right in their own back yard. The second game of the play-off series, to determine which team will be given fourth place and the right to continue into the league final play-downs, will be played at Corbyville Thursday. Elmer, the Carleton pitcher, was real hard to face last night, and his teammates played a stellar game behind him. Should the softball league re operate in Belleville this fall season has proven highly successful, not a single protest or disputing point being heard on the league controlled along in an amicable atmosphere, no soldiers rolling on the ground.

Regarding the recent story Joe Louis being doped, Mike Jacobs, who controls Joe Louis's destiny, said Louis as saying: "The only time I was doped was when Schmeling hit me with that right hand in the fourth round." Amen.

The Missing Man

-:- by -:-

Mary R. P. Hatch

"Then Mr. Hamilton returned with straightforward story of loss of memory as the reason for his detention from home and, very honorably, settled up the bank troubles, as he said, he could absolutely affirm that he had not done what was alleged of him for he knew nothing of his acts after he left Grovedale on the fifteenth of May. Mr. Carter and his children received him with open arms. Not so his wife. She preferred to doubt him. A full examination took place before Justice Bailey, and afterwards the grand jury took cognizance of the case, but dismissed it. Mr. Hamilton took up his place in the mill and in the community, unchallenged by a soul except his wife. Reports were brought in him of her affection for the man known as Ross, but he paid no attention to them, except to call him to the office and warn him against being seen on his premises.

"In about a week afterwards Eder was shot down by some one unknown, probably by Ross himself, in wanton suspicion against Mr. Hamilton. He was ill for three or four weeks afterwards, and when he was partially recovered he professed to recollect that he was Hamilton instead of Ross. Mrs. Hamilton professed to believe his statement, or at least did not deny his claims. Proof would be offered that before his illness she wrote him a letter calling him her dear husband, and signing herself Calla Lily, as she sometimes did in her letters to her friend. Being a pet name applied to her fair, stately beauty when a school-girl.

"This letter was found by Detective Swan, or rather by Mrs. Fry, in the lining of Hamilton's hat through his efforts, and he transmitted it to Detective Swan. It would be produced in court in due order of the testimony. The rest was known,—the claim to Mr. Hamilton's estate and finally. At this point nothing would be said about the motive, which was only too apparent, but claims must be made to a serious charge against Mercy Ashley, alias Primus Eder, for the murder of his wife, the beautiful, unfortunate Lenora, who died of poison two weeks previous to the claims set up by Eder. She received by mail a poisoned ring, and was asked to wear it in remembrance of her husband, who would soon return to her. The name signed was Henry Ashley, and it had been proved that after wearing the ring a week she died. The body was buried, but afterwards disinterred, and it was proved that she was poisoned by the ring, without doubt. This charge would be proved by competent witnesses to be true. It was very startling when taken into account with Eder's infatuation for Mrs. Hamilton, and his claim that she was his wife.

"You will see how diabolical was his plan, and you can also see his motive. But for his love for Mrs. Hamilton he would never have dared to thrust his claim before the public; but as Samson was shorn of his strength by the fair hands of Delilah, so has many a weaker man been robbed of his reason by love of woman. Mr. Hamilton's course has been straightforward throughout. Having nothing to conceal there have been no efforts at concealment. He warned Eder not to come near his house, as you or I would have done. But when he heard the shot fired he jumped from his bed, rushed out, saw that he was lying wounded upon the ground, and forgot his displeasure in doing all he could for the sufferer. Mr. Marjo is a respectable man, who known to the Hamilton family in early life, and as an old acquaintance was kindly received by my client. He has followed the calling of book agent and lingered a few days in Grovedale till a consignment from the publishers should arrive."

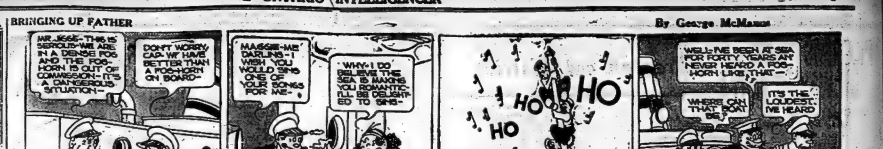
Mr. Ferguson then called attention to the strange fact—of the plaintiff's plea of lost identity, so evidently based upon that of the respondent's. It was a most unusual thing to happen to any one, only a few cases being known, and yet here was a second man in the same town laying claim to the same malady. Was it not too absurd for belief? Only a man laboring under great emotion would have been led to such an absurd claim, and only a woman's villain would have sent a poisoned ring to his wife to have got rid of her so that he might lay claim to another woman. It was a bold scheme, a suicidal scheme!

Mr. Ferguson spoke with earnestness and eloquence, well sustaining his reputation, and he was listened to with marked attention by every person in the court-room. The counter-charge of murder against the plaintiff created no little excitement, among those who now learned it for the first time. Many recollected hearing about the beautiful Mrs. Anderson, supposed to be Isabora Ashley, who registered at the Rossi House the night before Mr. Hamilton went away, and they knew that in some mysterious way she appeared to be connected with his disappearance. Indeed, in so-intricate a case it was not surprising that the popular mind should fail to understand it.

But one thing seemed very plain after Mr. Ferguson sat down, even before a witness was called, that Primus Eder was trying to wrest from Vane Hamilton his family and property, and that Mrs. Hamilton was guilty of aiding and abetting him. Mr. Ferguson had lightly touched upon her evidence, so lightly as to make it appear to be considered it absurd, particularly the claim that she could detect people by "individual odor." Was anything of the kind ever broached at a trial, and would it not, sometimes, if there were any reason or precedence for it? And was she not clearly prejudiced? He waited the motion away as if it had been a thistle-down, and made it appear that he said as little as he could about the lady in deference to the wishes of the respondent, her husband.

Space will not allow me to go over the details of this case as I could wish. I can only give its general bearing and effect on the public mind rather than upon those particularly engaged in it. The sympathy was manifestly for the respondent, only for a short time during the eloquent opening speech of counsel did the attention of any person look the stand and prove by their evidence what had been claimed by Mr. Ferguson, there was little doubt which way the case would terminate.

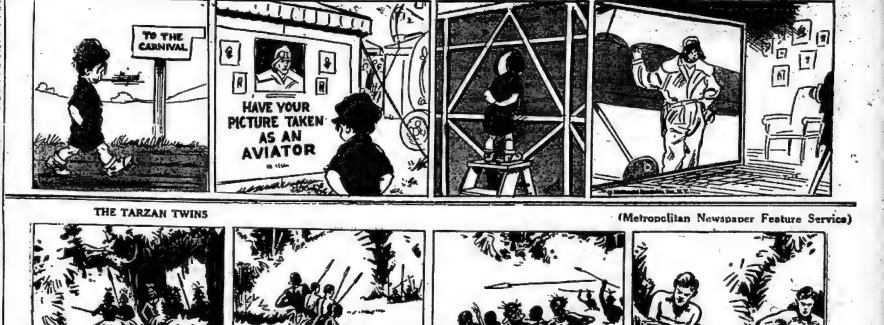
Mr. Nurd's testimony made it almost conclusive that it was Thursday, instead of the Friday before, that Mr. Barnstead witnessed the meeting between the two men; and the witness from Valparaiso, and the photograph, proved that the sheriff who arrested Ashley looked much like the person described as Mr. Barnstead. It seemed evident that it was the meeting of officer and criminal which he witnessed rather than that of two brothers, as claimed by the prosecution. Simon Low testified to that the plaintiff's voice was like the one that spoke to him on the day the altered note was presented, indeed, seemed much more familiar than the respondent's.



Mr. Morley cross-questioned him trying to elicit the declaration that, as he knew Mr. Hamilton better than the false claimant, his voice would be more familiar. Therefore the plaintiff was the true Vane Hamilton, because his voice was more familiar. But Mr. Low would not own to this deduction, and as it was a little too subtle reasoning to commend itself to the public understanding, it passed unnoticed. Mrs. Hamilton's letter signed Calla Lily was produced in court and sworn to as genuine. Even she did not deny it. But said it was one she wrote to her husband, at least a year ago, and she preferred to believe it additional proof that the claimant really was her husband.

"How else could he get possession of it?" she asked, looking at the lawyer.

"The respondent claims that it was written lately and to Eder himself," said Mr. Ferguson.



"No, but I never called him my husband—never! she said, turning indignantly to Mr. Bruce. It will be recollected that Constance had her hand on that very letter, and that Mrs. Fry spoke of the signature as in two parts, and Bruce as a flower-name. Two witnesses from the neighborhood where Mrs. Ashley resided testified to the manner of her death, and the curious report as read in court. The letter written by her husband they stated could not be found, but one witness, a woman, Mrs. Mant, testified to having seen and read it,— that Mrs. Ashley showed it to her and the ring, on the day of its receipt.

At the close of the testimony for the respondent it seemed a clear case in his favor, and, as the public judged, it must so appear to the jury. Still, the interest did not slacken, and on the morning of the seventh day of the trial the court-house was thronged to hear the closing arguments by the counsel. All of the principal persons interested in the case were present except Mrs. Hamilton, who was suffering from exhaustion. But the claimants were both there,—both erect, keen-eyed, and determined. Indeed, the resemblance was more marked than it had been on any

First Break in Week of Excessive Heat Wave

Northwest breezes fanning the city and district with cooling breath and an appreciable drop in temperatures which set in early last evening, brought relief to a heat-ridden people, and came as the first break in the unprecedented heat wave which held sway for the section for over a week.

Lowest temperature late last evening and early this morning ranged from a high of 56 to a lowest of 52, while 24 hours of the hottest highest registration recorded was only 78 degrees, a welcome drop of yesterday which wilted collars and tempers of perspiring residents and disappointed those with hopes of the return of the strong breezes.

Rain for the city, as over a week last night citizens enjoyed a comfortable sleep. Parks and back yards which were a haven for camping out places of those escaping the intense heat of baking rooms were deserted. It was actually too chilly to sleep in comfort in the open. For the first time also, even bedroom sleepers used sheets as covers while the mercury dropped.

Rain is all that is needed to complete the picture for a perfect and well being now experienced by district residents.

He was introduced by Mr. Jack MacGregor of Belleville. As the subject of his speech he chose "What I would say to Between Home and School." He said "the children of today are living in two environments. "The teachers know nothing of their home training and the parent knows nothing of the children's school training." A centre should be built where the children and parents should foregather so as they can learn how to handle the children. Something has got to be done or else the child of today will not have a character," Mr. MacGregor said. Children should not be taught to love work, love play, love discipline and love etiquette," the speaker stated. "Encouragement is what they need, not the rod," he said. "Praise is to be expressed, that it be had his way, the school will not be a success. Every competitive examinations or scholarships should not be given to marks alone. The child would be judged by the parents that he came from and the marks gained a vote of thanks. As was decided upon Dr. J. Johnson, Minister of Belleville Municipal Band was present to discuss plans for such a concert in Trenton. He told the Rotary, "Belleville and Trenton should get out to make a name for themselves this year and would not only present some good music but also Highlanders and Villages adjoining Belleville and Trenton to raise enough money so that we can purchase new uniforms." Board Room Gossip

Position of Gold

"The position of gold seems to be getting more complicated than ever. It is a very curious coincidence that those countries which have increased most of the gold reserves in the world, namely the United States, Switzerland, France and Belgium, are the countries which are most afraid of their currencies being further inflated. Whilst the accumulation of gold in England is only a matter of book entries, it has actually necessitated further borrowing.

Toronto Mines Close

Toronto, July 15.—(CP)—Lower priced golds were in demand on the broad advance on the Toronto Mining exchange today but increases were mostly nominal. Preferred issues Nickel moved against the trend and lost ¼ to 3/4 point. Pref. did a better tone gaining ¾ to sell at 30¼ and Cl.B. at 29¾. Traction issues also were a little higher. Walkers gained ¼ to 33 for the only notable change in the industrial list. Papers were duller and unchanged with the exception of the McColl issue which softened fractions. Bell Telephone dropped 1¼ to 147 and Imperial Oil utilities including B. C. Power, Union Gas and United Pref preferred issues showed a high all round.

Canada Cement preferred moved forward 2 points to 79, new top price. Canadian Dredge, ex-dividend, lost a point.

Canada Packers held a 3-point advance made on Friday as did Fanny Farmer, Canners and Consolidated Bankers were up.

Bank Outlook Improves

During the last half of the year an improvement has occurred in the banking picture in this country, the full import of which has yet to be grasped by the popular mind, writes Wood Gundy and Co. in their general nature, there have occurred several developments of special importance.

Buys In Canada

A large sum of money has been a heavy buyer of General Motors shares in Canada recently, and the purchase of 10,000 shares by this party in question makes it a practice of filling such orders in Canada. Such purchases have involved several millions.

Dome Mines

Among the Canadian companies Dome Mines Limited is one of the most conservative. Both as to gold production and company's shares have been unusually steady. In 1935 it had a very recent price at 84, in response to reports of successful development work. The stock sold at 85 and 86 recently. Other sales included small lots of cows selling from $2 to $3, with a few bulls bringing $3.50 to $4, a few good feeders were taken at $3.75 to $4.00, with a few choice stockers sold at $3.60. Indications were that the large holdover would not be greatly reduced.

The calf market opened at $7 for tops but dropped 50 cents during the day with good calves bringing $6 to $6.50, medium $5 to $5.50, downwards to $4, while a few heavy calves brought $3 to $3.50.

Hogs were steady with indications steady. Yesterday's hog prices were fairly steady with some grades off 10 cents. Off truck bacons sold from $8.85 to $9.00, with car hogs going at $8.50.

Lambs sold steady with Tuesday's decline at $9 for good grades and wethers, at $8 for bucks and $7 for culls.

Sheep went slowly at $1 to $3. The lamb feeding was weak on the lamb market.

REVOLVER THROWN NEAR KING, MAN IS ARRESTED

'Woman in Grey' Knocks Unfired Gun from Assailant as He Aims

NO INTENT TO HARM JUST PROTEST, SAYS ACCUSED MacMAHON

King Edward VIII Rides on Unhurt Four of Five Chambers of Gun Loaded Police Hurry Man Out of Crowds

EDWARD MAKES PLEA FOR PEACE

Police State Man Arrested will be Charged in Bow Street Police Court with "Political Offence."

(Copyright, 1936, by The Associated Press)

LONDON, July 16 (AP)—A man pointed a revolver at the King today. A "woman in grey" knocked it from his hand and he was immediately seized by police.

The woman, spectators said, knocked a loaded revolver from the hand of a stocky, full-faced man who aimed it at his Majesty as he rode at the head of troops to Buckingham Palace.

In a violent scuffle, the weapon was precipitated into the roadway. Police took the would-be assassin into custody.

The prisoner's name was given by police as George Andrew MacMahon, 34, Scotch, described as newspaperman.

He was charged with intent to endanger the King's life and with unlawful possession of a firearm.

Authorities described him as middle-aged, slightly bald and seemingly well-to-do.

He limped to the dock in Bow Street station and was remanded for eight days.

"Only Done as Protest," Says Man

Detective Inspector John Sands, giving formal evidence of the arrest, said the prisoner told him enroute to the station:

"It's all the fault of Sir John Simon (the Home Secretary).

"I wrote him last night and 'phoned him this morning.

"The King wasn't hurt in any way, was he?"

"I didn't want to hurt him in any way.

"I only did it as a protest."

His remarks were not immediately explained.

Sands, describing how the man was taken into custody by constables said:

"I was handed this five-chambered revolver (he produced the weapon) which was loaded with ball and ammunition in four chambers but not in the top chamber which gave immediate access to the barrell"

He stated there was no evidence the weapon had been fired for a considerable time.

Pushes Through Spectators

The assailant pushed his way through ranks of spectators and Bobbies as the King, in uniform, rode down Constitution Hill on his way to the Palace after presenting colors to the battalions of Foot Guards.

At first, police announced his loaded revolver "fell in the roadway between the King and the troops following him."

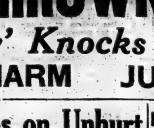
Cheering throngs packed both sides of the roadway as the Sovereign, followed closely by his brother, the Duke of York, rode back toward Buckingham Palace.

The King remained calm throughout, although several witnesses said they believed he saw the armed man in the crowd before the quick commotion broke out.

Woman screamed and fainted. Powerful Bobbies swarmed in on the suspect and rushed him away.

King Returns to Palace

The King rode on into the courtyard of Buckingham Palace. Later he motored to St. James' Palace for lunch and state business, then went by auto to Fort Belvedere, his summer residence.



There he changed into golfing clothes and played a round of golf at Coombe Hill, planning to return to London in the evening.

London was thrown into consternation by the incident. Newspaper extras were swept off the stands by excited throngs seeking to learn every word of the story.

Sir John Simon, Home Secretary, told the House of Commons: "The whole House will be profoundly thankful that the risk to which His Majesty was exposed was so promptly averted."

HIS MAJESTY

While King Edward was riding back to Buckingham Palace, after presenting new colors at Hyde Park today, there was a commotion in the crowd facing the route and a revolver was thrown upon the road, not far from the King. A man was arrested by the police and taken away.

FRANCE TO GUARD KING ON VISIT

Full Protection Guaranteed at Time of Visit Dedication

Paris, July 16 (AP)—French officials today indicated they were determined to protect King Edward during his coming visit to the continent ten days hence.

Sir George Russell Clerk, British Ambassador to France, already has arranged with officials at Cannes to dispense with all ceremonials and to keep the crowds distant from King Edward when he arrives on the Riviera July 27 for his vacation.

Authorities promised full protection for the king at the unveiling of the Canadian war memorial at Vimy Ridge July 26 before he acclaimed the Marquis of "Duke of Lancaster" and travels on a special train to Cannes.

5000 PILGRIMS SAIL FOR FRANCE TO VISIT VIMY

Impressive Sight at Montreal as Four Liners Leave

WHISTLES SALUTE

Shores of St. Lawrence Lined With Cheering Crowds

Montreal, July 16 (CP) — Four flag-draped liners, bearing more than 5,000 Canadian pilgrims to Vimy Ridge for the unveiling of Canada's Great War Memorial, slid out from Montreal harbor today to the shrieking salute of every steam whistle and automobile horn on the waterfront.

It was an impressive sight, this steam departure of the Dominion's great peacetime army. On both sides of the St. Lawrence crowds lined the banks, to wave a farewell and cheer on board waved back amid the shrieking of whistles.

The Montrose left first, just before noon. Then came the Montcalm, followed by the Ascania and the Antonia making the departure the greatest exodus in the history of Montreal.

Scathing Crowds.

From dawn until sailing time the docks seethed with the Canadian war veterans, their wives and children, with war widows and the mothers of some of the country's fighting men who never came back. But everything was orderly and ready when the time came to depart.

No one but those sailing was allowed on the docks but hundreds of spectators waited outside the sheds after seeing friends and relations that far. From that point harbour, military police and shipping officials took command.

The veterans and their families swarmed on board the four boats for all hours—ever since the first special train from Toronto arrived in Montreal at 5:30 a.m.

On each vessel there was an officer commanding and under him various officers in charge of groups of 100 or so. They marshalled their charges and at the quartermaster's stores each pilgrim received a tent, a Vimy pilgrimage medal, a khaki lanyard and a bullion carrying which group he belonged to.

FATHER COUGHLIN JOINS TOWNSEND

Cleveland, July 16 (AP)—Father Charles E. Coughlin aligned himself with Dr. Francis E. Townsend today and in an address to the Townsend National Convention branded President Roosevelt a "betrayer and liar".

The founder of the National Union for Social Justice told the Townsend delegates, "so far as the Democratic organization is concerned, no candidate which it endorses for congress can support the great betrayer and liar, President Roosevelt.

Escaped Convict With Axe Reported Starting Fires

Police Intensify Efforts to Arrest John Gray

OTHER FUGITIVE DEAD

Sudbury, Ont., July 16 (CP)—Report that John Gray, escaped convict from Burwash Industrial Farm was "running wild" in Sevre township, starting fires, and armed with an axe, caused intensification today of efforts to apprehend him. Posses were also formed to arrest him in connection with the death of Marshall Johnson, another escaped convict whose body was found in Rock Lake Tuesday, near Paget, south of the farm.

Harvey Brisbin, chief forest ranger for Sudbury district, said today that he had received a letter from Ted Hagarty, fire ranger in Sevre district, intimating the danger of Gray's freedom.

Hogarty's letter, sent to the local headquarters by plane, said that the two new fires which started yesterday in Sevre township "could not possibly have jumped against the wind." The writer expressed opinion that they had been deliberately started by Gray, as cover in his tracks, or else that the man was insane.

Hogarty said that one of the ranger's camps had been broken into last night and an axe taken, along with food, blankets and a flashlight. Search certain that Gray was responsible, as there was no other person in the area, outside of fire fighters.

Reports have reached Sudbury to the effect that Gray is armed with a rifle, and that shots have been heard in Sevre township. Provincial police and fire rangers admitted that such reports had reached them, but said they had not been confirmed, and that so far as was known, there was no place that Gray could have obtained fire arms.

'Troop Trains' for Vimy Pass Quietly Through City

Remnants of Famous Regiments, Wives, Mothers Aboard

TRAVEL BY NIGHT

Twenty years ago milling crowds, cheering and waving flags thronged city railway stations as troop trains laden with thousands of Canada's finest passed through enroute to the battlefields of France.

Early this morning three "troop trains" carrying remnants of those famous regiments again passed through the city, but the cheering crowds were missing. Quietly, unobtrusively the large trains slipped in and out of the city stopping only to allow Belleville and district war veterans to entrain for Montreal from which port they sailed this morning for France.

There was no hilarious demonstrations. Through lighted windows grey bloodied veterans arose wearing the colored berets of their different divisions could be seen quietly playing their hands of cards laid out on carriage seats. Others sat reading, wrapped in occasional glances through windows half-raised to let in fresh air.

"Give my regards to Piccadilly sang out a bystander. "O.K." grinned a sixty year old passenger who was leaning out of a coach window, "What's her name?"

Grey-haired mothers and wives of veterans were seen throughout the various coaches observing little signs of anticipation of the stirring trip in store for them.

Three sections of the Vimy train passed through C.P.R. yards arriving at the Grand Trunk station three minutes later, the first section arriving here at 1.30 a.m.

A lone hobo constituted a one-man reception committee, waving his hands at all lighted indows. A sudden disappearance on his part disproved any inclination to favor the train with his company, but a few seconds after the departure of the last C.P.R. section he was back at the road reappeared, apparently having been accompanied by a railway official that a ticket in the pocket is worth two in the docket.

Lieut.-Col. Wills, V.D., of Prince Edward County and its official representative and Major S. T. Gibson of Belleville were among those who entrained here.

Wheat Exports Tage Big Jump in Bushelage and Value

Ottawa, July 16—(CP)—Canada's import and export trade is on the up-grade, it was shown today in figures released by the National Revenue Department. For the first three months of the government's fiscal year, exports were $240,454,-747, compared with $171,316,942 a year ago. Imports totalled $150,133,-541 in 1936, $137,906,136.

Wheat exports took a big jump this year, both in bushelage and value. Farmers shipped in that year had a value of $19,517,520 for the three months period and this year, $46,446,173. Certain Restrictions Are Placed on The Turkey Gov't.

Montreux, July 16—(CP-Havas)—A new Dardanelles convention authorizing Turkey to fortify the straits with certain restrictions was ready for the signatures of the interested powers today.

The draft of the convention was adopted after the Soviet Union had obtained British approval of the Soviets demand the straits be closed to belligerents in case of war if Turkey was neutral. Exception was made in the case of forces operating to enforce a League of Nations decision or carrying out obligations under a regional pact to which Turkey is a party.

The provision was adopted in a plenary session of the conference yesterday on a motion by Joseph Paul-Boncour, head of the French delegation.

The new convention will replace the fourpower agreement in the Lausanne Treaty of 1923, under which the straits were demilitarized.

The present conference was called, when Turkey canvassed the signatory powers concerning restrictions of the straights was given.

The new convention, which probably will be signed in a few days, contains the following provisions:

1—Closing of the Dardanelles and the Black Sea during a war in which Turkey is neutral (this is designed to prevent a repetition of the past war exploits of search cruisers and commerce raiders as the Goeben and the Breslau.

2—Freedom of the straits for all merchant ships, irrespective of flag or cargo.

3—Unrestricted passage through the straits of ships of all powers having mutual aid pacts with Black Sea powers for th purpose of fueling at the Rumanian and Russian oil stations.

4—Free passage for ships in case of the conclusion of a Franco-Turkish mutual aid pact as well as passage for naval units in pursuance of the Franco-Soviet pact and the mutual aid pact of the Balkan Entente.

5—In the event the straits are closed, contrary to any of the rights of passage for warships by a decision of the council of the League of Nations in line with the various mutual aid pacts.

Working Reporter 'Gets Touch' From Comrade Vimy Bound

"Brother, we notice by the protruding pencil and well folded paper, that you are a working member of the fourth estate" remarked the pleasant voice in the reportorial ear, yesterday and we also note by the pin on your coat that you belong to that great fraternity, the Red Patch Club."

"Now, being a non-working member of the first part and a life long member of the second part and seeing that while our hearts are full, our stomachs are empty as are our pockets with the exception of a few yards of ticket, we respectfully solicit the loan part of one dollar in the coin of the realm."

"One loan dime will be sufficient," continued the pleasant voice as this scribe stared in open mouthed surprise, with his hand in pocket. "My experience tells me that you change are hot ever burdened with more, and payday being a few days hence, the minimum donation will be quite ample."

A dime changed hands.

"And now, brother we will unfold our sad tale of woe" smiled hand.

VOLUNTEER HELP SEEN FOR BEACH

Offers Made From Many Quarters to Help Project

As a means toward an immediate start on the civic bathing beach south of the city, just west of the hospital, on the bay shore, volunteer help in cleaning up the site on the part of local shop, factory and office workers of the city is asked by the newly formed bathing beach committee.

Already a promise that they would assist in the preliminary work necessary for construction of the beach has been given from Quinte Reg. Merchief of the committee by several factory employees, it was stated. The work would be of spare time nature.

"Even one truck driver, besides several ordinary citizens have promised to help," declared President Moncrief today. "We believe that the public are genuinely interested in and are willing to push the scheme to the limit."

In a statement to The Daily Ontario Intelligencer today, Mr. Morse Robb, general manager of the Canada Starch Electric Wax Paper Company, declared that both himself and employees of the factory are interested in this needed improvement of the waterfront. "I hope Mr. Moncrief and the committee are given every assistance," he added.

"I'm going to have a talk with the men of the plant and see if they are willing to help in the work towards helping the project along."

"All those willing to help, if they'll come down to the beach on Saturday afternoon with bathing suit and shovel, will be given a chance to do their bit," stated Mr. Moncrief, "I'll be there myself and try to help them in the work. First thing we must do is take the bottom of the beach carefully, clearing it of the sharp stones, shells and other debris. Later on we'll be able to start the construction of both the bathing beach and other water equipment.

"We would appreciate this help very much as we are anxious to make a good start on the scheme this summer."

STIRLING

NORTHPORT WINS SPORTS SHIELD

Y.P.U. of Belleville Presbytery Gather at Oak Lake

Stirling, (Special)—Nearly four hundred energetic Christian young people, members of the Young People's Unions of the United Church within the Belleville Presbytery gathered on the north shore of Oak Lake, Oak Lake Park for a picnic, on Wednesday afternoon. All manner of vehicles or conveyances began to arrive shortly after noon, trucks buses and pleasure cars bringing guests from near and far.

During the afternoon a carefully planned program of sports events for girls and boys both on the land and in the water was carried through with remarkable precision under the capable direction of Miss Joseph Vrooman, President of the Belleville Presbytery Association of Unions and Rev. Stanley Osborne of Napanee, Chairman of Committee for Religious Education of Belleville Presbytery assisted by Rev. Mr. Fletcher of Hillcrest and Rev. James E. Beckel of Bawdon.

A program of competitive sports between the various organizations is carried on each year with the object of gaining the highest point or points gaining possession of the beautiful shield. Excellent entertainment was offered to those unable to take part in the trials, with each race being sufficiently exciting to bring large cheers from the spectators. Last but not amusing race of the day was a sack-cracker race by twelve starters. After the complete list of track and field events were run, the water events were carried out and when the final scores were tallied, Northport was leading with a total of sixty points and their closest rivals were last year's champions, King St. United Church of Trenton, who were twenty points behind the leaders with a total of 40 points. These two groups were far in front of any other organization. The Northport Union was well represented in all events and ran up a big score with a large number of firsts.

After a busy and energetic afternoon nearly four hundred athletes and spectators sat down to a really fine dinner, after which brief addresses were delivered by Mr. Jos. Vrooman of Odessa, President, and a number of other important members of the executive as well as a number of the ministers present.

At sundown all joined in an interesting twilight service, when messages of inspiration and wisdom were delivered by several outstanding speakers. Singing was led by Rev. Stanley Osborne and heartily enjoyed by the largest number of members ever to attend this annual affair.

Among the Societies, represented were—Belleville, Trenton, Stirling, Napanee, Wallbridge, Cooper, Bloomfield, Hazards, Mount Pleasant, Bethel, Carmel, and Bay West, and Ivanhoe. Among the Ministers of the Belleville Presbytery present were:—Rev. James E. Beckel and Rev. W. J. Scott of Stirling; Rev. H. H. Lackey, Ivanhoe; Rev. Fletcher of Eldorado; Rev. Blanchard, Bloomfield; Rev. Everson, Plainfield; Rev. Johnston of Sidney; Rev. Polston, Northport; Rev. Stanley Osborne, Napanee; Rev. Morris of Queenshore.

The championship banner was presented to the Northport organization by President Joseph Vrooman, and the new champions were heartily cheered for this fine showing as were last year's champions, King Street United Church Y.P.U. of Trenton, who succeeded in gaining second position this year.

Convention Boat Collides Violently With Large Freighter

Baltimore, July 16.—(AP)—Gov. Harry W. Nice and 250 passengers of a passenger vessel which collided violently with a freighter off Seven Foot Knoll landed safely here early today, bringing accounts of a harrowing night on the Chesapeake Bay.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop was taking a week before supper and pop started to look in the window of a store with a zinc saying, Phil the Haberdasher and pop said, By golly that's my idea of a nice looking tie, in fact it's my ideal of a necktie, it's got previous class without crying from the houstops it's subdued without being painfully inoffensive, in a nutshell it's smooth but not gawdy, I will G, pop, why dont you go in and buy it? I said, and pop said, I will. That's the only safe and sane way to buy a tie, wait till you see a honey like this one in a store window and then week in and buy it before the salesman can get to it, and pop proceeded to befuddle your choice with idears of his own, he said, and I said, The zinc says the ties is 85 cents each, so that most mean that one too, pop.

And we went in and pop said to the man, You have a sort of a greenish bluish tie in the window for 85 cents, would you mind getting it for me, or giving me its coordinates?

Certainly sir, do you like that tie? the man said, and pop said, Very much indeed, and the man said, Then I'll be very happy to get it for you. The customer is always right, that's my motto, and I never try to change a man's selection, no matter what I may privately think of it as a matter of taste, in fact I admire that in a very good boy at 85 cents, even though this little job of ties at a dollar 15 are far superior in design and quality. But I make it a rule never to try to influence a customer's judgment, it takes all kinds of taste to make a world, I always say. I'll have that tie out of the window in just a second, he said.

Well hold on a minnit, pop said. And he looked at the ones the man pointed to saying, These aren't half bad at that, now that I look them over, I'll take this one instead, he said, and the man said Just as you say sir.

And he rapped it up and pop payed for it, and when we got out I said, G, pop, and pop said, Never mind good say it.

Wish I didn't.

BETHEL, W. M. S.

The Bethel W. M. S. met in the vestry of the church on Wednesday July 8 at 2 P. M. The meeting was well attended in spite of the heat 11 members answering the roll call by a verse of scripture containing the word 'give'.

The president had charge of the meeting which was opened in the usual manner by a hymn and devotional exercises. The president Mrs. Harold Foster then asked the secretary to read the minutes of the last meeting which were read and adopted. Mrs. Harry Foster led in prayer. The treasurer, Mrs. Ed. Blakely gave her report. Thirty-three dollars was raised by Society and sent to the Dominion Treasurer since January.

The theme of the meeting was "Time and Money What to do with it", This booklet was read by Mrs. Cullen. It was suggested in this reading that every W. M. S. member should devote more time to personal service in Christian work, also that when money is given it should be presented conscientiously, cheerfully, sacrificially and prayerfully. Mrs. Harrington then sang a solo, another hymn was sung by everyone and the meeting closed with a benediction repeated by the president.

SENSE OF RELIEF

Sweet beyond compare was the experience of the community on Tuesday evening as the evidences of a turn in the weather became apparent. The falling of the mercury gave promise of the first night in a week when sleeping was to be enjoyed. The change brought release from the thousand and one worries of parents in the homes and the elderly and the children, the two latter classes who suffered most. Nights of little sleep, days of intense heat, in place of business, in factory, on the land and in the house had come in seemingly endless succession, trying the strength of everyone, destroying appetites, and causing entire upsets in the management of households and sleeping, eating and other arrangements.

A sense of freedom from oppressive heat rose as the thermometer showed declining mercury. It was a sort of celebration all felt that perhaps the worst hot spell of the season had passed. It meant freedom to return to ordinary summer routine, to retire to sleep in the once-ovenlike bedrooms upstairs, to wear something more than the bare stitch of clothing many people were compelled to put on so that they might not wilt with the heat to pick up the threads of July routine, continue the holidays as they used to be observed.

With the departure of the heat demon, there was a sense of sadness at the toll which struck every community. Had that heat wave not descended many a child, carried off by the sudden coming of heat, might have lived sixty or seventy or even eighty years longer. Aged persons "went out" who seemed to have a much longer lease of life until the heat came. There were persons in middle age and just past the zenith who fell victims, these surely might have lived for many years had the weather of the past week been less severe. The heat wave caught the weaker and more helpless and it added a new factor to those factors which make up man's destiny, for it was heat that was the added element which snuffed out lives.

Ontario's toll is given as approaching six hundred, a heavier loss than was caused in a like period of time by flu ravages.

Man has learned something from this heat wave and that is, not to allow the burden to increase unduly on one's strength, either through work, exposure to the sun's rays, or in overtaxing the body in eating. Science has helped the housewife with modern gas and electric ranges which heat meals with a minimum of heat, has put fans in homes with the result of warding off many a case of prostration. Good water supply, well maintained, left no doubt in the consumers' mind that there was no danger from the score of complication by reason of disease. Refrigeration came in to help and so on with all modern arrangements of life.

Citizens of a city like Belleville realized some of the advantages of the smaller city—with its lesser population, its wider lawns and larger gardens, its lower buildings, its purity of air which was unimpeded. It's smaller centre did not create that sense of smothering one sometimes feels in a large city on a searing day when pavements, walls, and roofs reflect and absorb the heat, intensifying the lack of movement of air currents. During the warm spell, many a thought was given to the shade of the trees which helped to make life bearable, in a tree-bowered city.

WHEN RESULTS ARE ANNOUNCED

Scholars have always awaited the result of examinations, to show how successful they have been. Though many examinations have been abolished because the term work is considered a fair indication of a scholar's gifts and attention to study, there are examinations for others and for certain prizes. So the promotion and examination lists still hold the place of interest for the young and their parents and their aunts and uncles.

Knowing a good work is accomplished the young life can know enter fully into the enjoyments of the summer season with the beckoning outdoors. And this the scholars have already proceeded to do. A glance at the playgrounds so recently modernized by the Kiwanis Club's buildings and provision for sports, at the river in various places, at the parks, and the beaches at resorts, shows that the scholar is also a very active little human.

Adults still remember the joy of the news that they passed an examination. That is something that will linger with the scholar throughout life, because of the impression it made upon him or her when young and most impressionable.

Not yet are scholars thinking of the new term at school and rightly so. If they do think, it is just with the flash of joy they have in the thought that they will be moving up higher, the child being the greatest optimist in the world. So it is well to leave them with their interests wrapped up in the outside world, learning from the very practical teacher, Nature, and adding to sympathies of mind and heart. Announcement of examination results gives the final sense of full freedom to children, boyhood and girlhood.

A PRAIRIE GEM

A tiny shrub, with just enough of stem
And leaves to hold a nosegay fresh and sweet
Of roses, perfuming the morning air—
The blossoms palest pink to deepest rose,
With many tints and tracaries between,
While July sun gives some a yellow tinge.

This little rose in early morning blown,
With dew-drops glistening on it petals fair,
Mong prairie jewels is a perfect gem.

THOSE SCARLET BLAZERS OF THE NORTHWEST MOUNTED POLICE and the Canadian Olympic Team in Los Angeles in 1932 gave the New York Times a text for n extensive illustrated article on the headline features of the Olympic of that year. Those scarlet blazers of the Canadian Olympic Team of 1932 were made in Belleville, 167 of them, by the Deacon Shirt Company, and they were so universally admired that there was no question as to who would make the blazers for the Olympic Team of 1936. The Canadian Olympic Team 200 strong will be photographed in Montreal Friday prior to embarking for Germany to take part in the world's championship events and each man will wear a blazer, or sweater coat, a brilliant scarlet, made in Belleville by the Deacon Shirt Company. Each blazer with its Maple Leaf and bright buttons and braid has a sewed-in label with the name of the owner and each label was made in Belleville by the J. and J Cash Company whose labels reach round the world and were first made in Coventry, England, that community famed for its church spires and legend of Lady Godiva and "Peeping Tom." Each label will bear the name of the makers DEACON SHIRT COMPANY SPORTS WEAR, BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, CANADA, and it is safe to say, in all modesty, that no other team on the great $40,000,000 Olympic field in Germany will look as well as the Canadian Olympic team gay in scarlet blazer, made in Belleville. Just another challenge to the world that goods made in Belleville can take front rank in any company.

WALTER WINCHELL MOST FEARED AND BEST HATED NEWSPAPERMAN IN THE WORLD, according to the estimate of some people has pulled a stunt now that his critics will find hard to harmonize with their estimate. Walter has gone on a two-weeks' vacation and has turned over his column to headliners in various professionally fields, some of whom, according to current reports were not on friendly terms with him. Even The Old Maestro, Ben Bernie, whom Winchell ribbed unmercifully in his column and on the air, was given a chance to edit the Winchell column one day without any restriction—and did Ben go to town on Walter—proving that Ben was big enough to appreciate the fact that all mention of him by Winchell was good publicity.—as P. T. Barnum, Prince of Publicity, used to say "I don't care what they say about me as long as they say something." Among the Pinch Hitters for Winchell were Kate Smith, who came over the mountains to help Walter out; Jim Tully, the hobo author—and others. So, Walter Winchell may be the most feared and best hated newspaperman in the world, but it looks to us as if he had enough friends to more than out-balance the rest. In any event it is said that Walter Winchell makes more money than any other living newspaperman, and if that is so he will not lack salve for any jabs of outrageous fortune which comes his way from the folks who fear him or the folks who hate him. Walter isn't worrying, and those who fear him and those who hate him will find the Winchell bad medicine for any attempts at reprisal.

People Have Been Nice to Me, Says 15 Year Old Hitch Hiker

IS NEATLY DRESSED

James Michael Callaghan of Gilbert Plains, Manitoba, 15-year-old knight of the road and possibly the youngest hitch hiker to pass through this city, after a brief bow to local residents on Wednesday afternoon during his short visit, continued on the east to some as yet unknown destination possibly on the eastern coast.

Small for his age, the juvenile adventurer who confesses he is making the trip to avoid the monotony of his Manitoba Plains during school summer holidays, was nevertheless laden with full accoutrements of the traveller's art, a heavy haversack, bundle of blankets and other equipment bore down on the readily shoulders that have already become hardened by his lengthy walk from his home town. But all the distance, however, from here to Manitoba, has been covered afoot. Automobile rides have rarely helped shorten the route and have been offered fairly plentifully since the start of the trip.

Cops Are Considerate

"It's my age, I guess", confessed the "semi bare-foot boy" who seems to have been nice to me, anyhow, since the start of the trip, and I haven't any kick coming except possibly against a lot of the cops who seem to think I'm too young to be on the loose by myself. Now and then they pick me up, question me and let me go. Generally they tell me to turn around and hike for home, that I'm too little to be out on the roads like the rest of them. It gets pretty tiresome after awhile."

On his travels, James Michael, however, has been assisted through some of the tight spots and interview questionings by police stations along the line of march by a number of letters from home town leading residents testifying to the good record of the youth and expressing the belief that he can "take care of himself during his travels."

Travelling As Education

Singularly endowed with a natural free independence and self-reliance, the youth declares his trip to be "the best geography lesson he could possibly obtain", "I've seen more of the actual country and learned more about it since I started out than I'll ever learn in books" he added.

He has no hesitation about knocking on back doors for an occasional meal or breakfast when stuck, nor applying for a dishwashing job in some of the restaurants in exchange for a meal, and so far the number of turndowns has been surprisingly low, he declares. In some instances he has been offered nightly lodgings by kind hearted householders free.

The most amusing incident from his point of view, however, was that experienced on the outskirts of Hamilton lately where an elderly couple, childless themselves, wished to adopt him.

Clean and neat, dressed in airy shorts and sweatshirt, yellow shirt and blue beret, the youthful hiker presents a distinctly different appearance than the majority of travellers now using the highways.

Russia's Demands Assented To

Montreux, Switzerland, July 16 —(AP)—The Dardanelles pact signatories today agreed to Soviet Russia's demands that the straits be closed to the warships of belligerent nations when Turkey is a neutral.

The only exceptions to this strict lockout would be when a belligerent nation dispatched its warships into the Dardanelles under the obligations imposed by the League of Nations covenant or under a treaty duly registered with the League, to which Turkey is a party.

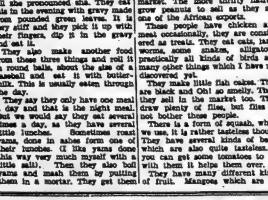
From Nigeria

The following letter from Miss Vera M. Ray, Missionary Nurse in Nigeria, tells of conditions in the land in which she is serving.

Kuta, via Minna, Nigeria, Africa.
May 24, 1936.



This is a long week end at home, with a holiday on Monday. Guess there will be plenty of motoring and the usual list of accidents afterwards.

Well I guess I will tell you something about the food of the people of Kuta. They are very clean and well-washed. The men all sat together out of one calabash, including the boys of the family. The mothers and female members all eat together in a different place out of one calabash. They never use anything but their fingers to eat with. When they have anything with which they eat gravy then they have another small calabash. They live very simply mostly on starch foods. Their porridge is made of guinea corn, asiwyi, like our millet and another stuff, tambu, which looks like bran flakes only it grows that way. These three are mixed together and pounded. The bulls are thrown to the goats, the grain is then ground on their grinding stones into a fine flour which looks something like graham flour at home. Then this is cooked with water, it is made very thin so they can drink it.

They make another thick mixture with these three things, which they call "tuwo" pronounced "tuo". They use this in the evening with gravy made from vegetables, meat, cheese. It is very stiff and they pick it up with their fingers, dip it in the gravy and eat it.

They also make another food from these three things and roll it in round balls, about the size of a baseball and eat it with bitter kolla. This is usually eaten through the day.

They say they only have one meal a day and that is the night meal. But we would say they eat several times a day, as they have several small lunches. Sometimes roast yams, done in ashes form one of their lunches. (I like yams done this way very much myself with a little salt). Then they also boil yams and mash them by pulling them in a mortar. They get them

Survives Mutilation

Jean Hall told Washington police a "slicer" carved "CL" and "3-13" on her body and tried to kill her by gas in her Washington, D.C. apartment after she "ran out" on a promise to help free Charles "Lucky" Luciano, New York vice overlord, from Sing Sing.

A Man's Game in a Man's Country

New York, July 16—(CP)—Surprise as it nears the sea, the Atlantic salmon these days are bringing some of the truest thrills in American outdoor life to those sportsmen who cast for them. On the swift rivers in New Brunswick and Quebec that run clear and shallow over long reaches of rounded stones to deep pools where the salmon lie, men are piling their skill of days dry fly and the power of light tackle, artfully used, against a fighting fish that has often been called the king of them all. On the grand Cascapedia on the Chaps Peninsula, with its famous Governor-General's pool; the Matapedia, the Patapedia and the Restigouche, above all, the Restigouche and on other streams among the Laurentians to the north of the St. Lawrence, the battle is waged....

HISTORIC GROUND FOR ROOSEVELT WELCOME

FLOW OF TEARS IS NOW STOPPED

Strange Story of Chipped False Eye Which is Now Replaced

Eighteen months ago a ragged knight of the road wandered into a local refreshment parlor. Tears streamed down a grimy face. Other occupants of the room gazed at him in surprise, for his feelings showed no signs of suffering. He talked and laughed with other men with a continuous flow of tears running down one side of his face.

During the next year he made intermittent calls at this particular place, and always with face wet from flowing tears.

Last week a curious onlooker asked the reason for the continuous overflow, "It's like fruit" answered the hobo. "Some years ago I lost the sight of one of my eyes and was forced to wear a false one. Then came a day when the false eye slipped out and fell to the ground, the result of which was the eye being chipped. The rough edges of the tiny hole irritate the tearducts when I wear it, with the result that I am crying nearly all the time."

"I have a false eye at my home" spoke up a listner "One which I found while in the city. You may try it if you like."

"It would be of no use" said the hobo, "those things have to be specially made and fitted."

But the donor insisted and soon procured the eye. By a seeming miracle the eye was not only a perfect fit but was of the same shade as the old one.

It was soon inserted and the hobo continued on his way happy, and dry-eyed for the first time in many months.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Arizona Raiders"

The Zane Grey novel "Raiders of the Spanish Peaks" appears on the screen as a fast, adventure-filled, action-packed picture in "The Arizona Raiders", opening tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre with Larry Crabbe and Marsha Hunt in leading roles. The story is full of thrilling developments are set in the old West where cattle rustling was a real and ever-present problem, and include two thrilling stampedes, one of maddened cattle and the other of a herd of high-spirited horses.

Crabbe appears as an adventurous hard-riding cowpuncher, who moves into a town which is reported to be hanged for horse theft, although he is innocent. His escape from the hanging posse is the opening of a plot which keeps its pace throughout.

Shortly after he has fled the posse, Crabbe comes across another party about to hang Raymond Hatton for a list of minor offenses. He holds up the crowd, frees Hatton, and the two ride together into Arizona.

There they take jobs on a ranch operated by Miss Hunt, just in time to learn that a band of rustlers is planning to drive her valuable herd of horses across the border. The way in which Crabbe checkmates the schemes of the rustlers, and at the same time aids young Miss Hunt, makes an exponent with Miss Hunt's sister, Jane Rhodes, provide the plot that follows. The film closes with a double wedding ceremony.

"In Caliente"

"In Caliente," tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre, its all star cast is headed by Dolores Del Rio, Pat O'Brien, Leo Carrillo and Edward Everett Horton.

Scores of beautiful Hollywood chorus girls appear in numbers created and directed by Busby Berkeley who staged the big hits in "Gold Diggers of 1935," "Stage Door Jar", "42nd Street" and a score of other film musicals.

Two famous song writing teams, Warren and Dubin, Mercer and Arndt, Wrubel, wrote the songs for the Berkeley production numbers. They include "Muchacha," "Lady in Red" and the title song, "In Caliente".

ENDS TODAY

The thrill of thrillers that will send shivers down your back, Boris Karloff in "The Walking Dead", Warner Bros. feature hit. And those who wasn't good enough to be a G-man so was content to be an "X-man."

AT THE REGENT

"Unknown Man"

Marshall, as a boyish Englishman, joins his colors, and Miss Michael, who, although she is a redhead, is a member of the German Secret Service, places herself under the orders of her commanding officer.

Marshall is assigned to the British Intelligence Service, and enters Germany, disguised as a German soldier. Miss Michael is also stationed in Germany, and when, accidently, she meets her lover, realizes that her love for him is so great that she cannot betray him.

Unconsciously, however, she gives him away to the German Sabotage Chief, and Marshall is seized. He forgets her loyalty to her country, and, at the risk of her own life, tries to save him.

The way in which the sweethearts outwit the German agents and make their successful escape across the border, into a happier world of peace and love, furnishes the thrilling climax to the picture.

The amusing short subject "Meet the Colonel" will also be presented. It features the Colonel of Bull Durham fame.

Napanee Scores Four Runs Without Semblance of Hit To Defeat Locals by 4 - 2

POINTER WILD

Napanee Hurler Given Excellent Support by Teammates

Continuing in their proficient art of presenting their C.O.B.L. opponents with ball games on the proverbial silver platter, the Belleville seniors duplicated many previous presentations in a more prolific manner at Napanee, when they handed the league fixture to the Olibards in Napanee yesterday afternoon to the tune of 4 to 2. Without a semblance of the smallest resemblance of a hit in a hectic ninth frame the Olibards managed to push four runs over the plate when a walk, two glaring errors of commission and a couple of omissions resulted in another perfectly good ball game being chalked up against the locals.

Although old-bat one hundred per cent, the locals hooked away numerous chances to win, when they pulled the ineligible Ken Pointer, son of Tommy Pointer, coach Gerown's battery mate, from the ranks and gave way very spotty as he struck out 11 but in so doing walked 6 and hooked around the bases paused more'had the Belleville batsmen retained their batting in a commendable form, instead of swinging at bad pitches in the pinch. Bi Mclvor attended the mound for the locals and although nicked for eight safeties, kept them well scattered and once during the game did the Olibards get more than one safety in any one frame and then no run was scored. McIvor whiffed five and only passed two. Two successive errors by St. Louis and Urconi in the ninth proved the undoing for defeat.

The fielding features were supplied by Bishop and Scarlett, two hometown outfielders, who literally saved Pointer from defeat with miraculous catches. Bishop raced far down the left field fair mister to gather in Smith's mighty wallop in the seventh, while Scarlett robbed Bennett of a hit in the fourth, scoring previous with a sensational running catch. Ken Lackford also fielded the locals defensively and Handford and Frost played good ball in the Napanee infield. The homesters played errorless ball behind Pointer, whose support was rather shaky throughout the entire game.

Bears Down in Finches

Pointer was able to bear down in the pinches, however, as he left nine locals stranded on the runways and limited them to defeat with two small singles, St. Louis, Smith, Urconi and McIvor being the only Belleville batsmen to hit safely. Every member of the Olibards scored, for one run, Handford of Napanee. Not a single player counted two hits for the Olibards, Handford and Frost getting scratchy doubles.

A high wind blew throughout the game and proved an interference to the baseball as it raised a dust cloud that blew into the faces of the batters. After two were out in the fourth Handford walked and Smith singled, but Weir forced Lackford at third. In the fifth and fourth Belleville had two aboard, by virtue of walks, but failed to score. In Napanee's half of the fourth, McIvor rose to heights to thank the players, when Smith doubled, but Brennan lined to Weir for an out. When Lackford led off, Handford pulling up at third, Wilson stole second. With one out Pointer struck Bishop out and delivered a wild throw to the infield for the final put out.

Then came the headache in the sixth frame. Scarlett walked and Handford hit to St. Louis for what looked like a perfect two-ply play, but in hurrying the throw to second, St. Louis fired the ball far into centre-field and both runners got an extra base. Brennan promptly laid down a bunt for a sacrifice and as the local infield elected to throw out Scarlett; the ex-Belleville batter won on the race and all hands were safe, Brennan getting credit with a sacrifice hit only. Wilson slammed a fly to right that Urconi caught and dropped for an error and Handford scored. Bishop benificed scoring Brennan, one out only. Frost also got credit for a hit and son scored safely after the catch to make four runs scored without a hit being recorded in the scoring books. Clibbard then singled, however but died at second as McIvor

REDWINGS HALTED BY BEARS AFTER 11 STRAIGHT WINS

Hold Margin of Three Games Despite Rush of Bisons

LEAFS WIN TWO

Wera Had Perfect Night For The Toronto Team

(By The Associated Press)
Rochester's string of victories finally was brought to an end yesterday but the Redwings still are in first place in the International League by a margin of three games despite the run on them of the revived Buffalo Bisons.

The Newark Bears, fighting to stay in third place, gave the Redwings the slip altogether while Steve Sundra pitching three-hit ball, they defeated the League leaders 2 to 0 last night to remain with in a game of the Bisons. Tony Piet waged a pitching duel with Sundra but the difference was in a ball pitched by Johnny McCarthy. The Newark first baseman hit the ball over the fence in the fourth inning to score Ralph (Buns) Boyle with the only runs of the game. Sundra struck out for the Bears' fourth in their last 11 contests.

Meanwhile the Bisons chalked up their sixth straight triumph and their 13th in 17 games since returning home as they whipped the Syracuse Chiefs 4 to 3 in the opener, 3 and 5 to 3. Bill Kerwin won his own game of the nite by whipping the Chiefs to six hits in the opener.

Baltimore's Baltimore Baltimore Orioles also chalked up a night victory, whipping the Montreal Royals 4 to 3. Their veteran pitcher Hollis Kelleher was largely responsible for the win.

Julie Wera, Toronto third baseman, had a perfect night as all of the Leafs took both ends of the double header with the Albany Senators, winning 5 to 3 and 14 to 5.

Sports Roundup

New York, July 16.—(AP)—Hot Up: don't tell those Detroit Tigers but Lefty Gomez already has won 12 of their last 18 games without Schoolboy Rowe to help him. Connie Mack's Athletics and Leo Durocher's Cubs are playing before congregations of 2,500 and 3,000.

Is this one for the W. K. Book, or isn't it: Mrs. Ethel Sutherland Gene Venzke, the runner, wrote a magazine article about her husband and $400 . . . The A.A.U. told Gene he couldn't cash the cheque he would be ruled a pro . . . Now, seriously, ing to a Philadelphia story, Gene Venzke's mother is Mrs. Ethel Sutherland, secretary of the A.A.U., has written a letter to the Olympic Committee Fund . . . What we'd like to know is this: if the cheque made Gene a pro, what . . . Confine your answers to 50 words.

Is it true that the only reason Alice Arden, pretty New York girl, broke the tennis ice in Wimbledon some of her friends among the sports writers threatened to publish the reason why she had started playing her? . . . If this isn't another for the book . . . Now, seriously, ing to a . . . Boston papers say the Red Sox have signed Jimmy Foxx (double x, please) because he looks too pleasant after failing to deliver in the pinch . . . They say Foxx is a smart, spilt tarbeucker juice plumb across the field, hurl his bat at the dug out and shake his fist at the umpire . . . And in 100 degree weather, too! . . .

Tom Yawkey has definitely made up his mind that he can't buy a pennant and will go on now spending sprees next winter . . . Not that we want to throw cold water on the well laid plans of some of the big league clubs, but . . . Here are the facts . . . In Detroit the other day, Buck Newsom, Washington pitcher, had 14 pounds betting the Senators to a 5-0 win over the Tigers.

Rival coaches blasted Kitty Rallo, the Miami eye-ball, for ejecting (and winning) so many early events, thereby knocking other decserving girls out of a trip across the pond . . . The wise boys certainly rolled the dice in the 1500-metre run—Gene Venzke was counted out as he lost by a hair by day and Bill Bonthron at night.

Manager Connie Mack, coach, Matty Geis of Princeton, thought so little of Bill's chances he didn't even attend the trials . . . Ooh! Jack Medica, the swimmer, will retire immediately after the Olympics and start looking for a job.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Yesterday's C.O.B.L. game at Napanee was one for "Believe it or not Ripley." And believe it or not the Olibards scored their entire four runs without registering the slightest resemblance of what looked like a base hit. Ordinarily we'd say "its all too true and only two errors were chalked up against the locals in this frame at with, in the long run the locals of course lost the game 4 to 2 and said it not been for that hectic ninth well goodness knows we'd have had a ball game, who knows?

Here's the situation in as few words as possible. The locals have been building a semblance for six frames, Belleville getting more men aboard like runaway cows in the farmer's streak of wildness. At any rate Scarlett worked McIvor for a walk to open the ninth, followed hit sharply to St. Louis, who in hurrying his throw to the initial sack off what looked like a perfectly legitimate double play, Scarlett threw wild and the ball rolled to centre field for an error and Handford hardly had been counted up as safety, Brennan then laid down a fine bunt, the pitcher elected trying to catch the fleet-footed Scarlett at the plate, but Handford beat all hollar safe and Brennan getting credit for a sacrifice, Wilson followed with a fly to Urconi, but Handford had the ball far an error and Handford scored. Bishop benificed scoring Brennan, one out only. Frost also got credit for a hit and son scored safely after the catch to make four runs scored without a hit being recorded in the scoring books. Clibbard then singled, however but died at second as McIvor

Disregarding all of the errors of commission and omission committed by the locals, in the ninth inning or had-the local batsmen walked Pointer seven times. Consequently, the locals should have won the game regardless of the ninth inning opportunities placed before them, but failed in the pinches. Despite the fact Pointer struck out eleven local batters, he developed an early wild streak and issued eight batsmen, McIvor, on the other hand, kept his pitches around the plate and scattered, only once in the games did the Olibards string hits in one frame and then they failed to score. Just another pre-season game on the well known silver platter.

Yesterday's loss drops the local C.O.B.L. entry into the cellar position. Had they won, however, they would have advanced to fourth place, but we are waiting for calf-love of baseball they have been guilty of recently, can they expect any better result.

Apparently the batting practice, afforded the Cobourg Cobras, at home last night, the locals on Saturday last, assisted them in some degree as the Cavries stepped right into Kingston and downed the Ponies 7 to 5 last evening. The Cobras victory not only by way of revenge for the same done handed them by the Ponies in Cobourg earlier in the season, but more firmly fortifies the Motor City aggregation on the top rung of the league ladder. Unless the Ponies return to their former winning ways they may find themselves a notch below the fast-travelling Petes, who have won eight of their last ten games played. A very creditable record in the circumstances.

When Jack Owosenz, Queensbury A.C. staged the second outdoor show at the Belleville Arena presenting such outstanding grapplers as Hal Rumberg, Jean Kaiser, Al Mercier and Rube Wright, the question was then asked as to how far filling at staging wrestling shows in this city. "I guess Belleville wrestling fans don't want the type of wrestlers, who appear in the Belleville Arena," George Harris, secretary of the Queensbury A.C. declared on that night's bill. Mr. Harris added he did not imagine the Belleville public would return to Belleville for the fall term, although he would not deny it. "If Jack Owosenz wants to stage any, how do you expect to make a weekly show of it when customers pay in the fall?" asked Mr. Harris.

When Danno O'Mahoney defends his wrestling laurels at the Belleville Arena versus Yvon Robert, the French-Canadian claimant, with a purse of $10,000.00 on an option of 37 1-2 per cent of the gate receipts, Belleville will have Danno, his wife and manager will call for native Irish dances during which the ex-champion will make numerous European wrestling appearances.

As is commonly the case when the Ponies meet on the home ice, Referee Umpire Al Flynn was afforded police protection following the Cavries 7 to 5 victory over the Ponies last evening. Whether or not Tyson was at fault really is beside the point, the practice of assaulting officials automatically places Belleville at a disadvantage as the Ponies lose, regardless as to the correctness of decisions.

Owing to some stipulation laid down by the Mitel Cup race was not included on the program of the Belleville Yacht Club's annual regatta off Massassaga Park yesterday. It is expected the Mitel Cup will become a trophy for all sailing craft under 25 feet but the race must be sailed in local waters. Incidentally a goodly crowd took in the Yacht Club picnic and a real day's outing was enjoyed. A good breeze was in evidence for the sailing events and the land sports were equally as well contested. Many are of the opinion the Belleville Yacht Club feel they have laid the foundation for a worth-while annual picnic after yesterday.

KINGSTON PONIES LOSE TO OSHAWA

Police Protection Needed For Umpire After Game Concludes

Kingston, July 16 (CP)—Kingston Ponies slipped into third place and Oshawa went farther ahead in first place in the Central Ontario Baseball League here Wednesday evening, when they secured a 7-5 victory over the Ponies in a hard fought game.

It was the first defeat on their home grounds this season for the Ontario champions and was featured by such calling of balls and strikes by Umpire Al Tyson that police protection needed to escort the official from the playing field.

Ponies made 14 hits and could score only five runs while Oshawa manufactured their seven runs out of only two hits, the other three coming on errors by the Kingston infield.

The game was run in the eighth when visitors counted four times. With none out Matthews singled and Howden was safe on E. Scrutton's error on what looked like a double play. Max Jones and Jimmy Biddle was rushed to the mound to strike out three men and end the game.

Quartette Named By Boxing Heads For Berlin Trip

Montreal, July 16 (CP)—Four Canadian champions will carry Dominion colors in boxing and challenge to the Olympic games. The quartet, picked by the selection committee early today, are Mickey Hennessey of Montreal, flyweight; Wilf Greenwood of Winnipeg, featherweight; Irving Pease of Toronto, middleweight; Maurice Cameron of Winnipeg, welterweight.

Hennessey, picked by the committee to three more fighters to travel to Berlin, if their trip can be financed privately; George Bird of St. Catharines, Ont., Canadian lightweight champion; Herve Lacoiles of Ottawa, bantamweight, and Oliver Schanks of Edmonton, light heavyweight.

The four Winning fighters, Cameron and Marquart were rated by the committee as the No. 1 and No. 2 men of the team. Both were impressive in each of their four bouts and both retained their titles they won in 1935.

Hennessey held his welterweight championship with decisions over Ray McIntyre, Montreal, in the semi-final and Gordon Schalamit, Kitchener, Ont., in the final. McIntyre, a colored scrapper, gave him the hardest fight.

There was no doubt, either, as to Pease's superiority. Although their final decision was not announced for more than two hours after they started the meeting officials declared Cameron, Marquart and Pease had been accepted on the first ballot.

The Toronto middleweight ruler, also a retainer of his title, was a unanimous verdict over Buy Hurdman of Toronto in the final and Walter Franklin of Ottawa in the semi-final. It was Franklin who came to Toronto to dethroning the Toronto slugger.

Somerville to Play In Amateur Tourney

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Winnipeg, July 16—(CP)— Ross "Sandy" Somerville, native of Scott, Ont., Scot, will be seeking his sixth Canadian amateur golf crown, when he leads the Dominion's best shotsmiths into Winnipeg Aug. 3. Chicago Loser

Great though the 33-year-old Somerville is—and he recorded his unbelievable 68 as one of the world's finest amateurs—he will face formidable opposition from a host of fine Canadians in the history of the event.

Twice the nation's golfers are improving year by year is seen in the consistently lower scores turned in each season by the younger shotmakers—by the veterans, too—and records of events throughout the Dominion.

JOKA WINS RACE

Defeats "After U" by 25 Seconds in Special Event

Members of the local South End Yachting Athletic Club and friends, hundreds strong, who gathered at Massassaga Point on Wednesday afternoon held a most successful picnic, annual picnic of the organization. Cool breezes and clear skies, with just enough to make the various sailing events interesting contributed to the complete success of the day.

Busy for weeks on the arrangements, executive committee of the Club presented a full day's program of various events both on land and water.

In the special sailing race between the "Joka" and the "After U" the "Joka" was the victor over her perennial rival with 25 seconds to spare. The race was one of the closest witnessed during the day. In the other classes "Joka" again won in A. Class, followed by the Alaska and the "After U". In B Class the Alaska skipper was followed by the Presto; B Class winner was the Dorothy with the Scrapper second; D Class was won by the Bromedo with the Polly second.

Results of the land races were as follows:

Girls, 6 and under—Eileen Jeffs, Isabel Armitage and Shirley Adams.

Girls, 10 and under—Gwen Hay, Helen Keller and Ilga Pegrums.

Boys, 6 and under—Paul Stephenson; G. Samuel and Jos. Rushlow.

Boys, 13 and under — Douglas Rosebush, Roy Hay and L. Armstrong.

Most amusing race of the day was staged when the "fat man" of the Club lined up for the starting gun. The race was won by Bill Bonthron over his two competitors, H. Semark and Ken Lackford.

Not until darkness had fallen over the Point did the last of the picnickers start for a day spent beneath the popular picnic grounds. A carrying empty basket of provisions had been well laden with lunches. An efficient system of transportation by boat to the Point running on regular schedules had been arranged by the Club for the day.

King Edward is Unhurt; No Shot is Discharged

Assailant Near Arch

Witnesses' statements indicated that the suspect was standing in the crowd near the Arch until a few seconds before the King rode by.

Then he suddenly pushed himself to the front rank despite the usual police precautions of uniformed Bobbies on both sides of the thoroughfare and detectives scattered through the crowd.

Various versions, told by different persons standing close by, indicated the revolver was thrown at the King or knocked out into the roadway by bystanders or policemen.

One generally accepted account was that "a woman in grey" had seized the man's arm as the gun came up. A policeman quickly went to the woman's assistance.

Some persons asserted the revolver was thrown so accurately that it hit a flank of the King's horse, causing the animal to flinch.

Police Say Gun Thrown

Scotland Yard asserted the revolver actually was thrown, but it did not indicate that it came anywhere near the King.

In Bow Street police court, the prisoner stood trembling violently from head to foot, shifting from one leg to the other, wiping his face and drumming the sides of the dock with clenched fists.

Inspector Sands produced two rounds of live ammunition taken from the man, along with a black-bordered envelope containing a postcard portrait of the King and a newspaper on which was pencilled "May, I love you."

His name and the charge against him were not mentioned in the court proceedings.

After the accused had been remanded to jail, a solicitor representing him stated:

"No Intention to Assassinate," says Mahon

"In view of reports which appeared in tonight's evening papers, the prisoner wishes to say there was no attempt at assassination nor was there any intention of assassination."

Until recently, the defendant was quoted as saying, he had been editor of a paper called the "Human Gazette."

Scotland Yard issued the following statement:

"During the return journey of the royal procession from the presentation of colors to the Brigade of Guards in Hyde Park this morning, a man pushed his way to the front of the crowd near Wellington Arch on Constitution Hill.

"Exactly what followed has not yet been ascertained, but a revolver fell in the roadway between the King and the troops following him.

Not a Shot Fired

"Not a shot was fired, but the revolver was found to be loaded in four of its five chambers."

Eyewitnesses of the incident did not mention any attempt to fire the revolver.

Harry Black, one of these witnesses, said: "I saw a man who had something in his hand. He threw it in the roadway. The King turned around and looked at it for a moment, then rode on."

J. H. A. Dickson said: "When the King had ridden down the hill for a few yards, he seemed suddenly to sit up.

Mounted Men Grabs Revolver

"Then a mounted policeman jumped off his horse very hurriedly and grabbed something lying on the roadway—some people thought it was a bomb.

"Then policemen grabbed hold of a man and rushed him away."

One of the last occurred on May 11, 1925, during the celebration of King George's Jubilee in Belfast when a resident threw a bottle at the Duke of Gloucester's automobile.

A similar incident occurred July 14, 1934, in Edinburgh, when a bottle was thrown at the car in which King George and Queen Mary were returning from the Hamilton races.

Some witnesses said they thought King Edward's horse was struck on the flank by the revolver.

One Story Says Gun Aimed

The Evening Star in contrast to the police report, stated the suspect actually had aimed the revolver at the King but that a woman had knocked it out of his hand.

Said William Thomas: "The King noticed something as he rode by and kept his eyes on someone in the crowd.

"The next thing I saw was a mounted policeman jump from his horse and seize a man. There was something in the man's hand."

Scotland Yard announced the suspect was held under the Firearms' Act.

No Special Guard for King

An official at the Yard police headquarters said no special measures were taken for the King's protection during the parade but that there were "the usual precautions with uniformed men lining the streets and plainclothesmen mingling with the crowd."

In addition His Majesty, as is usual on such occasions, was accompanied by the captains of his bodyguard, The Royal Horse Guards.

King Spotted Something

C. Harold Einecke, of Grand Rapids, Mich., on vacation in London, said: "I was standing just at the top of Constitution Hill when I noticed the King looking steadily toward the left.

"I think from his rigid attitude he must have spotted something. Certainly his horse seemed to sense something was wrong, for it looked uneasy and its ears were twitching.

"Then, just as the King passed, there was a scuffle and a man rushed out from the crowd.

"The King seemed completely unmoved but the excitement of the crowd nearby was intense. Soldiers and police rushed forward.

"A number of women in the crowd screamed and several fainted. They were quickly attended by ambulance men."

After staying only a short time in Buckingham Palace, the King motored to St. James' Palace for luncheon and to deal with state papers.

Afterward he went by automobile to his summer residence, Fort Belvedere.

Picture of Incident Taken

The police took into custody a man who had made a photograph of the incident so promptly that his picture showed the revolver flying through the air.

They also held for questioning two women, who said they had witnessed the whole affair.

Excitement and consternation prevailed in most sections of London as the news spread.

Afternoon newspapers showed a picture of a bare-headed, full-faced man in the grip of four husky Bobbies.

Only one afternoon paper called the incident an attempt on the King's life, the others carefully stating: "Man Points Revolver Toward King."

Credit was given to a "woman in grey" who was believed to have knocked the revolver from the man's hand.

Sir John Simon, Home Secretary, and thereby in charge of the police, informed the House of Commons in grave tones of the incident. He repeated the Scotland Yard statement almost word for word.

In conclusion, Sir John said: "The whole House will be profoundly thankful that the risk to which His Majesty was exposed was so promptly averted."

Police said the arrested man, whose identity was not disclosed immediately, will be charged in Bow Street police court with "a political offence."

The King had ridden to Hyde Park to present new colors to six battalions of foot guards.

With the King rode his brother, the Duke of York. The presentation of the colors took place in brilliant sunshine, with Queen Mary and other ladies of the royal family watching.

Gun Lands 20 Yards Away

The Evening Star reported the revolver landed 20 yards from the King just after he had passed through the arch at the head of Constitution Hill.

An alleged eyewitness, however, said the missile actually struck the flank of the King's horse.

Another witness said: "I was watching the King riding along, when I became aware of a commotion.

King Rides On

"A mounted policeman got off his horse and picked it up. For a moment, the King looked as though he intended to dismount but he rode on."

A woman eyewitness said: "As the King had just ridden through the arch, a man rushed up from somewhere near the back of the crowd.

"He appeared to be holding a revolver. His hand was gripped by a woman and a policeman.

"It all happened in a flash. Police rushed to the spot and the man was taken away."

Accused Not Mobbed

First reports of the incident indicated spectators had mobbed the man, but it later developed he was merely quickly taken into custody by police.

After riding back to Buckingham Palace and through the gates, the King quietly saluted Queen Mary on the balcony and disappeared into the inner courtyard.

Another eyewitness said: "I saw two men being hustled away. Each had four policemen around him and there were three or four mounted policemen with them. Motorcycle police were there, too."

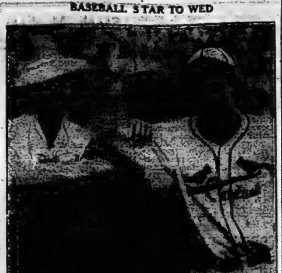
Prays For Peace

In presenting the colors, the King said: "Only a few of us on parade this morning have known the awful weight of war with all its horrors, yet all its comradeships, during the world struggle 25 years ago.

"With all my heart I hope and, indeed, I pray that never again will our age and generation be called on to face such stern and terrible days.

"Humanity cries out for peace and an assurance of peace and you will find in peace opportunities of duty and service as noble as any that bygone battlefields can show."

The new colors were presented to the first and third battalions of the Genadier Guards, the first, second and third battalions of the Coldstream Guards, and the second battalion of the Scots Guards.



Six Battalions Honored

The six battalions were formed up in close column of companies on the west side, with the massed bands of the three regiments in the centre of the line. The old colors were posted about the centre of the parade.

The old colors were defiled past the King in slow time, to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne". Then the new colors were consecrated. As soon as all the colors had been presented, they were marched in slow time to join their battalions, the bands playing the National Anthem.

After the ceremony, the King rode back to Buckingham Palace at the head of the troops, who marched in column of fours.

Fires in Grass Create Menace

With a mild epidemic of grass fires breaking out in the city and vicinity due to the heat and the tinder-like nature of the grass, the public is again warned to exercise even greater care and precaution in the disposal of burning matches, ashes and matches, according to a responsible fire official.

Station Street and Foster avenue were the scenes of grass fires this afternoon, which, however, were soon in both instances.

The city limits of houses and other buildings constitutes a grave danger and the public at large are reminded to be on the alert at all times to prevent minor conflagrations which may prove to be forerunners of a fire of serious proportions.

Information Laid by Game Authority Against Flinton Men

Informations against three Flinton farmers were laid this week-end by Game and Fisheries Inspector Herb McCabe, charging Cyrus Jess and James Fringle, Flinton, with the illegal possession of venison and also a second charge of hunting and destroying deer out of season.

The charges arose out of recent complaints of residents of the Flinton district regarding the alleged wanton and illegal practice of shooting deer out of season. When Inspector McCabe arrived at the home of James Fringle, with whom his nephew Jess, resides, the official today stated he found a quantity of venison and a rifle, alleged by the complainants, to be used in the destruction of the deer. Later at Orval Pringle's home, nearby, another quantity of venison Inspector McCabe stated. None of the accused men have been served as yet. Inspector McCabe intimated that warrants were then before sundown, however.

It is believed by game authorities the violations were traced to supply tourist trade in that section of the county. The cases will be prosecuted probably in the county of Northbrook next Wednesday, if the writs are issued. Inspector McCabe stated at noon today, before leaving for Flinton to issue summonses.

BLACK CHERRIES AT 15 CENTS BOX

Fine Samples of Home Grown Cabbage and Cauliflower Offered

Red and black cherries at fifty and seventy cents the six quart basket and fifteen cents per box, while sweets and black at the same price with a brobdingnag of red raspberries at the new price of twenty cents per box or eighteen cents if one bought them by the crate, succeeded to a fairly slow mid-week market in this community.

An exceptionally fine sample of home grown cabbage and cauliflower as regards size and quality was on display with the vendor declaring that irrigation of her garden was the only means available for the fine quality. A pioneer sample was offered at fifteen cents a cents and was readily disposed of.

Columbia blue raspberries made their appearance in any quantity and sold at two boxes for thirty-five cents.

"Not only are the currants cooking on the bushes," said a fair Belleville housewife today, "but the bushes themselves are gradually dying from sheer heat. The fruit right on the top of the bushes is a total wash and when I picked the last currants are heavily foliaged which protected the fruit growing near the ground, considerably from suffering from being a total loss."

An abundance of new potatoes was in evidence with prices remaining steady at fifty cents the peck and $1.80 the bushel with the quality varied being disposed of at thirty-five cents.

700 MILE FRONT AFIRE IN NORTH; IS STILL SERIOUS

Five New Fires Started on Wednesday in Algonquin Park

FOUR UNDER CONTROL

Showers Reported in Kenora And Sioux Districts

Toronto, July 16 (CP)—The gravest conflagration menacing Canada's forest fires, stretched out over a 700 mile front in the north, must still be considered serious, W. C. Cain, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, said today the Sudbury district and parts of the Thunder Bay district.

WOMAN IS HAILED FOR HER BRAVERY

She is Given Credit For Preventing Injury to King

London, July 16 (AP)—A little maiden, aged 10 and a kindly old grey, was acclaimed tonight for preventing injury to the king.

Spectators, standing near Wellington Barracks, saw the conversation he rode by, saw a man with a revolver in his hand, suddenly push the girl to the side of the crowd as the king appeared.

There were policemen, soldiers and detectives there, but none of them moved as quickly as the little woman in grey. She knocked the revolver out of the man's grasp. It is to be presumed.

So hard did she hit, some witnesses averred, that the revolver seemed to be thrown through the air.

Before the revolver had more than touched the ground, one policeman, then another, then a soldier, then pounced on the man who had held the gun.

The man hint back through the crowd so fast that many persons, including the king, never knew that anything had happened until men began shouting and women screaming.

Woman Rushed Away.

Both were then immediately surrounded by police and escorted quickly but gallantly back through the throng to the police compound where the prisoner had been taken.

Behind the fringe of spectators who had barely been able to see the affair, a line of police constables formed and moved forward, so that their faces could not be seen.

But bystanders cheered them.

Tonight the home office was frequent concerning their identities. No names were given out.

Two Injured as Car Swerves in Loose Gravel

Satchell, turned over three times on highway No. 37 near Actinolite early last evening injuring the driver and a passenger Mrs. Frank Hagerman. Dr. Gibbard gave medical attention at Tweed and later Mrs. Hagerman was removed to the Belleville General Hospital by Child Clare Agency, Tweed. It was reported suffering from injuries to her left side, shoulder, ankle and knee.

Satchell appeared before a local Police Magistrate today charged with the negligent operation of a motor car resulting in personal injuries being sustained, R. C. Donnan, K.C., local Crown Attorney, conducted the case which was adjourned for one week, however, following the information given out by Chief Hayes of Tweed.

Satchell's car was travelling at exceeding safety on highway No. 37 near Actinolite when the left forward wheel of the vehicle skidded on gravel along the left shoulder of the highway. The car swerved and then turned over three times, coming to rest on its wheels. There were tools strewn along the left shoulder of the highway for a distance of at least 80 feet," Chief Hayes stated after arraigning Satchell in the witness box. The car badly wrecked about the fenders, chassis and top. It turned over in the ditch. It was towed to Actinolite and placed in a garage.

MONARCH COOLEST OF ALL AT TIME

Unexcited at Apparent Attempt on His Life

London, July 16 (CP)—Apparent attempt on the life of King Edward was made today when a revolver flashed through the crowd and fell at the feet of his horse as he rode at the head of a procession to Guildhall.

Geo. Andrey MacMahon, a London police constable, leaped from the crowd to the horse's head and grappled with Sir Malcolm Murray, who calmly reined in his horse and held the man with his left hand.

Sir Malcolm, a veteran of the Boer war, is a member of the royal household.

The police closed in and seized Mahon. His address was given as Westbourne Terrace, West London.

Mahon was charged at Bow Street early at the spot in the crowd where the revolver was found, today on without any display of nervousness or excitement. He appeared to be the coolest person of the thousands who witnessed the incident.

The Missing Man

by

Mary R. P. Hatch

There was little doubt but that he had been supporting himself by good, honest labor all the time he was doing when he recovered his reason, or memory, in Seattle. He went away on Friday, the fifteenth of May; he returned on January twenty-fifth; and the interval was filled in with labor to support his necessities. Could anything be simpler or understanding than this?"

He took no cognizance of what went on during his absence—the bank troubles, his wife's hollow grief, the half-hearted search for him the monument to be set up in the cemetery. He knew nothing of all this, and when he returned to Cloverdale he was greatly astonished at the turn affairs had taken. He did his best to set them right, took up his place at the mill, and would have subsided into his old relation unquestioned by any one, had it not been for his wife's infatuation for Primus Ides, a common workman as he chose to appear but whom we now know to be a most accomplished villain. No ignorant, uncultured man could so have worked upon her sympathies as Ide man did; for Mrs. Hamilton is as accomplished, high-bred woman whose affection could not have been easily gained. But this man is noted for his resources, his ingenious methods of working out his plans. He saw the lady at church and was struck by her beauty. There can be little doubt but that he was filled by a wild, uncontrollable love for her the first time they met. Had he been a man of ordinary honesty, actuated by true manliness, he would have struggled against it. But he was not. He was a villain. He began to lay plans to possess her, knowing that her husband had left her perhaps never to return.

"In his love for this woman he forgot all else—forgot he was a fugitive from justice, disguised to appear a hale-fellow workman; forgot he had a wife already, the beautiful Lenore Ides. He had succeeding to him, as some women will, through evil as well as good report; or if he did not forget it, he put these considerations to one side, and set himself to win the confidence of Mrs. Hamilton by watching her windows, playing the victim, winning the love of her little boy, and various other artifices likely to work upon the heart and imagination of a woman like Mrs. Hamilton.

"She from the first professed to see a resemblance in Primus Ides to her husband, and, no doubt, he heard of it. But he made no use of this idea until after the return of her husband and he was warned not to go near the premises of the Hamiltons. Then he shot himself one morning on those very premises with a pistol, without doubt stolen from Dan Fry, in the hope of not being laid to Mr. Hamilton. All the fury about Solomon Marks by the learned counsel for the prosecution is of no account whatever. He has not been proved that he was in town that day at all, and, if so, that he had an opportunity for possessing himself of the pistol. But Ides did for he lived in the house with Dan Fry, and he had sufficient motives for the act. He wished to make it appear that he was shot by Mr. Hamilton, and the wound on his head—a slight one—was to be the groundwork of his claim; for, no doubt, he planned the whole scheme of villainy before the shooting of himself.

"Mrs. Hamilton did not go near him. Indeed, she was prudent from the first, but when Mr. Stevens sent for her to quiet her patient, whom she thought was wilder than ever in his ravings, Mrs. Hamilton went over. Ides claimed her as his wife the moment she entered the room, and she did not gainsay him. The next thing was to lay claim to the Hamilton estate.

"But before this, nearly two weeks before the shooting, he sent the poisoned ring to his wife to remove her from his path. The letter was signed 'Henry Ashley,' and was a loving, tender missive that would have deceived any woman. She wore the ring a few days and died. There was so much talk about the matter that it led to disinterment of the remains, when it was found that she had really been poisoned."

"Mrs. Hamilton did not go near peculiarities of many poisons, so potent and subtle in their action as to almost equal the wonders in tales told of charms condensed in the necromancer's phials. Such, he said, were in use in the Middle Ages, when poisoned rings were given to people of high rank when mental integrity was considered dangerous to the despot in power; and such a ring, he claimed, had been sent to Lenore, for it was well known in the circles of medical science that many of these rings had survived and come down to our day as curious reminders of past wickedness.

He then mentioned the initials H.A. on the linen of the claimant, and the attempt to prove the articles had been given him as falsehoods. He spoke of the absurdity of thinking that had the defendant been really Ashley, he would thrust his head into the lion's mouth by coming to Cloverdale and taking possession of another's estate, when he was already so well known to the police as it was proved that Henry Ashley was. There was no adequate motive for such a suicidal act. With Ides it was different. Ides was in love; and there was a powerful motive—powerful enough to make him brave even great danger in his hopes of success. The plea of insanity had all the time been a ruse, the counsel claimed, to evade punishment and get placed in an asylum from which he could more easily escape. The same plea, unified with that of great ignorance, served his purpose when he came to Cloverdale, and, no doubt, he would not have cast it aside had it not been for his passion for Mrs. Hamilton. But here it blew to the wind; and his reason and commonsense with it, when he made his fraudulent claims to the Hamilton estates after having perilled his life and soul with the murder of his wife.

Much more was said, but enough has been stated to give some idea of Mr. Stone's able and effective plea. There was no doubt it had been well considered, and it evidently bore upon its face the individual belief of the lawyer. At its close friends gathered around him, and both he and Mr. Hamilton were warmly congratulated, for court had adjourned, it being near noon.

The claimant Ides came in for a good share of the popular attention during the plea, for he seemed instinct with determination and defiance. When allusion was made to Mrs. Hamilton he was seen to clench his hand and start wrathfully in his seat, and he leaned forward to say to his counsel, Mr. Stevens, that he was glad she was not present.

Mr. Stevens was not glad. He felt bad she been in court. Mr. Stone's speech must have lost some of its acrimony, and the more calm ladylike demeanor would have presented a speaking contrast to his words. However, the opportunity had passed, and the counsel for the prosecution trembled for the result.

Mr. Stevens began his argument at about two o'clock, and he rejoiced when he saw Mrs. Hamilton enter the court-room, for her presence served him to greater effort and belief in the justice of the cause he advocated.

He spoke of the able and exhaustive arguments of Mr. Stone, and of the manner in which the evidence had been presented to make it show to the best advantage. "No men know better how to conceal weak points than they," he said "in this case they had overdone the matter.

In almost—the same breath Mr. Stone had alluded to the initials found upon the claimant's linen and of the folly of supposing his client had he been Ashley, would have thrust his head into the lion's mouth by claiming the estates when so well known to the police. Yet he argued that this was exactly what had been done, and that, furthermore, initials had been allowed to remain by a man perfectly sane and one who knew full well the danger of such an admission.

Was this good reasoning? Would the claimant, if really Ashley, and sane, have submitted these tell-tale articles to the washing and ironing of Mrs. Fry if he were really Ashley and knew what he was doing? Most assuredly not. The only course to pursue was to believe what he said about them—that they were given him by a fellow workman. Such a one named Harrison Arkwright was known to have worked with him and no doubt he was the person who formerly owned the shirt and handkerchief. Mr. Stevens owned to its seeming absurd that the claimant should profess to have lost his memory just as the respondent had done. It was strange, looked upon at that point of view.

But there was another aspect of the case and a true one, far more reasonable. When the two men met at Portland depot—as they most assuredly did meet on the Friday in question—the respondent had ample opportunity to see for himself the condition of the true claimant's mind at that time. It was perfectly evident that he had forgotten his own name; and when after the supposed death of his victim he came here to take the place of his brother, to transact the lake possession, what course would look so probable as to pretend he had lost his memory, as he knew the other to have done. This would account for the long absence, the probable manner of Hamilton on his way to Portland, and any inconvenient lack of knowledge regarding people and events which would of necessity recur to him. He could lay it to lapses of memory, as he had done more than once.

The respondent, who was in reality Ashley himself, was a man of great resources, of great ingenuity. He came to Cloverdale to step into his twin brother's possessions, after the supposed death of the true Vane Hamilton; and he laid claim to the latter's manner, peculiarities, and so forth, much of which was natural to him. The great resemblance was true and undoubted, but probably no greater than is often observed between twins of both sexes.

"I myself," said the counsel, "have seen two young ladies so startlingly alike that in a long ride on the railway from New York to Philadelphia I could not detect the least line of demarkation between them. They were dressed alike and they looked alike in every particular as far as it was possible for them to be, but the wife, She knew, or rather felt, that the man was not her husband, and the doubt was sufficient to cast about her a prudent reserve, though not sufficient to deny his claim in words.

MOHAWK BRANCH W. I.

On Tuesday evening the July meeting took the form of a picnic supper which was served in the Council Hall, when forty three sat down to a bountiful repast. After supper a special business meeting was held. The minutes of the June meeting were read and adopted. The treasurer's report showed a bank balance of $618.8. A request was made for bedding for a sick man, two of the members kindly donated a pillow slip each, and the branch gave a pair of cotton sheets. THE TARZAN TWINS

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

When the boys saw themselves encircled by hairy arms, they were too frightened to call out. But had they cried out, no one would have heard, for the Waziri were busy exterminating the cannibals, and Ukundo and Bulala had joined joyfully in that task.

Dee turned his eyes quickly upward and, to his horror, found himself gazing at the frightening visage of a great ape! From his lips issued a low moan, which was his woeful commentary on his fate. He had been saved from cannibals, only to be captured by an ape!

Doc, too, quickly took in the situation, but before either of the boys could even begin to struggle, their ape captors lifted them up and ran across the clearing. At the edge of the jungle both leaped into the trees and swung gaily through swaying branches.

Don's imagination raced wildly. He was intrigued by the thought that perhaps he and Dick could live for a time among the apes and become real Tarzans. The forthought himself of the doom-dum, that weird, unspeakable ceremony in which the apes kill their captives.

FOXBORO, LATTA SPLIT TWIN BILL

Latta Wins Opener 11-5 But Foxboro Comes Back to Win 17-6

LATTA, July 16. — Playing a doubleheader here Wednesday afternoon at Latta the homesters and the Foxboro Club staged a real old-time slugfest, the Latta boys coming home in front in the opener, when they pounded out a 11-5 victory over "Doc" Blakely's boys, but in the second tilt were batted into submission when the victorious Foxboro team jumped on 4 Latta hurlers for 23 safeties and were downed 17-6.

Carl Casey, in turning the Foxboro boys back in the first game, followed 12 safe clouts, the majority of them going over the short left field fence for two bases when ordinarily such terrific drives would go for three bases and more, while in the pinches the Foxboro lads hit the ball into waiting fielders' hands. On the other hand the winners in getting 16 safeties off the combined deliveries of Peacock and Ketcheson, drove their hits into safe territory, which being combined with loose playing in the pinches gave the victors enough runs to win quite handily.

In the first inning the losers jumped into the lead, when E. Ketcheson drove one of Casey's fast pitches to deep left for a homer, and were four ahead in the second, when Watt and E. Ketcheson singled in succession. Peacock was hit by a pitched ball filling the sacks, Healey scored two on a single with Ashley batting in another with a timely double. Casey then shut the doors out until the sixth when Ashley singled and scored on E. Ketcheson's double.

Get to Peacock

The Latta boys got to Peacock for ten markers in their half of second as Parks doubled and scored on Rutan's single, Orr was hit by pitched ball and Casey walked —Gowe whiffed, but A. Hall shoved another run across by singling again in the third. They scored two more runs to pull up even when after two were gone, Rutan and Orr walked in succession, both scoring on C. Hall's single over short. In the fourth, the winners forged ahead when Gowe singled, Hall was safe when Peacock blew a chance for a double play on his infield hit, Marsh doubled scoring two runs and Peacock, having trouble in locating the plate was benched by E. Ketcheson assuming mound duties. Ketcheson allowed one more run in the fourth when Parks singled and was hit hard in the sixth when four singles and a double scored four runs.

E. Ketcheson led the way with the club for the losers getting a homer and double with Blakely and Wall getting three hits out of four trips at the plate, while Gay and Ashley got two apiece. For the winners A. Hall and Parks got three clouts apiece with Gowe, Marsh, Rutan and C. Hall getting a brace.

Line-ups—Foxboro—Seeley, Ashley, E. Ketcheson, Blakely, Breese, Clay, Watt, H. Ketcheson, Casey and Williams. Latta — Gowe, A. Hall, Marsh, Simpson, Parks, Rutan, Orr, C. Hall and Casey.

In the second half of the twin bill, Latta's winning hurler of the first game, Carl Casey, tried to do the iron man stunt and turn in two wins in one afternoon, but after getting 15 solid blouts in the first game and being unlucky at that in hitting safely, the Foxboro boys jumped on Casey's offerings in the second game for nine safeties, five going for doubles and one for a triple, Casey called quits at that and was replaced by Callahan in the third but the winners were not to be denied and made merry at the expense of three following pitchers. As Coach Platt tried all the would-be hurlers in futile attempts to stop the barrage, finally calling Casey back to finish the trick.

Ashley in pitching for the winners was given airtight support and simply coasted to victory, and although he was nicked for ten safeties, he kept them for the most part well scattered.

To endeavour to give a detailed account of the game would be an impossibility, as the Foxboro boys in pounding out a 17-6 victory, rang up a total of 23 baseballs with 14 of them being doubles, which is enough to give any scorer a headache. Suffice to say is, that the hitting of Breese, Blakely and Seeley for the winners was a treat to watch, as Breese clouted the ball for five safeties including three doubles, while Blakely got two doubles and a brace of singles, Seeley connecting for three doubles and a single.

Parks, Simpson and Rutan were the only batters for the losers to connect with any degree of regularity as Parks connecting for three safeties, with Simpson getting a homey and triple, Rutan also scampering around the diamond, when his hit was lost in the swirl of arms behind first base.

Line-ups—Foxboro—Seeley, Ashley, E. Ketcheson, Blakely, Breese, Clay, Watt, Bernier and Williams. Latta—Gowe, A. Hall, Marsh, Simpson, Parks, Rutan, Orr, C. Hall, Casey and Callahan.

Detroit Tigers and Yankees Split as Mickey Cochrane Returns to Team as Manager

Fielding of Tigers Falls Apart in Nightcap Game

CUBS ADVANCE

Down Bees While The Phillies Take Game From Cards

By SID FEDER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Shoe figures, so they say, don't lie, all this recent stirring up alarm over the so-called slump of the Yankee murderers' row seems much ado about nothing, despite the Detroit Tigers' sudden surge and the return of Manager Mickey Cochrane to the world's champions.

Cochrane, out for weeks with a nervous breakdown, came back from his Wyoming rest cure to the helm of the Bengals yesterday, but the only celebration his boys gave him was a split in the doubleheader opener of their "crucial" series with the Yanks.

To be sure, the Yankee homicide squad of sluggers isn't doing all the bombarding it was a few weeks back, but no club could be expected to keep up that tremendous hitting pace throughout a season. Yet, in spite of their more-or-less fading batteries, statistics show the Yanks are taking care of themselves and their American League lead.

If there are any doubts, consider these pick-ups from the season's record books:

The Tigers have been grabbing the headlines with 13 victories in their last 14 starts to land in second place. Yet the Yanks have taken 12 out of the same 18.

The league lead of Gehrig and company was 10½ games on July 1. A week ago, it was nine games. Today it still is nine games. At that rate—a game and a half every two weeks—it will take the Tigers until October 15 to catch up. But the season ends in September.

The Yanks' slump—and as it is—was supposed to have started shortly after July 1. But since that date they've planned 500 ball—winning six and losing six while close to good enough for any outfit sporting as big a lead with the season well into its second half.

Fielding Collapses

Yanks took the night-cap of the twin bill 7-4 with a 10-hit attack, aided by a fielding collapse on the part of the Tigers, after losing 5-0 to Schoolboy Rowe 5-1 in the opener.

The National League lead, meantime, was undergoing a stretching with the Cubs boosting their edge to a full game by downing the Bees 7-2, while the up-and-coming Phillies pulled out a 5-4 win over the second-place Cardinals in a free-hitting battle.

The Cleveland Indians, boosting their winning streak to five straight with a 6-4 edge over the Athletics, moved into third place in the American League, while the Washington Senators, falling before Vernon Kennedy's pitching and the aroused White Sox 6-4 sank to fourth.

The Boston Red Sox were unable to move out of the second division, although trouncing the lowly Browns 11-3 and 9-1 with a heavy hitting barrage in a double-header. The Pirates lost a good chance to pick up ground on the Cardinals by just breaking even in a twin bill with the Giants, winning the first-inning opener 8-4, and then falling apart afield and in the pitching department in the nightcap to go down 14-4. The Reds, getting back into their winning stride in this season's night game, took the Brooklyn Dodgers, with Rookie Peaches Davis doing some tight pitching.

Foreign Office Sees Risk of Connecting With Soviet Russia

Vienna, July 17 (AP)—The Czech government was reported today to have guaranteed Czechoslovakia industries payment for armament deliveries to Roumania totalling 300,000,000 crowns ($8,300,000).

The guarantee was given by the government. It was said, to assist the Roumanian ally in building up defences.

Another 90,000,000 crowns ($2,490,000) owed by Roumania to Czechoslovakia, was reported to have been converted into a long term loan.

Newspapers in Vienna, commenting on the financial transaction, said the money would be used for building a railway or highway between Roumania and Czechoslovakia.

Berlin, July 17 (AP)—Officials of the German foreign office here represented today as aroused over reports that Czechoslovakia was helping Rumania finance a strategic railroad to connect Soviet Russia with Czechoslovakia.

Roumania Gives Consent

Paris, July 17 (C.P.-Havas)—Roumania has agreed to permit Czechoslovakia to build a strategic railway across Bukovina Province, linking Czech territory with the Soviet Union, Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, foreign news commentator, said today in the newspaper L'Oeuvre.

Bucharest, July 17 (C.P.-Havas)—Rumania has not given the Soviet Union permission to send troops across its territory in the event of war, Foreign Minister Nicholas Titulescu said today in an interview published here in the newspaper Universul.

"I am not a Communist, but I consider that a misunderstanding in the field of foreign policy with the Soviet Union, which is allied to our allies, France, Czechoslovakia and Turkey, is the best way to give our treaties of assistance their full force," Titulescu said.

NEW YORK PRESS REFLECTS RELIEF

Danger to The King and Relief at His Escape Sweep U. S. People

New York, July 17 (AP) — Editorial columns of New York newspapers today reflect the relief of the United States that King Edward escaped unharmed from yesterday's incident at London.

The Times:

The people of the United States rejoice heartily that the people of Britain around the world that their King has not suffered the attempted assassination but has borne himself as a brave and kingly true to the ancient definition that "a king is he who has no fear."

Of his course he gave frequent evidence as a prince. Of his conduct, for the happiness of his people, he gives daily proof as King. Even the most democratic of Americans rejoice those who pride themselves as British subjects in saying "God Save the King."

The Herald Tribune:

King Edward is so popular in this country that the attempt upon his life yielded a pang of personal shock. Fortunately, he was barely even brushed by the shot and the danger itself is one which all kings and many other prominent public men have learned to accept as a part of their lot. The political assassination, the kind which took down King Alexander, can be as significant as it is sinister. By contrast the lunatic attempt by some disgruntled man is as meaningless as the lightning . . . The incident . . . has already given the British public another opportunity to demonstrate its intense loyalty to the present King.

WOMAN WHEELED TO ELECTRIC CHAIR

Ossining, N.Y., July 17 (AP) — Mrs. Frances Creighton, electrocuted for the poison eggnog murder of Mrs. Avis Applegate, was the first person in Sing Sing Prison's history ever carried to the electric chair.

Her co-conspirator, her hired lurking against the back of a wheel chair, Mrs. Creighton was trundled into the death chamber but a few minutes after the death chamber door had swung open and was put to death four minutes after Mrs. Creighton's wheel chair had first appeared in the death chamber doorway.

Sing Sing's Warden Lewis E. Lawes said the unparalleled procedure of executing the husband and woman to the chair was decided upon only after the state had said it could not rise from her prison cot unassisted.

"He is going to operate a stand and I was going to see that he has the necessary electric energy for refrigeration," stated Mr. Cyril.

Olivia Dionne Wants Refreshment Stand

Toronto, July 17.—(CP)— Hon. D. Croll, one of the Dionne quintuplets' guardians, announced today that Oliva Dionne, father of the famous children, has applied to the government in connection with the operation of a refreshment stand at Callander, Ont., his home.

"He is going to operate a stand and I was going to see that he has the necessary electric energy for refrigeration," stated Mr. Croll.

Monarch Has Known Danger Seemed Rather to Court It

Gave up Steeple-Chasing After Cracking Shoulder-Bone

PILOTED OWN PLANE

London, July 17 (CP)—The king, it was recalled today, after his peril of yesterday, is not unacquainted with danger.

The monarch sought rather than avoided it during the war years when he served in France. When the war ended the Prince of Wales took up steeple-chasing and won most steeple-chasers was thrown several times much to the alarm of his friends and family. After he had cracked his collar-bone he was persuaded to give up the risky sport but took up flying. He learned to pilot his own plane and once more had the responsibility of taking the controls of a big passenger liner.

His Royal Flights.

Since he became king His Majesty has made four flights beginning with the trip from Buckingham to London for a few hours after King George's death. Later he flew from Windsor to Southampton and back to Windsor to meet Queen Mary. Last week he made an air tour of Royal Air Force flying fields.

Although he has been an enthusiastic spectator on the king has given up that recreation, entrusting his cars to chauffeurs.

Two Scotland Yard detectives accompany the king on his public appearances. In addition to scores of uniformed police lining the streets, other detectives mingle in the crowds.

But the police guard is not as tight as the precautions might indicate. This fact was made apparent as the king went by the entrance of a woman visitor who watched the king pass from a few feet away.

"Why, I could have almost reached out and touched him," she said.

Shattering the precedent set by his father, Edward has mingled freely among his subjects.

"This Is Your King".

He journeys by motorboat to inspect slums and in the course of his trips has worked by the decree of a humble dwelling where two old ladies were playing checkers.

"This is your king," he said. "May I come in?"

The old ladies upset the checker board in a wild scramble—but they showed their appreciation of the monarch's democratic attitude.

TEN-DOLLAR BILL FOR GOOD GUESSER

A novel way to attract attention to a show window and prolong the attention of the passerby is demonstrated in the window of a Front Street store where a Ten Dollar bill is displayed with the promise that it will be given free to the first one to enumerate the articles in the window. Now a crowd is there and the articles are many so the game should be interesting. Every day this week groups have gathered at the window and good notations made of the probable number of articles in plain view. The window was dressed by store members or the store staff so the exact number of articles is as much a mystery to the store staff as it is to the public outside looking in. Credit for the idea goes to Shepherd Flintoff, manager of the Bowra Electric and Hardware store. Numerous thus far have filed a claim for that ten dollar bill.

OWNERS WARNED ON CARE OF VEHICLES

Residents of the city taking cars to picnic or vacation spots over the week end are advised by one experienced local driver who experienced the thrill of having his machine almost burned up by a grass fire this week, to choose a spot, when parking their automobile, "Keep out of the dry grass. A cigaret end or a lighted match dropped in it may result in a fire which will destroy your car," he advised. "Everything is burned to a crisp at these places."

MAY GET HAIL AFTER HEAT WAVE

"We'll get hail after this heat wave—hail in the showers," stated a prominent agriculturist of Thurlow Township, this morning. "And if it does come down, it'll about ruin what there is left of the grain still standing."

As if to substantiate the statement a thunderstorm with hail assurance firms that already some residents of the section have taken out hail insurance, just to be on the safe side.

Just three weeks ago today rain fell over the district, accompanied by rashes of lightning spitting the sky. The downfall was general, however, and since then the ground has become thoroughly baked and dry.

The little animal is declaring quite tame and ventures close to view the operations of construction.

SHIPPING CHANNELS MUST BE KEPT OPEN

"Keep your shooting boats well over toward the west side of the harbour," he added.

CALLS ARE GIVEN FOR ODD JOBS

That local people are co-operating with the local Employment Bureau in alleviating the present unemployment situation is shown in the number of telephone calls being received by the Bureau for men to do odd jobs.

Weeding gardens, mowing and watering lawns are a few of the jobs offered and needless to say, these are gratefully accepted by the greater majority of the men.

From across the bay come yarns regarding the bring of many a husky fish, telling them go and tracing them to their lassitude.

Belleville Magistrate Ernest that on a recent fishing trip they anointed a large worm with a fishy-smelling liquid and were amazed when they hauled in their line to discover the unfortunate worm shaking the daylight out of a ten pound eat.

But the dealy of the tall stories comes from a gentleman who is famed for his veracity. It appears the gentleman in question, in anticipation of a long day with rod and reel, took a lunch basket with him. Later, hearing a noise behind him, he turned in time to see a forty pound pike in the act of lifting the basket from his place in the boat.

After dinner, he returned to his boat and nearly fainted with surprise when he discovered the basket back in its original position. Attached to it was a note, upon which was inscribed "Next time make the sandwiches with ham, Wheddaya think we are, cannibals?"

FISHING TALES

With the fishing season at its height many and varied are the stories emanating from the different fishing grounds and fishermen.

For instance there is the one told by a party of four Izaak Waltons, who caught four handsome trout while supposedly fishing Lake Ontario. Friend wife swallowed the story hook, line and sinker until the following day when a Prince Edward County fisherman telephoned to say that her husband had forgotten his change.

Then from Deseronto comes a fishy story to the effect that large croakers are dining daily on luscious young ducks.

BOY EXPLORERS LOSE THEIR ROUTE
Unforgettable Experiences of Corbyville Boys Near Actinolite

Drifting through the tortuous stretches of a winding river with a merciless sun beating down upon sunburned backs, poling and poling their way through weed-strewn shallows; waiting to their necks in foaming rapids with young bodies straining under the weight of heavily laden canoes which they were forced to haul, being forced to sleep on stones strewn with mosquito bites on all sides; beside smoking or smudge fires built in an effort to drive off swarms of voracious mosquitoes; paddling for hours when almost hopelessly lost without seeing a human being; all these and more fell to the lot of a party of exciting adventurers which befell Daniel Wright, Junior, of Corbyville, and Jack Roth of Corbyville on a holiday journey from which took them from Corbyville to Madoc.

Set Out in Happy Mood

Leaving the home wharf at four o'clock Sunday morning, the young adventurers were in high spirits, and the party to the trip started out in happy vein.

Up the smooth waters of the Moira River they guided their craft, Warm sunshine flooded the scene as the boys proceeded happily on their way.

Stopping at intervals for rest and refreshments, the boy-explorers were well on their way at nightfall.

At dusk they reached a point where the river narrowed. Dank weeds pushed green spears high above the water level. Stunted trees hanging trees lined the riverbank. Up ahead the river split its course and the question rose as to which being of the stream to pursue. After a mild debate they decided on the right hand course which proved to be the wrong one.

Lost! Lost! Lost!

Mile after mile went by, and feelings of misgivings rose in the youthful breasts. Straining their eyes for some sign of human habitation they paddled slowly along. And with the darkness descended swarms of hungry flies and mosquitoes. Realizing they were lost and suffering from the ravages of the voracious insects, the youths decided to land and spend the night on the riverbank. But sleep was denied them for so intense were the insect attacks that they were forced to build smoke fires in an effort to ward off the mosquito assault.

Following a sleepless night, the youths set out with the hope of establishing their whereabouts. Up ahead looming water denoted shallow rapids. Swift currents swept them back and they were forced to jump overboard and haul their canoe through to the safety of smooth waters. On to their necks, with water cascading over their heads they struggling with their craft. Then and again they waded through shallow rapids, straining and hauling against swiftly moving water. Hours passed. Then hope sprang up in boyish breasts as they came in sight of human habitation. Paddling swiftly they drew near only to discovering that their adventurous trail had carried them along the Skootamatta River to Actinolite.

After a rest they retraced their course down the Skootamatta to where it joins the Moira River thence to Black Creek and Moira Lake arriving at their ultimate destination in Madoc, happy and wiser boys.

"The boys expect to arrive home on Sunday," relates Ted Orr, of the Ontario Intelligencer this morning. "But they are travelling via motor car, not canoe."

COURT TO VIEW SCENE OF CRASH
Evidence Submitted by All Witnesses in Case

Abruptly terminating in order to permit His Worship Magistrate K. J. Butler, K.C., to visit the scene of an accident, today's local police court was adjourned at noon in be resumed on Highway No. 37 in Corbyville, an Saturday morning, when Magistrate Butler and parties concerned in the accident, which resulted in a charge of reckless driven by L. R. Schrack of Niagara Thebault, of the same address, was the scene of the crash in order to determine certain measurements submitted in today's court.

The charge was laid by Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine, following a motor crash at Corbyville shortly after midnight of July 11th, when an automobile driven by Harry Thebault is alleged to have collided with another motor car drive ndy L. R. Schrack of Niagara Falls, N.Y., resulting in considerable damage to both vehicles. Mr. Chas. A. Payne, K.C., appeared for the accused while L. R. Donnan, K.C., local Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution.

Constable Irvine, who investigated the accident, testified to certain measurements following the accident, that satisfied him the car driven by Thebault was following the lefthand side of the road at the point of impact with the Schrack's car. Witness also added that Thebault's car travelled a distance of 83 feet, both cars having broken left front wheels. The officer also stated there were signs of beer and produced three bottles of beer, that he said he found somewhere near the scene of the accident under a clump of bushes.

Swore Car Swerved

Mr. Schrack swore, that as the car driven by Thebault was passing his car, it suddenly swerved and struck his car back of the left front wheel. "After the accident I told Thebault it was the result of either his mouth full of beer or sleepy," Schrack testified under oath.

Thebault admitted the presence of beer and also of any drinking in the party that included him, Prew M. Sharpe of this city, and two young ladies. Sharpe and Thebault were travelling in separate cars, which Thebault added he was sure he was driving on the right side of the road and added he saw Schrack's car approaching and it appeared to be on the wrong side of the highway just before the crash. Prew Sharpe, who was travelling in a smaller car ahead, he said, also testified that he thought Schrack was on the wrong side of the road.

Sharpe admitted the ownership of the beer found abandoned in the ditch. "I was told to get rid of it and threw it in the ditch under a bridge," he testified. After the accident he turned round and returned to the scene of the accident," Sharpe related in court. He added that he had purchased the beer from a "stranger" at his home early Saturday evening.

All denied the presence or drinking of liquor, except Sharpe, who said he only drank beer in the afternoon, however. During the evidence submitted by Constable Irvine, he produced figures of measurements taken by him to show that Schrack's car was six feet from the west curb, while the point of impact indicated the Thebault's car was nine feet from the same curb on the opposite. Thebault, in his testimony, reversed the positions of the cars, and entered the same contentions.

At the suggestions of Mr. Donnan and Mr. Payne, His Worship adjourned the court until Saturday morning, when all parties will meet at the Court House and proceed to the scene of the accident, where further measurements will be taken and the skid marks that are still predominant on the highway, and witnesses readily stated. Owing to the fact His Worship was due to hold court in Picton this afternoon, the police court adjourned shortly after noon today to resume in Corbyville at the scene of the accident tomorrow.

VEHICLE MOUNTS RAIL OF BRIDGE
Falls Backwards on Bridge Floor And No One Injured

When an automobile driven by Frank Goodfellow, Plainfield, crashed into the guardrail, that skirts O'Brien's bridge, the vehicle not only mounted the side of the bridge, but turned completely over, coming to rest on the floor of the bridge without seriously injuring either of the occupants of the vehicle last evening. Mr. Goodfellow was proceeding easterly over the bridge and travelling in a southerly direction as he met another motor car, being driven in the opposite direction by Louis Orr, of Belleville.

After the accident Mr. Goodfellow informed police authorities he was of the opinion that his car did not have sufficient room to pass Mr. Cole's car and had swerved his own car suddenly to the left to avert a headon collision. In so doing Mr. Goodfellow's automobile struck the wire-skirting along the side of the bridge, mounted the railing and then suddenly dropped over backwards and came to rest lying on its top in the centre of the bridge. Mr. Goodfellow and Mr. Stanley Jackson, also of Plainfield, escaped with minor injuries, the latter suffering cuts about his hands and face and a broken finger.

The accident was investigated by Provincial Constable Wm. McBride, who reported today, that the traffic on highway No. 37 was blocked for a considerable period as the result of the accident. The top and body of Mr. Goodfellow's car was badly damaged as he hurtled backwards onto the floor of the bridge. Fortunately neither vehicle was travelling at a great rate of speed and no charges will be laid, police stated today.

"Had Mr. Goodfellow been travelling at an excessive rate of speed his car might have been buried clear of the bridge and into the deep waters of the Moira River below and a more serious accident recalled," explained Constable McBrien today.

July 9th, 1936.

Mr. and Mrs. John Green,
Fuller, Ont.

Dear friends—,

Birthdays come at various times, some bring their birthday in the depths of winter, and some in the balmy days of Spring. You both have enjoyed life in one of the busiest seasons of the year. Notwithstanding this you should have thought it well worth while to assemble here to commemorate your natal day.

Together have travelled life's journey for years, and experienced its ups and downs, both the sunshine and the shadows.

And now in asking you to accept these articles of furniture as a slight token of our friendship, we know that their value will not measure up to the high esteem in which you are held by your many friends. May God Providence grant you both many happy years unbroken by sorrow and care.

TREMORS FELT MOST SEVERE

Windows And Furniture Rattled at Spokane, Washington

The tremors were the most severe felt here since last October 16, when the "Cheakwash" of the quake which devastated Helena, Montana was felt. Montana city escaped last night's quake.

Minor shocks were reported throughout eastern Washington, Northern Idaho and Oregon, variously between 11.55 and 11.15 p.m. (12.55 a.m., E.S.T.) Wednesday. Wash. reported two separate shocks.

The quake was severe enough at Walla Walla, Wash., to send theatre patrons scurrying for the outdoor. Frightened upper floor apartment dwellers in Spokane hurried from the buildings.

Spokane, Wash., July 16 (AP)—An earthquake of several seconds' duration awakened residents throughout most of the Pacific northwest last night by rattling windows and furniture.

THE KING BELOVED

How much King Edward Eighth is beloved by his subjects throughout the Empire was indicated through its widest expanse and furthest confines on Thursday when the world was startled with a story of a scene on the streets of London when a revolver loaded with shells was flung to the pavement from among the crowd as the King was passing by at the head of a military parade after presenting new colors to regiments of the Guards and making a speech in Hyde Park on the urgency of peace. News that there had been no shooting and that outside of the incident of the commotion, the throwing of the gun and the arrest of a man, nothing out of the usual had occurred calmed the fears of the people, and brought sighs of relief from many millions throughout the world.

The King has made himself endeared throughout his Empire and he has won the admiration and respect of the entire world. Messages of congratulation from many parts were sent to His Majesty, expressing gratitude that there had been no injury.

That King Edward will be spared such scenes is the prayer of every British subject and of millions of dwellers of other lands who see in King Edward and his Empire great hopes for all mankind. In very earnest they can prayerfully sing "God Save Our Gracious King."

The calmness of the monarch and his people during the scene, as exemplified in the heroic action of the "woman in grey" are highlights which show up very clearly in times of emergency those qualities of the people who dwell in the British Isles which makes them the admiration of mankind.

VIMY PILGRIMAGE

The Vimy Pilgrimage has begun. Thousands of Canadians who saw war's experiences go back to the scene of struggle and to the hill where stands the majestic memorial in the presence of war dead. There in a few days His Majesty King Edward Eighth wearing the khaki of an infantry officer will dedicate this shrine of Canada in a far land. Thoughts of Canada will be abroad at that time.

At Vimy Canada earned a glorious name. It is right that the tribute to the fallen about this redoubtable mound should be one of the noblest of all the war memorials. And this Canada has in that unique pile built of marble.

The ex-service Pilgrims go back with feelings so different from those they felt in war days. Years have passed since the taking of the ridge. A lifetime of experience in peace and economic strife has intervened.

But the men find in Vimy a shrine. They have memories they cannot and will not forget—the comradeship of war, which in some ways was one of the noblest flowers of human experience, because fashioned and wrought in the furnace of affliction and suffering and created in the sense of a unity of aim and a common fate. This gives Vimy Memorial's unveiling and dedication a peculiar significance to the war veterans. To the relatives, who are making the pilgrimage to France, that land and Vimy particularly at this time will bear a significance and an influence which will never be forgotten. Fathers, mothers, wives, children of the men who went have seen that land in dreams or poignant memories. To the young it was there that titanic deeds were done.

This pilgrimage will live in history. Those who are privileged to go will see a setting, the like of which will not be seen again. This dedication will mean a dedication of Canada to the ways of peace and of her sons and daughters to the cause of freedom for which these sleeping heroes of Vimy and a thousand other battlefields of the war rolled into one, suffered and died but conquered. Here and in many another hallowed spot, lie those who gave all. In the words of Lincoln "it is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these dead we may take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion." That ideal is the preservation of British ideals and the maintenance and preservation of peace.

One of the greatest of memorials of all time in stone is here that will be a sacrifice in a cause of world brotherhood. Here the men poured out their blood in a foreign land for a great principle. Only will full honor come to them when all mankind comes to see that peace is the glory of nations.

Misfortunes are in morals what bitters are in medicines—each is, at first, disagreeable; but as bitters may correct and strengthen the stomach, so adversity strengthens and ameliorates the disposition.—From the French.

MUSIC

Sounding brass and tinkling cymbal,
He that made me sealed my ears,
And the pomp of gorgeous noises,
Waves of triumph, waves of tears.

Thundered empty round and past me,
Shattered, lost for evermore.
Ancient gold of pride and passion,
Wrecked like treasure on a shore.

But I saw her cheek and forehead
Change, as at a spoken word.
And I saw her head uplifted
Like a lily to the Lord.

Nought is lost but all transmuted,
Ears are sealed, but eyes have seen;
Saw her smiles (O soul be worthy!)
Saw her tears (O heart be clean!).

"TRY COURTESY", NEW SLOGAN FOR ONTARIO MOTORISTS, PROPOSED BY THE MINISTER of Highways, finds favor with the Editor of the Montreal Star who comments as follows: "There is more in it than an exhortation to politeness of conduct. If a complete analysis could be made of the causes of motor accidents it would probably be found that, next to improper speed, plain discourtesy is at the bottom of more smash-ups than anything else; the impulse to get ahead of the other fellow; to hog more than a fair share of the road; to squeeze on curves; to pass an intersection before the other man can cross it; to bully somebody else by the aid of the modern nerve-shattering horn; to cut out of traffic on a narrow road and shoot past as many preceding cars as possible before being compelled to cut back in again, to the discomfort and danger of the driver thus forced to make a place; to drive without both lights in working order; to refuse to use dimmers upon signals, or merely as a matter of politeness plus common sense,—instances in which courtesy or the lack of it, has a very direct bearing upon the safety of life and limb might be multiplied almost indefinitely. Mr. McQuestin's two-word slogan is a capital one. Courtesy is certainly worth trying."

NUDISM, INDIVIDUALLY OR COLLECTIVELY, IN AND ABOUT MARMORA will not be tolerated, according to the Marmora Herald, which reports an early morning nudist swimming party near Marble Point with two men and two women disporting in the "altogether". Herald suggests the installation of a searchlight at the lake as the best means of discouraging such practises.

TWEED NEWS WHICH IS ONE OF THOSE NEWSPAPERS which folks look forward to as having a voice and something worthwhile to say struck a new line and an interesting one when in last week's issue it submitted two columns and a half of ten point suggestions to the Powers that Be and Rule under the heading YOUR EDITOR SUGGESTS METHODS TO ATTRACT TOURISTS AND BUSINESS. A dead newspaper can not even whisper but a live newspaper has a voice which carries far and wakes the sleepers. An editor's suggestions to promote progress may not be worth a lot in themselves but they stir up interest and awaken sluggish brains to moil over the matter of civic improvements, so that instead of the one brain of the editor giving thought to the problem many brains are set working—and the result cannot but be beneficial. Editor Sam Curry maintains a live editorial page an indication to folks who think that a rural editor's life is one continuous round of gayety, that he has labored many hours when he might have been fishing.

THE LADS FROM THE MOHAWK VILLAGE CERTAINLY MADE A FINE APPEARANCE in the parade Monday. If the spirit of Captain Joseph Brant, great War Chief of the Six Nations, could have looked down upon his descendants proudly marching to the music of their own fife and drum band he would surely have felt a burst of pride that the Brant traditions were being carried out so faithfully.

Misfortune is never mountful to the soul that accepts it; for such do always see that in every cloud is an angel's face. —Jerome.

FRENCH FASCISTS EMULATE NAZIS

Second Shooting in One Year

According to Mrs. Cumler grandmother of G. Malmgrine who was accidentally shot in the leg and discharged while his brother Gerald was playing with a gun of the well, this is the second shooting that has happened in her children's family within a year. The other was a similar case, when her only son's boy Earl Cumler, Frankford, Tana was shot in the spine while playing with a gun in the possession of his chums. Lloyd of Montana has been a cripple ever since. It is the hope that the grandmother received from her son said "that Lloyd was getting along fine." At police court yesterday after noon five jurors appeared and were dismissed with slights to an action polish the property of Mr. Fred Hall against Mr. Ernest Ash. As the children were so young the Crown Attorney refused to lay a charge against them. The oldest boy was 13 and the youngest 9. Retires

By his fellow workers of the C.P.R. an address and presentation of a club bag was made to Bernard Murray, Trenton, on the occasion of his honourable retirement from the active service of the railroad. The presentation took place in the C.P.R. Recreation rooms where a social evening was held in do honour to Mr. Farrar. W. J. Golden read the address and G. Hartwell read the address and made the presentation. Mr. Farrar started life as a farm man on the old Bay of Quinte Railway in 1881, which in time became Canada Atlantic, which in turn became C.P.R., and was with that line until retirement. Commencing here from Havelock in 1916, he made Trenton his home and until his retirement was a run to Toronto, London and Windsor.

Trenton Beats Brighton Runners

Trenton runners came out ahead on the annual five mile marathon of the Trenton and Brighton Field and Track clubs. This is a yearly affair and is always keenly contested. The race started from in front of the hotel and the runners jogged down by the golf course up to the lake road and back to the starting point in 38 1-2 minutes. Fred Coulter of Trenton, came in first with Lloyd Hall of the same club following behind. Jack Pearsons of Trenton, was the third man to cross the line. Many of the residents enjoyed the race.

Fire

The local Department were called to the home of Mr. William Johnson, Sophie St., to extinguish a fire that had broken out in the roof of the back kitchen. It is thought that the fire was caused by the recent heat wave as the Johnsons have not had a fire in their stove for some time. The fire was confined to a perfectly round five-inch hole, which had burned through the roof boards, working towards the interior of the building.

Charles Blanc who is with Chapman's Shows was sort of a scarecrow in Trenton yesterday. Mr. Blanc's Shows were set up on the Fair Ground, which he said were light compared to the ones he had seen seven years ago out of Russian Yellow. Mr. Blair a bystander remarked that Blanc looked as though he stood beside Blanc in an alleyway and remarked "Stand up straight" "You're wrong sir foot two," says Blanc "I'm six foot two." "Well I can make myself much taller and without the slightest exertion, Blanc was asked to show how he accomplished this feat. He told the crowd standing around that he was born in Belgium and while on his way to school a shell exploded came up. His school chums and himself made for a dug out and while under the tree a bolt of lightning struck the tree in front. That is the reason why he is able to stretch his body. He showed the crowd his legs, which were a mass of bumps and warts. He said he had undergone 500 cuts since one day. He has been in Canada three years. He carried away a service medal which he was awarded while a member of the Belgium army in the last war.

Picton and District

Picton—On Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Fred Shannon entertained in her schoolday arrangement birthday party in honor of the twelfth birthday of her daughter Marion. Twenty contesty young friends enjoyed games on the lawn, after supper was served at 5 o'clock. The birthday cake with its lighted candles was the centre of interest here. Mrs. Doris Fournia assisted the hostess with the games and refreshments. The children left at six o'clock for their homes, each child carrying an attractive favour.

Mrs. Ernest John Moore, Point Petre, received word on Tuesday of the illness of her son, Stanley Moore, in hospital in Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Walker are spending the summer camping at West Lake.

Saturday night brought what seemed to be a record crowd to Picton from surrounding rural districts. Early in the evening picturesque booths were erected on the slopes.

Lemons started selling at 25c a dozen early in the day, but with the coming of darkness prices until the last to be had, sold at 50c a dozen. Many were unable to obtain any. Bakeries were completely sold out of cakes, pastry and buns, although they had prepared larger quantities than usual. Grocers had a busy week-end replenishing their supplies of stock, to be ready for Saturday morning.

Mr. John Dunlop is ill in P.E.C. Hospital.

Master Stanley Lipson is holidaying in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Orval Edmonds of Chicago, Ill., have been visiting friends in this county, are spending some time with Mrs. Edmonds brothers, Mr. Milson Hyatt at Main Dunks, and Mr. Walter Hyatt, Bensen Corners. Mrs. Edmonds are accompanied by their two sons.

Mr. Fred Healy recently obtained seventy pheasant eggs from the government reserve at Codrington. These were set under hens at a farm at Point Petre. Thirty-two young pheasants have been hatched and are an odd sight, mothered by two hens. They are a mixture of wild-ness and tameness. Although very young they seem to be quite clever in finding their own food.

Mr. Healy is adding them to the number of pheasants he has at his reserve at his home here.

Orchard, Sgt. Fletcher, R.C.A.F., and Mrs. McKibbon, George and Mrs. Jordan, Fred Logie. Officers of "A" Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment assembled with the men to bid farewell to Major H. D. Graham. The assembly was the training headquarters just east of Trenton Library. Citizens and friends collected at the station and waved the pilgrims a happy goodbye.

River Dumping

"We haven't any city bylaw regulating the dumping of refuse into the river," said Mayor Ketcheson, "but has authority to forbid such practices, should they become objectionable in sufficient warning," it was stated at the Mayor's office today in regard to pollution of the Moira River.

The Moira annually becomes the dumping ground for refuse of all kinds, and this year the condition is worse than ever before. During the season, point out residents affected. Tin cans, corrugated paper cartons, decayed fruit and offal from various sources make up the greater percentage of waste found clogging the shallow waters of the river mouth. A thick, oily scum also at times covers the surface of the river and harbor to the annoyance of boat owners who claim their craft when not in use for days become filthy.

Children Requested to Register at Playgrounds

More than 4,500 children have been registered at the playgrounds offered by the Elwanis Club and the Board of Education at the Bay and West Belleville parks, since they were opened on July 8th, according to Mrs. Ethel Fleming, supervisor in charge. "There have been no accidents and everything has run very smoothly" said Mrs. Fleming. "The seasonal program is being prepared and will be available in the near future There will be special events for the children every day of the week."

Under the direction of the splendid offer of Miss Mary Ann Sullivan, a program that is of giving free instruction to children at the playgrounds each week, the committee has asked all the children who intend to attend the Track and Field Championships to register at the playgrounds. Events will take place at the East playgrounds on Friday, July 24th, and at the three-thirty at the West grounds. In the meantime, children are in search of an old phonograph and some records and if any citizen has one to spare, he may call the board or donation of the same to the committee will be gratefully appreciated.

Chief Laughlin stated today, that the children of College Hill especially the less age boys and girls are responsible for the damage to the play at the West Belleville playground. He will lay charges of activities at this park unless the damage is paid for by softball and hardball teams.

Front Road Sunday School Picnic Enjoyed

The beautiful sunshine and the pretty blue sky above was an ideal setting for the annual Front Road Sunday School picnic held Wednesday in Mr. T. J. Brown's grove overlooking the Bay of Quinte, Tuesday. A gala day for both young and old, and a good time was enjoyed throughout.

Just as the tables were spread under shady greenwood, and a bountiful repast was done ample justice to, the dinner over, social intercourse was enjoyed for a time, after which the children received, while the young people had a game of ball and enjoyed swimming and wading in the cool waters of the bay. The afternoon was taken care of the swing provided for their enjoyment. Another hour's social mingings and Miss Ruth Greatrix.

IT COSTS YOU NOTHING to be COURTEOUS to other motorists
I ASK YOU to please remember, as you hurry along the highways bound for some distant point, that it costs you nothing to be courteous to other drivers and it saves you money.
• It costs you nothing to sound your horn on the highway as you are about to overtake a fellow motorist and it may prevent an accident and thereby save you money.
• It costs you nothing to give the other fellow a wide berth when you meet him and it may prevent a side-swipe and thereby save you money.
• It costs you nothing to hand-signal your intention to slow down, turn or stop and it may prevent a collision and thereby save you money.
• It costs you nothing to "nip" along at the speed of the traffic you are in and it prevents other motorists from having to "cut-in" in order to get "there" and thereby removes one of the greatest causes of costly accidents.
• It costs you nothing to be courteous and considerate of your companions of the road and it will prevent accidents and thereby save dollars and cents for everybody and prevent broken bones and broken hearts as well.
So I appeal to you from the standpoint of sheer economy to be courteous to other motorists on all occasions.
Practise and preach the golden rule of the road—"Show to others the same courtesy that you would like to have shown to you".
Sincerely yours,
Geo. S. Henry

Fairgrounds in Danger Of Raging Grass Fire

Crackling flames which leaped through the grass and weeds of vacant pasture fields, racing before a strong pall of smoke in Sidney Township just west of the city, today, stretching their fiery threat from the Fair Ground buildings and fences were being fought by volunteer fire fighters of that section, armed with sacking, brooms and other emergency aids. A small fire believed to have been started on a piece of ground owned by one resident of the district was said to have been lifted by the wind, getting completely out of control. Immediately telephone lines were busy requesting aid from residents of the area. The blaze took in its stride fence posts and rails, but no damage to property had been reported.

A Vacation Guarantee

Broken glasses can ruin a vacation. Guarantee your pleasure with a second pair. Mounted, perhaps, differently, from those you now have. Usable at home for different occasions. If you have spectacles now, we suggest a pair less that may be used for formal wear at home. Rimless spectacles, perhaps, instead of rimmed. Colored lenses instead of "whites".

But whatever style they may be, take an extra pair on your vacation. Guarantee your holiday fun!

It's Way to Avoid Wrinkles

By HELEN FOLLETT

BLESSED WITH health of body and mind, plus a sense of humor, any woman should be able to stave off wrinkles until she is 100. The best way to keep the complexion youthful and tissues firm is to keep the body properly nourished, and see that mental machinery runs along smoothly.

When a woman feels like spanking the family cherub, bawling out the page or flinging her arms in the air and shouting to high heaven, she should whisper to herself, "Come, come now, old girl, that won't do". Emotional disturbances not only cause beauty blemishes, but play the dickens with the central nervous system, interfere with digestion and have a bad effect upon the heart.

Courage, cheerfulness and gaiety of spirit have a refreshing effect upon the body as well as the mind and help the organs function normally. Medical surveys prove that the hysterical woman can crack her nerves and pangs which cause her to believe that she is stricken with ills.

Beauty begins in the mind. Think beauty and live it. The kindly, flexible, avant, gracious woman has an attractive face no matter how plain her features may be. She has an insurance against wrinkles, and possesses the charm which are important factors in promoting pulchritude.

Rubbing the feet with molasses will refresh them when they are tired after a busy day of tramping, bathing with lemid water to which baking soda has been added will afford relief.

Another source of comfort is found in massaging with mineral oil, then wrapping the feet in lukewarm towels that have been wrung out in hot water. The hot bath is not recommended when the poor little footies are feverish and misbehave.

Now that we're wearing posies on our hats we must watch out about the color of rouge and lipstick, especially if the flowers are red. As for red hat, it spells disaster enough color for the facial scenery and casts a rosy reflection on the skin.

It is the ensemble that counts. The woman who considers every small detail of get up is a joy to behold. Such a lot to think about, Geraldine.

Good Manners

WANING FRIENDSHIP

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

During the week's visit at a friend's home in another state, my friend introduced me to a very interesting young man who took me out while I was there. After returning home, we corresponded with each other for about six months, and then, all at once, when I saw him on Christmas day, he repeatedly asked me to correspond with him. I felt I did not request for quite a time, but finally weakened and sent him my picture. . . because I like him and wanted to have him as a friend.

But I am quite puzzled because he doesn't seem interested in me any longer and has not written for two months. Please tell me whether I should write and ask him to return my picture? I don't think it is fair for him to keep it as long as we do not correspond with each other. If I should ask for the return of my picture, please tell me what to write.

Reader.

You're the one that must decide about asking this young man for the return of your photograph. It ain't necessary to do this, of course, but it isn't incorrect to do it. It is up to you, entirely, emphasize the fact that you are disappointed in his failure to keep up correspondence in the friendship.

If you write . . . your note might read something like this:

Dear Bob,

You don't mind, will you, if I ask you to return my photograph? I'm sure you will when you understand why I am asking this favor of you, and I'll be most grateful.

All good wishes to you, Bob.

Most sincerely,

PARTING GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to entertain a friend who is leaving to make her home in the East. Is it considered good taste and customary to give her a gift at the time of the party, or would that embarrass my guests? Would it be better to give her something when seeing her off on the train?

K.

Since the gift to your friend is being given to her only from you and the group of us from the guests at the party. . . it would seem to me that it would be more delicate for you to give her this gift at some other time, any other time, not necessarily at the train.

HOSTESS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When giving a luncheon served at card tables, where the guests constitute the exact number for bridge, is it necessary for the hostess to be seated and partake of the meal with her guests, even though she must do all the serving?

A Subscriber

Yes, the hostess should plan to be seated at luncheon with her guests. She should not be kept busy all her serving she should have a maid to help herself at one of the card luncheon-tables. She should so plan her menu and her service because she should be free to be available for her to be seated at luncheon with her guests. If she can't sit with her guests, doesn't have luncheon with them, she gives the appearance of being a waitress, not the hostess.

SECOND MARRIAGE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper at an informal wedding, where the prospective bride is a widow, for her brother to give her away?

2. Is it proper for the bride and her one attendant to wear gloves?

Reader

1. If the father of the bride is not living. It is the usual custom for the brother of the bride, her eldest brother, to give her in marriage. This is the custom whether the bride is the bride's first marriage or her second.

2. Whether or not the bride and her attendant wear gloves depends on the bride's wishes, whether she thinks that wearing gloves will complete the harmony of the costumes. At most informal weddings, and indeed at most formal weddings, gloves are not worn.

Like Parents To be Good Dressers

Children Have a Keen Interest in Attire, States Lisa Grenelle

By LISA GRENELLE

"MY MOTHER'S got a beautiful new dress; you ought to see it," six-year-old Marion said, and went on to describe the beautiful new dress to an admiring audience.

All the gang respected Marion a little more after that, especially when they saw Marion's mother all dolled up in the beautiful spring dress, looking so young, and smart, and neat, and lovely. Even other mothers by comparison didn't look so nice. Rosabel's mother, for instance, came out in the playground in an old mother hubbard with her hair flying and her feet all shiny and Rosabel was so ashamed!

"I wish you wouldn't come out to get me, mother," Rosabel said; "just call from the window and I'll come right away."

Children are just as anxious to be proud of their mothers as their parents are anxious to be proud of them. They are much more conscious of mother's appearance than of mother's appearance for the past two or three years. The trend is pretty colors, as all children do, and nice-smelling perfume.

Increase Respect

At boys' schools especially, the house-mistress learns to take great pains with her appearance, especially since teaching her that to be well dressed becomes a definite increase her influence with her charges. Children, even more than adults, respect a woman more if she looks trim and attractive. The rule applies not only to the young mother but to parents.

Many parents are hurt and puzzled by their children's reluctance to have them visit school on a visiting ground; their lack of enthusiasm in introducing their friends to them. It seldom occurs to them that this reluctance is due to nothing more than their own careless appearance. ("They wear mother dresses!" Everybody's class.) Mother's hired man, is, those shoes and wrinkled skirts.

Every working girl and every housewife considers personal appearance, counts, perhaps out of all proportion, but there it is. They know that a bitter experience, that quality, reliability, even experience, are not enough unless they are backed by neatness.

It is the same with parents, if they want to retain their children's respect. If they want them to be proud of them, enough to introduce them to friends, or have them pose on graduation day for the school or camp, they must be appropriately and becomingly dressed.

PRESENTATION

On Thursday evening July 9 a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Howes in honor of the recent marriage of their only daughter Alice. Mrs. Cecil Gerow in a charming manner on behalf of the ladies of the Lawn Bowling Club was called to order by the Rev. H. B. Herrington and read an address to Miss Howes which was presented by Miss Blanche Reid:

Roslin, Ont., July 9, 1936.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Abbott,
Roslin, Ont.

Dear Aletha and Frank:—

We, your friends of Roslin, are gathered here this evening to show gratitude you on your recent marriage, and to wish you happiness and prosperity in your future life together.

To you, Aletha, whom we have known for so long, we love you very joy and happiness. You have always been a faithful friend to our church and community, and we always like to count on you for help at any time. For several years you have very capably filled different offices in the Women's Association, the Sunday School and the Lawn Bowling.

To you, Frank, we extend the glad hand of welcome into friendship. While a number of us are not personally acquainted with you yet we trust that you will be and will become better acquainted, and that our friendship will increase.

We hope that your journey along life's path, may be bright and sunny and filled with sunshine and that the showers that come your way may be as light as the dew of night. You will both meet with obstacles and trials as you go along life's pathway, but the little things when conquered will help us enjoy the big successes, and truly every cloud has a silver lining.

As a slight token of our esteem and respect to you, we ask you to kindly accept this gift in the spirit in which it has been given. May you always find in it a reminder of life as you travel together, and may God's blessing rest with you both.

Signed on behalf of your friends of Roslin, Gayle Frederick, Kathleen Carter, Marion Harrison, Blanche Reid.

Mr. and Mrs. Abbott were presented with a beautiful china cabinet after which each thanked their friends in a few well chosen words.

A very interesting program, consisting of readings, duets, vocal and instrumental solos was carried out after which a dainty lunch was served and a social hour spent.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

His Wife's Indifference Makes Him Despondent

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My wife seems to have become not only indifferent to me, but to our boy now ages 7 and 8. She regards me as belonging to the old fogey type, and thinks I have too much respect for the ethical teachings of my childhood.

My wife's indifference has had a marked effect on me, and has led to a condition of utter despondency. Doctor's retards my efforts to do my best work. I have a very fair job, and the boss is very much pleased with me, but my wife thinks it's ridiculous that I should expect encouragement. All she seems to think about is pleasure.

I'm eight years her senior, but see no reason for her attitude. Our older boy is rapidly acquiring an inferiority complex because his mother constantly throws up to him that he will be a failure in life and never amount to anything. How to avoid conflicts. I remain out of the discussions.

I have a home and all that goes with it, but I'm afraid I have grown divided against itself cannot stand.

Distressed.

It seems from the one-sided account of this married problem that your wife is most short-sighted in withholding from you the encouragement which you need to remain in good standing with your firm.

As for her attitude toward your little son and her constantly telling him he will be a failure, doesn't she realize that by these very means she is making a failure of him, and that he will look on her influence, in later life, with resentment? Tell child that he is going to fail, and you will sow the seeds of failure.

Much better, which was far to long to print in full, tells me she accuses you of being narrow-minded. In what respect? You did not inform me.

Your wife's attitude seems all wrong to me, judging from the facts presented.

Sister-in-Law Invades Bride's Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband married two months, and it would have been impossible to find two happier people until my husband's twin sister came to visit us. She wants to spend the summer with us and take a course at the university. I should not object to this if she were not constantly criticising my housekeeping, and telling me just how goodness, and cousin Jennie did things.

My husband is not satisfied with my housekeeping till this troublesome sister arrived, and as she has her own money, which is ample for her to get board and lodging elsewhere, why do I have to put up with her?

After hearing how the female army of my husband's family did this and that, he said: "Perhaps it would be well to let sister tell you. All those women are fine housekeepers." The serpent has certainly entered our Eden.

Young Bride

The relationship between a brother and sister, who are fond of each other, is very close. You should it start trouble in a marriage which began happily? If this were your husband's sister you should be loath to advise you to suggest what to do. Let all remain as it is now, and matters will adjust themselves.

Too Loyal to Friend for Their Own Good

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I saw him and was interested in him many times, and then we were finally introduced at a party. But, since then, a friend of his called on me now and then, he will never ask me to a date. He likes them and this friend to even make an attempt.

What can I do to show him that this friend means nothing whatever to me?

Thank you

Sometimes a little frankness is the best solution of a problem, and you might try telling around the bush. Take the second time he calls to say that you have no interest in this friend and you will not be interested in him.

Acts As If I Were the Least of His Worries

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He takes me out once in a great while, and it seems as though he loves me greatly. I see him often, but when I ask him to take me out he is always busy. When we are alone, he tells me he loves me, but kisses me, but when we are in company he acts as if we were the least of his worries, and never ask me out.

I treat him awfully nice, and have told him often that is acts so. Please help me.

P.J.B.

I'm afraid I'll have to quote to you that cynical maxim about the unfortunate who is down and then you stop running. As you have said, this young man you're crazy about him, and you've given him a show of indifference when you're together while he is perfectly willing to accept your affections when you're alone.

Better begin with a little correspondence discipline. He less nice when you write him, and act as if he were the least of your worries when you're in company.

Fashion Flashes

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

IT'S A FINE point in this matching up of accessories. Boutonnieres of gay flowers or vegetables come with a little clip on which to affixed to a hat. Then there is an instant bit of flowers or fruit to match, meant to be worn on dress, suit or where you will.

A DRAMATIC ENTRANCE means the right costume. A grand evening dress is of black taffeta with an all-over design of huge diamond motifs. The decollete is high in front and very deep in back. A huge sash with an enormous side bow and draperies is of the same printed taffeta. The skirt is very full.

MIX IT UP when it comes to color for Summer comfort. A sporty sports ensemble has a dress of yellow silk crepe with a fitted, sleeveless gay silk jersey jacket, which is split at the sides to extend the jacket flare with scarlet. The jacket has scarlet buttons and the skirt has sets of pleats on either side.

GOOD FOR A TRIP, since it packs perfectly, is a black lace gown with a yellow girdle and yellow flowers pinned to the shoulders. This is very low in front. Ruffles make the back modest.

SEEING SERVICE at all hours of the day and over all sorts of roads is the test of the short-sleeved coat of loosely woven blue woolen.

INVITATION TO THE DANCE calls for a smart, crisp little evening frock of navy organza, with a bolero of white embroidered silk over it. It is worn over a navy taffeta slip, with white shoes and bag matched with daisies cut out from the dress.

CONVICT CROSSLEY HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR GUARD'S DEATH

Coroner's Jury Give Verdict After Hearing Evidence

6 CONVICTS TESTIFY

One Picked up Knife After Deceased Had Overcome Crossley

Kingston, Ont., July 17.—(CP)—Convict Chester Crossley of Kingston Penitentiary was responsible for the death of Guard John J. McCormick, who died in the hospital, Monday from knife wounds received in a fracas at the prison Saturday, it was held by a coroner's jury investigating the occurrence.

Evidence of several guards and convicts was heard at the inquest held last night. Many of those, who testified were eye-witnesses to the struggle in which McCormick was fatally injured.

The assault on McCormick took place shortly after witnesses said Crossley had slashed hospital nurse Jack Toomey, still in a serious condition in the hospital.

A. D. McConnell, hospital overseer, told the jury of being in the prison dispensary with Toomey, when Crossley came into the room. The convict rushed at Toomey and struck at him with a knife several times, said the witness. Witness told the court he chased Crossley out the guards room.

Out in the corridor he saw Guard McCormick struggling with Crossley, said McConnell, and added he saw Crossley making strokes with the knife at McCormick.

The knife fell from Crossley's hands, he said, and was picked up by a convict standing nearby.

Hands Searched

Dr. I. G. Hogart testified Mc-Cormick was stabbed in the abdomen. The bowels being punctured in three places. He was stabbed in three other places, the doctor also testified.

Dr. James Miller, Pathologist, said McCormick's death was due to perforations.

Keeper Odley testified Crossley had created a disturbance the night before the stabbing, declaring there was someone in the back of his bed and snakes in his bed. He was given medicine and caused no further trouble that night.

Six convicts, including two orderlies, gave their versions of the affray. All agreed that Crossley was stabbing the guard, a second testified he had not seen Crossley stabbed but the guard and a third was unable to give a definite opinion whether the convict had done so or not.

One convict witness said he picked up the knife after it was dropped. The knife was similar to those used in the shops. Crossley was testified, but Crossley was employed in the shirt and tailor shops.

A convict hospital orderly said Crossley had been drinking on the morning of the occurrence, and his eyes were wide and staring.

"He seemed to be under the influence of something," he said.

Radio Photograph Shows Quickness Of London Bobbies

New York, July 17.—(AP)—Visual evidence that the speed with which London bobbies went into action against George Andrew Mc-Mahon, who pounced on Prince Edward, was shown by a radio-transmitted, air-borne-relayed press photograph of the arrest.

The picture shows McMahon in the grip of two policemen and a soldier.

In the foreground are seen spectators, many of whom apparently are still watching the King ride past, while only a few have turned to watch the struggle behind them.

The police have rushed the man but at the crowd and are hustling him into a bus on which appears the name "St. John Ambulance".

The suspect appears as a heavy-set, partly-bald man. The soldier and one bobby have grasped him by his coat collar. The other policeman has expertly pinioned both the prisoner's arms.

A well-dressed woman, with a broad-brimmed straw hat and a flowered dress, stands at the back of the ambulance, watching the proceedings with intense interest.

At the other end of the ambulance stands a heavy-set woman, watching with equal interest and aloofness. A third woman has heavily turned her head.

Two of the men standing closest to the fray have their hands in their pockets. Apparently they have full confidence in the ability of the arresting officers to complete their work without outside assistance.

Many of the men have their hats in their hands, as though they had not yet replaced them after watching the King ride by.

"CANADA" KEEPS WATCH AT VIMY

This imposing bronze Madonna-like figure portrays "Canada" brooding over her dead. The figure stands in solemn glory on the great memorial to Canada's hero dead at Vimy Ridge that will be unveiled by King Edward VIII on July 26. It watches the plains where Canada won world renown. It was at Vimy Ridge that the soldiers of the Dominion staged their immortal demonstration of heroism against superior forces of the enemy, in 1917. Thousands of the nation's young Canadians died on Vimy Ridge. The monument soon to be unveiled will keep their memory ever green and will call to the succeeding generations of the youth of all lands a shining example of selfless heroism, born of patriotism.

117 Auxiliary Fire-Fighters Battle 35 Fires in Ten Days

Tweed Staff Reports | District Forester Fine

FIRE CAUTION URGED

Weary and smoke begrimed Forest Rangers in the Tweed district of the Forestry Dept. augmented by a deputized staff of one hundred and seventeen auxiliary firefighters gained a brief respite Thursday before a new day would bring thirty fire conflagrations which broke out in widely-spaced parts of the district.

With an average of from five to ten blazes breaking out daily over that period of time the Rangers were hard pressed to cope with the situation, but with competent men working under their immediate supervision succeeded in getting the situation under control.

"There was little damage done," said an official of the dept. "and this fact is due to the splendid work done by the Rangers. They showed splendid initiative and knowledge of their work. The situation is now well in hand."

Owing to the fact that several of the fires were directly responsible to careless motorists and people travelling through the park, we respectfully solicit the full co-operation of the travelling public in extinguishing matches cigarettes and burning embers from pipes."

"The fire hazard is still extremely high and the danger which is not yet over can be greatly decreased by care being taken by the public."

Fire which broke out in the Northbrook area a few days ago did considerable damage before it was finally controlled by a force of 100 fighters.

Flames spread rapidly and for a while the Rich Rock mining property was threatened.

Tamworth district also suffered from an extensive blaze before it was reduced by a large force of hurriedly deputized fighters.

Will Stick by Him Says Mrs. McMahon

LONDON, July 17.—(AP)—Mrs. George Andrew McMahon, dark-eyed wife of the man who aimed a revolver at King Edward and today "wished a moment to me I shall stick by him."

"My husband was always kind and good-natured," she declared as she left their flat to see her husband in jail. "We have been very happy. It is all quite horrible."

"Why, my husband always stood up when the National Anthem was played. He always talked to me with affection for the Royal family."

Mrs. McMahon, who works in a dress shop, said she has not seen her husband since breakfast time yesterday. She spent the night alone in their flat in a Victorian house in the upper end of fashionable Westbourne Terrace district.

TWO ARE HELD IN VETERAN'S DEATH

Authorities Not of The Opinion Man Was Slain

Ottawa, July 17.—(CP)—Police disclosed today they were holding two men for questioning in connection with the death of Magistre Dumoulin, 66-year-old Great War veteran, whose body was taken Wednesday from the Ottawa locks of the Rideau Canal.

They said they sought a third man for questioning. An autopsy on Dumoulin's body disclosed he died of a fractured skull and not from drowning as first believed.

Authorities said they did not believe the man was slain but they were anxious to find anyone who might have been with him when he suffered the injury that led to his death. Dumoulin suffered a cross-shaped wound at the base of his skull, possibly in a fall into the canal.

He was seen Tuesday night leaving the Canadian Legion shelter where he had been living for three months.

STEEL BARS HOLD MAN WITH PISTOL; EMPIRE HAPPY

Special Policeman Places Self Between McMahon and The King

LITTLE WOMAN PRAISED

Scotland Yard Probes Into Motives of Alleged Assailant

London, July 17.—(CP and AP Cables)—Steel bars encircled an incoherent "social reformer" today but an empire rejoiced that its King had escaped possible harm from the armed malcontent and hailed as heroes a "little woman" and two special constables. He is on remand for eight days on a charge of possessing a gun illegally.

Scotland Yard detectives sought to expose the motives that led Jerome Hannigan, better known as George Andrew McMahon, to unload a loaded air gun at King Edward yesterday as he rode in uniform up Constitution Hill at the head of six-battalions of the Brigade of Guards.

Behind the bars of Bridzon prison, the bald-headed man—a cripple with a club-foot, scattered almost unintelligible declarations that he meant harm to the King.

"I didn't want to hurt Him," the slashing McMahon was quoted. "I only did it as a protest."

'Protest' Not Known

His questioners were unable to determine from this just what the "protest" although they did learn he had previously attempted to reach Sir John Simon, Home Secretary.

McMahon's friends, who were responsible for him receiving him as a "social reformer", declared he formerly was associated with Mrs. Violet Van Der Rist, militant opponent of capital punishment. The wealthy widow only went on the bail-bond, however, was "I don't know Mc-Mahon."

In another section of the city detectives entered his apartment to examine and seal up his papers. McMahon lived with his wife in the Westbourne Terrace in the Paddington district of London. Native of Tyrone, Ireland, he resided with his parents in the Govan district of Glasgow for many years.

Little Woman Cheered

The praise of the empire went out to a tiny figure in uniform—a man watching the parade—who prevented the attack.

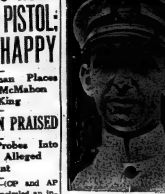
She jumped on the sleeve of a special constable as she noticed the nearby fascist raising his arm in front of the crowd, received injuries. The constable, identified as Anthony Gordon Dick, struck down the revolver at the moment the King rode by. Dick's alertness and quickness of action to his naval training. He is now a township salesman.

Praise also was heaped on special constable Dick, who struck Dick an unpaid assistant of the uniformed police. Riding near the crowded corner, Flood saw the pistol raised above the shoulders of the crowd. Reining his horse he placed himself squarely between McMahon and the King until four husky officers gripped the would-be killer and carried him away, half lifted above the heads of the crowd.

Authorities declined to name the woman. Accompanied by a fashionable girl she was taken to a police station to tell what she could of the affair. Police said the little woman cheered he as, shielded from interviewers, the woman was driven from the station.

Possibly, it was believed, the authorities might permit the name of the woman-hero to be disclosed when McMahon faces trial.

Message on Envelope



Detective Inspector John Sands who assumed supervision of the investigation, assisted by Sir Philip Game, Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, today submitted his report to the Home Secretary and seek further details of the probe of McMahon's motives may be made.

Hands, presenting the official charges against McMahon, said he had been handed two rounds of ammunition at the time of the incident. He described the weapon picked up from the roadway and exhibited a black wallet, alleged to have been carried by McMahon. Inscribed on the face of the wallet On the envelope was scribbled a phrase variously reported as "may I love you" and "I love the king."

In court a solicitor who appeared in defence of McMahon, said his client did not propose to assassinate the King.

Both Houses of Parliament heard in hushed silence official announcements of gratification that the Sovereign was not harmed, then burst into cheers.

National Anthem Sung

A feeling of thankfulness swept over London where newspapers issued extra editions and were eagerly read.

Everywhere that people assembled last night the National Anthem was fervently sung.

Messages poured into the city from every country of the world, telling of the immense relief that the King had suffered no harm.

While the messages were arriving, the King himself was enjoying golf at Coombe Hill. His game was as steady as usual, and it was reported he defeated his opponents.

"God Save the King" epitomized comments of the incident in papers of all shades of opinion.

Striking title, the Times said the nation was reminded by the incident that the utmost confidence between a patriotic king and his loyal people did not confer immunity against the violence, power or lunacy or of minds warped by personal grievance.

King's Calmness Inspires

The Daily Telegraph said: "His Majesty's cool bearing commands general admiration. He watched the second without a backward look which is in the tradition of Kings.

The Daily Herald said the King throughout his life had gone freely among his people which was what could be expected from a king in a democratic country. "It makes the thing rise, the thought of him even more detestable, more cowardly."

Pride in His Majesty

The Daily Express said the incident, unparalleled here for 54 years, "will carry man and woman with a sense of personal shame but the feelings turned to a poignant pride in the King for the way he went on with the day's work."

The News Chronicle said the incident was apparently merely an attempt on the part of an ill-balanced person to draw attention to his grievances. It was not easy, the paper said, to imagine any person in his senses should wish to hurt the King.

King Shows Composure

The Daily Mail said the King "showed the complete composure of a man who faced danger side by side with his men during the War. The incident means that Edward VIII will be taken still more firmly to the Empires heart."

Authorities working on the case were represented as believing Mc-Mahon was suffering from delusion and that his mentality was expressed the prisoner might be examined by physicians to determine his mental condition. Police said his record showed he had been sentenced to a year's imprisonment in 1933 for allegedly libelling the Royal Family, Parliament, however and the sentence quashed.

Toast to King Really Sincere

London, July 18.—(CP Cable)—The toast of "Gentlemen, the King" was everywhere drunk in London, last night, and the timehonored acceptance, "The King God Bless Him!" rang with a real sincerity.

Joyful with relief, London was in holiday mood. Theatre and dance orchestras abandoned their usual practice of playing "God Save The King" at the end of the evening. They played it at the beginning and throughout the program instead.

Davenport, England, July 17 (AP) —Three destroyers steamed into port today, the vanguard of home fleet units returning from the Mediterranean.

CAR IS WRECKED DRIVER INJURED

Charles Nutley, Picton, Allegedly Failed to Make Turn

Failing to negotiate the sharp turn one hundred yards west of the Hallowell crossing on the Wellington-Bloomfield highway, Charles Nutley of Picton, received severe injuries at a late hour last night when the car he was driving somersaulted into the ditch, crashed through a fence and came to rest in a nearby meadow.

The automobile, reported to be owned by Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley of Picton, is a complete wreck. No one was riding with Nutley at the time.

Provincial Constable of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, was returning to Picton after driving Canscoon members of his company to their homes.

Allegedly driving at a high rate of speed, he failed to make the turn. The car skidded sideways, then screeched a protest as the car leaped into the ditch. Turning completely over and ending up a twisted mass of wreckage.

"I saw Nutley standing beside the wrecked car," said R. McConnell, a Picton motorist, who was the first to arrive at the scene of the accident. "He was bleeding profusely from his face from cuts received in the striking of his nose and eyes. He said his right side gave him severe pain.

"I immediately telephoned Mr. Walmsley, the owner of the car."

Scotland Yard Appeals For Attack Witnesses; McMahon Tells Protest

Woman in Grey Believed to be Able to Tell Clear Story

MESSAGE TO KING

Rumor Woman Who Helped Save King is an American

London, July 17 (CP and AP)—The man who levelled a revolver at the king told behind bars today his story that the apparent attempt at assassination was merely a "protest".

Police surrounded him, questioned him and checked his statement with a mass of testimony brought in by a widespread Scotland Yard and police dragnet.

The fate of George Andrew McMahon, 34-year-old crippled writer, christened Jerome Hannigan and the son of an Irishman, may lie with the still mysterious "woman in grey" who, according to some witnesses, knocked the prisoner's revolver from his hand as the king rode at the head of a military parade yesterday.

Little Woman's Story.

It was believed she was able to tell the true story of McMahon's attempt, but the police did not make her name public and they were said to be shielding her from the public until the prisoner appears in court next week.

Rumors circulated that the middle aged woman was an American.

The king, who remained completely unruffled throughout the episode, was cheered yesterday, was at his post at York House at his usual hour this morning. Before starting his routine duties he perused hundreds of messages of congratulation that poured in from the world.

Numerous congratulations were heaped upon Gordon Dick, 36-year-old special constable, who also was given major credit for his prowess for his prompt action when the attempt was made.

Constable Besieged.

Some persons said that the woman in grey had drawn Dick's attention to what was occurring and that the latter knocked the revolver from McMahon's hand. Dick was besieged last night long by friends and was prevented by visitors from working today while the firm which employs him as a travelling salesman. He was formerly in the navy and served throughout the Great War. McMahon, 60-year-old father, John McMahon of Glasgow, said that his son's original name was Jerome Bannigan, but that it was changed long years ago.

An official stated the exact charge on which McMahon would be tried would depend upon the evidence gathered.

Under the present charge, that of unlawfully possession of a loaded revolver with intent to endanger life or property, the prisoner faces a maximum penalty of twenty years imprisonment.

Besides the official said, the charge may be made more or less severe.

Appeal Made For Witnesses.

Scotland Yard appealed for witnesses, issuing an official communique which said: "Any person having information in connection with the incident which occurred during yesterday's procession, the police request any persons who were in the immediate vicinity of the man arrested and any persons who were in entrance to communicate with New Scotland Yard as soon as possible."

George Andrew McMahon, who levelled a pistol toward King Edward, was a man of many names. Mrs. Violet van der Rist, noted crusader against the death penalty for crimes.

He gave evidence in the King's Bench Division March 24, when the blond Mrs. van der Rist was sued by a woman actin for her action of a picture she claimed she had ordered. McMahon said at that time he had helped her to write a book urging abolition of capital punishment.

Sued Mrs. van der Rist, Mc-Mahon also aided Mrs. Van der Rist in her abortive campaign for a seat in the House of Commons last November. She was an unsuccessful candidate for South Kensington.

The association between the two ended early in 1935. McMahon's brought action against Mrs. Van der Rist in the Marylebone County Court April 8, claiming £67 (about $335) as the price of hiring automobiles for use during the election campaign. The claim was dismissed, with costs.

Phillies Give Baseball World Occasion for Eyebrow Lifting Being 'Hottest' Club in Loop

Buried in Second Division But Playing the Best Ball of Any Team

TIGERS NOW THIRD

Yanks Win And Cubs Stretch Margin to Two Games

(By Sid Feder)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

It may be only a dash in the National League's red-hot pen, but three Phillies are giving the baseball world an occasion for some eyebrow lifting by the way they've been tearing off ball games recently.

Although they're still a long way from the first division, they've been the hottest outfit in the big leagues since July 1, and the only Club in their loop to keep up with the pace set by the galloping Cubs.

They made it 18 victories against four defeats since the first of the month, two in a row over the Cardinals, and spoiled Dizzy Dean's return-to action, by toeing off against the "Diz-ease Out" yesterday and burying him under a 6-3 margin. "Old Hix" lasted just five innings against the slugging Phils in his first start since a line drive knocked him unconscious and out of the lineup last Saturday.

The defeat for the Car House Gang left it two full games back of the Cubs, who won their 12th in a start out of 14 since July 1, by turning back the Boston Bees 1-0 in a 10-inning affair on the strength of Lon Warneke's four-hit hurling.

Power With Bat

The odd part about the Phillies sudden surge is that it's reversing the dopesters of the experts. Back in spring training, the "wise boys" said the Phils, if they were dangerous at all, would be dangerous because of their pitching. Yet their hurlers have been the weakest link and their power, as in the past, has been all hot.

In their drive, they've averaged 10 hits a game, which is slugging in any league — Slugby because they have been out-bombing the Opposition, they haven't lost a series in more than two weeks, including the current Cardinal campaign.

While the Cubs were shrieking their National League lead again yesterday, the Yanks were doing the same for their edge in the American. Bill Dickey and Joe Di Maggio snapped out of their hitting doldrums to lead the way to a 5-2 win over Detroit, boosting the pace-setting margin to 10 full games, and removing the Tiger threat from the Yanks. The beating bounced the Stengelmen out of second place, and the wild-hitting Indians from Cleveland moved in with a 7-0 walloping over the Athletics—their sixth straight win.

Foxx Hits Two Homers

The Red Sox with Jimmy Foxx hitting homers number 16 and 17, set to take the big league lead, climbed back into the first division, although managing only a split with the lowly Browns. Lefty Grove lost the opener, 4-3, and Jack Wilson won the nightcap, 5-4. The duo advances was at the expense of the Washington Senators, who fell again before Jimmy Dykes' Chicago White Sockers, 8-7, and dropped into fifth place.

Outside of the Phils-Cards, Cubs-Bees battles, the only action in the National League was at Pittsburg, where Mel Ott won a ball game for the Giants, 7-6, by belting his 17th homer with a mate on base in the eighth inning. The Reds and Dodgers were idle.

Falconbridge Falcons Win 1st Soccer Match

Sudbury, Ont., July 17 (CP) — Falconbridge Falcons today were hopeful of winning the right to represent Ontario in the Dominion soccer finals in two straight games, following their 4-1 victory over Hamilton Stelcos here last night. The teams meet again tonight in the second of the two-out-of-three series, and a win for the Falcons would give them the provincial championship.

Last night's game was not particularly brilliant or spectacular as both clubs seemed content to play a waiting game seeking to tie.

Marley, with two goals, was the outstanding player for Falcons. Tom Drummond was always a threat for Hamilton, while McGregor pulled some sparkling saves in the Stelco net.

Playoff Arrangement In N. H. L: Changed At N. Y. Meeting

New York, July 17 (CP)—Determination of the National Hockey League to aid New York Americans to become an even more potent factor in the Major League made the form today of appointment of a committee to discuss financial problems of the owner Bill Dwyer and Manager Red Dutton.

The names of committee members appointed at the league meeting of governors here yesterday were not announced by President Frank Calder. Dutton was assured of help in securing playing material for the team that last year reached the play-offs for the first time in 10 years

A change in the playoff arrangements was approved. In future second and third place teams meeting each other in the first rounds of the post-season series, will play two-of-three series instead of home-and-home; total-goals, rounds. Teams that finished the regular schedule with the highest point total would have choice of ice should a third game be necessary.

A Board of Appeals in regard to disputes over amateur players was also established. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association would appoint one member, the N.H.L. another and President Calder act as referee. The league decided to seek sanction the C.A.H.A. has working agreements with British and United States amateur bodies before approving a proposed agreement with the C.A.H.A.

Canadian-born owner Ernest Savard who said the French club would be encouraged appreciably for the next season.

They would try three Sunday games in Montreal towards the end of next season. Maroons did not ask for Sunday dates as the meeting made tentative steps towards drawing up the schedule.

The league agreed that an old-time player, voluntarily retired, must obtain permission from his last club before starting a comeback. No action was taken on broadcasting of games after informal discussion showed several clubs opposed.

BUFFALO BISONS NEARING LEADERS

Only Three Games From Top Position in International

(By The Associated Press)

The lusty bats the Rochester Red Wings and Newark Bears are taking at each others' chins are just as many knocks by opportunity on the door of the Buffalo Bisons.

While the Red Wings, beaten by Newark in the second game of their series, made it two out of three with a classy 10-6 victory last night, the Bisons opened the portal a little wider for their opportunity to capture the International League lead by smacking down the Syracuse Chiefs 6-4.

The victory, Buffalo's seventh in succession, left the hard only three games behind the pace-setting Rochester Club and two ahead of Newark. Although Johnny Wilson gave up 12 blows against ten off Fred Frankhouse, he had only one bad inning in recording his tenth win of the season. The Chiefs scored three runs in the third, but the Bisons teed off for four in the same inning when Eddie Mickell belted his 16th homer of the year with two aboard.

Newark and Rochester tossed a total of nine pitchers into their fray and between them used 30 players, behind from the start. the Red Wings led the count at 3-3 in the fifth when Phil Weintraub homered. After Newark had scored twice, they finished things off with a five-run blast in the sixth. Jack Sandy featured this rally with a four-pay drive that brought in two mates. Jimmy Brown also contributed a round tripper to Rochester's total of 10 hits.

Albany and Toronto put on a similar dawy affair in the night's other game, Poling out 12 blows, including a four-run seventh inning, for the Senators to win 7-6 in a fight their rivals' four-game winning streak. Albany used four flingers and Toronto three.

The Montreal Royals and Baltimore Orioles were idle.

OLYMPIC TEAM SAILS TODAY

Sails From Montreal on Duchess of Bedford

Montreal, July 17 (CP)—The cream of Canada's athletic talent, more than 100 strong, takes leave of Montreal today for the Olympic games in Berlin.

Most of the Olympic competitors and the officials who will travel with them spent the night on board the ship that arrived this morning to round out the athletic complement of the fine steamer of Bedford.

The squad is in charge of Sam Pennington of Hamilton, Ontario. Other officials include A. M. Cog, of Winnipeg, manager of the track and field brigade and F. C. Muiqueen of Toronto, chairman of the Olympic committee. W. A. Fry of Dunnville, Ontario, president of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, who will sail tomorrow.

Yvon Roberts Wins Bout With O'Mahony

Montreal, July 17 (CP)—Yvon Robert's fourth try at Danno O'Mahony's title was crowned with success and Canada had a world's heavyweight wrestling championship under the recognition of the Montreal Athletic Commission.

The French-Canadian grappler battered the Irish white ayrian into unconsciousness last night slightly over four minutes after entering the ring for the third time with both having won a fall. O'Mahony, weighing 234 pounds, carried a five-pound advantage. After the fight he was carried unconscious from the ring while the crowd of 10,000 proclaimed the new champion.

Robert started punishing the beaver Irishman from the second of the bell. He applied his favorite arm breaker, continually rolling O'Mahony around the ring at will. Several times Danno rushed in for an Irish whip only to meet with a series of grips from the everready Frenchman.

CORBINS DEFEAT CIACOS BY 12-6

Playoff Series For Fourth Place in Loop All Even

The Corbin "lockmakers" made it 'all even' in their play-off series with the Ciaco nine of the local Industrial Softball loop with a 12 to 6 victory over the "Soy Chops" outfit at Corbyville last evening. The Ciaco squad won the first game of the series, to determine which team enters the Industrial loop playdowns only to have the Corbin team reverse matters last night and knot the series one game each. The third and final game will be played in Belleville.

With their backs to the wall and facing elimination in defeat, the Corbin "lockmakers" opened hostilities on the fast Corbyville diamond purely on the offensive and scored ten runs in the first four innings to coast through to a 12 to 6 win over the homesters, who made their lone bid in the initial frame with three runs. After forging to the front in the second inning Jack Thompson, on the hilltop for the "lockmakers" proved invincible and was given splendid support by his teammates in victory. Kiser, who silenced the Corbin bats while pitching for Ciaco the game previous, proved no mystery to the slugging Corbins last night, however, as the winners collected 15 juicy hits as Thompson kept the nine Ciaco hits well scattered, especially after the initial frame.

Every member of the winning Corbins outfit counted at least one safe blow as Smith, Reid and Jenkinson led the hitters of the day. Ashford, Sharpe and Boyle swung potent bats for Ciaco. The team winning the third-final play game of the series will be awarded fourth place in the local Industrial loop and the right to advance into the league play-downs which commence next week.

The line-ups:

CIACO — Letchford, McDonald, Bleekman, Sharpe, Kiser, Stewart, Moon, Hewlett and Boyle.

CORBINS — Jenkinson, c; C. Thompson, c; Reid, 3b; R. Smith, lf; H. Thompson, rf; Ashford, ss; C. Smith, 2b; J. Thompson, p, and Scriven rf.

Scores by innings:

Corbins	3	3	2	0	0	2	—	12	15	2
Ciaco	3	0	0	0	1	1	—	6	9	4

AT THE BELLE

"Display of Immodesty"

All the terror, excitement, the glamor of outdoor action; the tenderness of romance and the crash-ing drama that is packed into the into eight reels of film are yours for the asking at the Belle Theatre where George O'Brien's thrilling new Fox picture, "O'Malley of the Mounted," will be presented tomorrow (Saturday) and on Monday, Tuesday and evening. Sunday, Monday with a second feature presentation "The Princess Comes Across."

Riding, fighting and loving fearlessly again, O'Brien is a gallant red-coated "mountie" in the dramatization of a story by William S. Hart, two-gun hero of the silent films.

The drama follows the adventures of this hero as he deliberately has himself jailed, so that he can escape with a member of a dangerous border gang. After a hazardous jail-break, he is reconced by the gang as one of their numbers.

By pretending to be a bandit himself, he wins the confidence of the Dalton gang. Fields, for he cools the growing affection of Irene Ware, sister of the boy he aided to escape.

Finally, when he has laid plans to trap Fields and his fellow-bandits, O'Brien is held in the camp and must extricate his manage to his fellow "mounties" to Miss Ware.

What happens when the bandits attempt a daring bank robbery, and the stirring, crashing battle to quell the fleeing gangsters of the gang are revealed in the climax of the picture which brings the romance of O'Brien and Miss Ware to a happy conclusion.

Vic. Fodd is prominent in the chief comedy role of "O'Malley of the Mounted," and James Bush and Reginald Marlow are prominent in dramatic roles.

"The Princess Comes Across."

A story of surprise and romance on the Atlantic is unfolded by "The Princess Comes Across," which will be presented in addition to the above feature, Saturday and Monday at the Belle Theatre, by Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray in the starring roles.

The picture reunites for the first time the screen sweethearts who became national favorites in their first feature together "Hands Across the Table," a balanced combination of comedy romance, song and suspense. It gives the latter a chance to show their best work.

Miss Lombard appears as a charming American girl posing as a Swedish princess, on route to New York to land a film contract. Aboard the luxury-liner "Monarch," setting for the entire plot she meets and falls in love with Fred MacMurray, conscientious-objecting maestro of a "swing" band.

An unusually strong supporting cast adds much to both comedy and mystery of the offering. Heading the list are Porter Hall and Alison Skipworth. "Lady-in-waiting" to the Princess, William Demarest, manager for MacMurray's band; Douglas Dumbrille, Arthur Hall and George Barbier.

The always popular and interesting Belle News Reshes will also be presented at each performance. Complete sports, market, fashion, comfort, will be presented daily at 2.30, 7.15 and 9.30 p.m.

Ends Tonight

Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael in the thrilling and romantic drama "This Woman Is Mine" and the fun packed feature "If I Had A Million" with an all star cast of members including Jack Oakie, W. C. Fields, Charlie Ruggles, Alison Skipworth, Mary Boland, May Robson and many others will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times. Complete performances starting at 7.10 and 8.30 p.m. We guarantee this excellent double feature program to you. Be sure and see it.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Arizona Raiders"

Larry Crabbe rides, shoots and swims his way through a thrill-packed yarn of cattle-thieving and adventure in the Zane Grey film "The Arizona Raiders", which opens today and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre. Crabbe is teamed with Marsha Hunt and aided by a cast of top-notchers including Raymond Hatton, Johnny Downs, Jane Rhodes and others.

Unique in a number of ways, "Arizona Raiders" presents its thrills in double-barrelled fashion. There are two romances; two horse-thieving rings are uncovered and two posses are formed to work. Into the plot, each as exciting as the other. In addition, a novel twist is given the story by a romance in which Miss Hunt, as a school ma'am, tries to "break" her own herd of horses to save them.

The picture opens with Larry Crabbe in the dock on a false accusation of horse stealing; he makes his escape by inches. Shortly thereafter, Raymond Hatton, Raymond Hatton, about to be hanged by a mistaken posse for a like crime or offense; he saves the victim and they become fast mates.

Crossing the state line into Arizona, the pair enter a small town where Jane Rhodes is thrown in jail for shooting up a saloon. In the meets Downs and manages to help the boy elope with Miss Rhodes' father. From there the pair by attempts a daring bank robbery, and the stirring, crashing battle to quell the fleeing gangsters of the gang are revealed in the climax of the picture which brings the romance of O'Brien and Miss Ware to a happy conclusion.

Vic. Fodd is prominent in the chief comedy role of "O'Malley of the Mounted," and James Bush and Reginald Marlow are prominent in dramatic roles.

The Belleville seniors have arrived late for O.B.B.L. games scheduled on other league nights too frequently during the past few weeks. Naturally the home town fans do not relish the idea of the game not starting on schedule time, but in every case they have blame cannot all attached to the locals. In some instants the home clubs have taken either their time in adding practice after the late arrival of the locals, while in other cases the blame rest solely on the shoulders of the locals. In reality, however, the paramount reason for this regretable situation is the hour's difference in time between all cities in the league and Belleville, this city being the only community in the loop not being on daylight saving. When Belleville is slated to play at Oshawa in some other town at 8.30 p.m., it means the game commences one hour earlier according to local time-piece. In future years it is to be hoped that local sportsmen will be behind any proposition that will boost daylight saving and not be left in the dark as they are in the case this year.

Yesterday's O.B.A.A. bulletin carried two articles of interest to baseball fans. The first one concerned the local Kiwanis juniors, who, as winners of the Belleville County League, have been granted a bye into the junior O.B.A.A. playdowns. The second one announced the Gilbard juniors of Napanee as the first team to withdraw. The junior play-downs do not get under way until August 8th, which will give the Belleville baseball clubs ample time for an extended vacation, or for any other action of interest locally concerned. Ed Belyea, manager of the team is an employee of the R. C. A. F., stationed at Trenton, and Belleville, and in the O.B.A.A. bulletin, must procure an amateur card from the Ottawa executive branch of the A.A.U. of Canada before he is declared eligible to play with the local team. There should be little trouble in procuring the necessary card, as the only qualifications for transfers were residence and age. The Belleville entrance and juvenile as well as the Kiwanis intermediates were allowed free hits to the Association play-downs.

We are in receipt of a letter from Mr. Ernest Bowen, secretary of the Municipal Swimming Pool at Hamilton, regarding the annual Hamilton-Toronto swim, to be held in Hamilton City on July 25th. The senior event will be a 3 mile race, while the junior and girls events are over a mile and one-quarter course, while other enter tainment will be staged as a program for younger entries. We have turned over the communication to Mr. Ralph Morden, at the Y.M.C.A. and trust he will receive the information to local swimmers who may be interested in competing. Last year 187 visitors were entertained by Mr. Thompson, under whose supervision the event was staged. Cups and trophies valued at $250.00 and numbering 65 in all will be given the lucky winners.

Eddie Lee, local boxer, who has been away from the shores of the Bay of Quinte for quite some time, returned home recently for a short vacation. "How's the betting, Eddie?" we asked. "Not many these days?" queried Eddie. "Not by a long shot," we replied, "I'll be able to get a few good Yankee bezers to appear here next month, if I can get which will be a show. I personally know Joe Louis's manager and one of his top-notchers and might indoce them to bez in Belleville. Joe is the boy who has been coded by guaranteed experience," added Eddie, all of which we agreed with and left Eddie nice to have some of the better boxing activities staged in the local ring, but seemingly local sport fans just won't warm up to boxing activities around here.

Despite rumors to the contrary the Kingston Ponies are still enjoying second place in the O.B.A.A. group by a very comfortable lead, while the league standing will clearly demonstrate below.—

Oshawa	10	2	1
Kingston	7	5	1
Peterboro	9	4	0
Napanee	3	10	0
Belleville	3	9	0

Kingston has an average of .700 while Peterboro has .692 and the average is computed at .691. Kingston has two postponed games to complete their card, but Oshawa, of course, if the Oshawa at Kingston game of next Monday, the local boy is on the final league standing it will have to be replayed.

"He said—the uncertainty of the game is what makes it a game, star." If there is any truth to this statement, surely the local industrial Softball loop has surely proven their words during this season's play-offs, where after showing a sweet lacing in the first game of the best two out of three rounds the other night, the Bakelite team managed to come out to Corbyville to not only knot the play-off series, but give the Corby nine a 13 to 5 humiliating lacing on their own diamond and gain the championship. With Cohen having won a game in the play-off for fourth position, they meet in the semi-finals of the series the Coleman Flats Monday night. Incidentally the competition was so

A fan wants to know—"if after a pitcher is in his box, he starts to pitch, but the ball gets away from him and hits the ground about ten feet in front of the plate. It then goes over the head of the catcher, the batter's knees and shoulders, is it a ball or a strike?

As the ball struck the ground before reaching home plate and the batter did not strike at it, it is a ball.

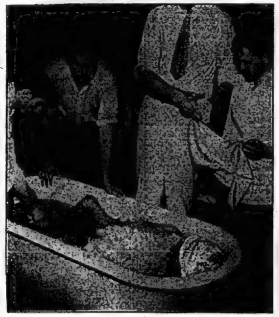
COACH WHO TUTORED PERCY WILLIAMS NOW TRAINS HOWIE McPHEE

HOWIE McPHEE, Newest Hope — BOB GRANGER, Coach — PERCY WILLIAMS, Greatest Pupil



As Canada's track faithful turn their eyes toward Howard McPhee, of Vancouver, with the spoken hope that he may duplicate the mighty feats of peerless Percy Williams in the Olympic sprints, shadow of a lesser known figure must inevitably drift into view: The shadow of Bob Granger, coach par excellence, who tutored Williams to his dual sprint triumph at Amsterdam. It is significant that McPhee, big-boned dark-haired runner is tutored by that same Granger. A coach who works only with individuals, declining team training, Granger has taught McPhee the principles of sprinting just as he taught Williams. Perhaps only Granger could have carried Williams to the peak of sprint fame in 1928; perhaps Granger will lead Howie McPhee over that same trail in 1936. The three principles in this little drama are combined in this layout.

The Missing Man

by

Mary R. P. Hatch

The test applied to both men was well carried out. On the part of the claimant it was announced by a quiet declaration of the most matter-of-fact sort that the diamond stud was at the bank. But on the opposition move melodramatically and followed by a fit such as often accompanies catalepsy, Mr. Stevens said that without doubt Ashley was a mind reader, and that all the phases of hypnotism and clairvoyance were known to him. His influence over the jailer in the West proved this, and his strange power to see into the minds of those with whom he conversed proved it. He hesitated just long enough to read the mind. He read the true claimant's mind at the time when the question was asked in court. It was a dangerous gift when in the possession of a man like Ashley, it it was not without parallel, as a moment's consideration would prove to the satisfaction of every one who recalled the exploits of Witherington Bishop in the same direction.

Much had been said regarding the motives of his client, but Mr. Stevens contended they were manifestly as great on the part of the defendant. There was no doubt he had become enamored with his brother's wife and he had decided to possess her for his own. He had repeatedly urged marriage, but not until after the death of Lenora, who had been murdered to remove so dangerous a witness to his guilt. When he became convinced that the workman called Prinus Rites was no other than the true Vane Hamilton, there was but one course open. He must denounce his claims or remove the true owner. He chose the latter. The shot was either fired by his own hand or by his emissary, Solomon Marks, who was a fit tool for any such emergency.

The case was not, as claimed by the opposing counsel, one of a wife's unfaithfulness, but of her fidelity to the true identity of her husband. She looked beneath the surface, beneath the changed habit and countenance aged by mental disturbance, and saw there her husband, the man to whom she had given her heart, the father of her children. The younger-looking handsomer face of his rival had no charms for her, for she knew he was a stranger. Was that unfaithfulness? No, it was the unfailing evidence of the heart which could not mistake the object of its affection. Unerring instinct is often recognized in children, and in the truest order of womanhood, and is allied to conscience and duty. Some call it intuition, and by that name it has been held to work marvels. Men may reason long and seemingly well, yet fail, while women by sure, quick intuitions reach the true conclusion, Mr. Stevens contended that such had been the case in the present instance, that Mrs. Hamilton had solved it by her womanly intuitions—intuitions which had been counsel, judge and jury to her. She knew which was her husband, and that it was the man known as Prinus Rites. That ought to be sufficient for any woman of sensibility and commonsense would support a false claim like this, said Mrs. Hamilton was known, and well known, as a woman of the highest sense.

Thy plea was a fine specimen of legal acumen, which suffers much from the imperfect rendition given to it. It was listened to with the closest attention and the general wonder was that so much had been made of a feeble. The congratulations extended to Mr. Stevens on his effort were all of this sort, and with alarm he felt that he had been unable to move them a belief in his statements. He scarcely ventured to hope for a different feeling on the part of the jurymen.

The judge was very impressive in his summary of the case, which he said was different from any other on record. He not only reviewed the evidence on both sides as usual, setting forth the claims of each and explaining corroborating and collateral evidence, but he spoke of the gross charges which would be made afterwards of forgery, perjury and perhaps murder, against the person who sustained defeat. He solemnly charged them, therefore, to deliberate long and wisely before deciding, that the gravest conviction of duty and justice called upon the best and wisest faculties of the human mind to aid them in a decision like this, upon which rested such great and unusual issues. It was not alone a question of property, but of family and of life and death. Therefore, let them deliberate well before deciding.

Two nights and a day passed before a decision was reached, and then it was in the favor of the present incumbent of the Hamilton estates, who was declared to be the true and legal owner. Vane Hamilton and an order for the arrest of Henry Ashley, alias Prinus Rites, was filed by the order of the judge upon the charge of forgery, perjury and embezzlement. Owing to the expected change to be made in another part of the country he was not admitted to bail, but remanded to prison, for a time, at least, to await the action of the courts.

When the decision was made known it would have been hard to tell which face was most pallid of the two men,—the one who had just been declared guilty or the one who had gained the suit.

For a moment they turned to gaze into each others faces, while a shade of acute regret passed over that of the one declared to be Vane Hamilton, but on the other a look of terrible anger settled.

"Do not think," he cried in thrilling accents, "that you will ever be allowed to enjoy your ill-gotten possessions. Our mother's spirit will prevent that. You will never know a moment's peace, and a brother's curse will rest upon you to the end. Remember my words. As for you," looking about the court-room and cursing with his rage the judge and jurymen, "there is no such thing."

"That will do," said the judge, coldly, "you have nothing to complain of," and the prisoner accompanied the sheriff from the courthouse.

Mrs. Hamilton, leaning on the arm of Mrs. Fry, went to the latter's house, for she would not enter her house while tenanted as it was. There was no doubt in Mrs. Fry, that she really did believe that the man now a prisoner was in reality her husband's guest. A good lady herself had had her mental faculties so played upon at the trial that it almost seemed as if she herself were another person.

"I wouldn't risk my case at court not one single minute," she said to Mrs. Fry, "but I'm goin' to get it all out that this man is Vane Hamilton, so you see it all jest as they say in print. Then another lawyer gits up and kicks the bucket over an' proves that the first is all a terrible lie, though he's master politics about it. His man is Vane Hamilton, an' he explains it all out jest as plain and easy as t'other did, only direct contrary. It's mighty interestin' when the jurymen didn't know no more 'bout it than I did; 'cept I'm they looked puzzled as could be after Mr. Stevens got up and spoke his piece. 'Pore them I was pretty sure Edie had the worst on't, and I was dreffle sorry for 'im but after Mr. Stevens showed out how that Ashley came, an' just how it all happened, I was jest sure he'd git the case. But I guess there ain't no justice in the land."

"But you said you felt the misery, mother, when Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Stone were talkin'," said Dan.

"I know it. I know I did; but what's anybody goin' to do? Either Edie is Hamilton, or he hain't. Now it's the place of them that sets in judgment to know which is which." "They do know, or they think they do."

"Da's fool! They don't know a thing about it!"

"Do you mother?"

"No; but then I ain't the judge nor jury, neither. But one thing, I wouldn't be in his shoes. If I didn't own 'em, I know that."

CHAPTER 28.
UNDERCURRENTS

That evening the Rev. Arthur Abernethy sat by his study table trying to fix his mind upon the sermon he was writing, but it would wander in spite of himself to the scene in court, peculiarly trying to one of his sensibilities; for he could but pity the pale, shrinking woman whose trials were laid bare to the public gaze, and he could but pity the one who had lost the suit, whether guilty or innocent, for his heart was a merciful one. So when a timid knock came to his ears he welcomed it as a diversion from incubescence thought, and wheeled me, or that any one can. I don't from the table just as a lady entered in response to his invitation. It was Mrs. Hamilton.

"A minister alone and bowed humbly and in some confusion.

"This is an unexpected pleasure," he was about to say, but changed it to visit when he saw her anguish-stricken face.

"Can I do anything for you?" he said, earnestly, "I will, if I can."

"Oh, I don't know, I don't know!" she cried. "I came to you, for I have no one else to go to. I want some one to advise me who is very wise and good, and I know of no one but you!"

"I am not very wise nor good," he said, gently. "but I will do my best to aid you in any way that I can."

"I don't know that you can aid me, I don't know what to do. I have been so terribly shocked the past week. I have heard such dreadful things said about my conduct, and you may think me very wicked, but indeed I am not, I have tried to do just right," and she looked up pitifully as a child might into the minister's face. Never had he seen her stirred from her usual queenly bearing, and the sight moved him as nothing else could.

"I know it," he said, soothingly; "you have tried to do just right. But may you not have been mistaken?"

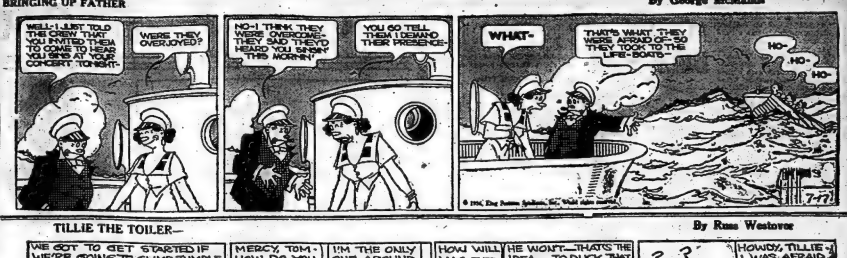
"No. I am not mistaken. I am more firmly convinced than ever. I know he is not my husband, and nothing shall induce me to say otherwise."

"How can you be so sure? You never saw your husband after he was a child."

"Then what can be done?"

"I don't know, unless you appeal to him."

"I appeal to him?"



"Yes, to the man who has fraudulently got possession of our home. You are a good man, and might know of some way to touch his heart. You are very persuasive, very eloquent."

"But if he is such a man as you think him to be

THE TARZAN TWINS — (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Despite their fear and horror, Dick and Doc fet's a certain exhilaration in flying through the air in the arms of the apes. Many times the boys had thrilled to the spectacular leaps and swings of acrobats in the circus, but no acrobat could perform these flying miracles.

One breath-taking leap followed another, time and again. Often Dick and Doc were certain their ape captors would miss their calculations and plunge swiftly earthward, but their fears were groundless. On and on they sped toward their mysterious destination.

Half the time Dick's heart seemed to be in his mouth. He thought of steep roller-coasters, plunging express elevators, terrifying chutes-the-chutes, and giddy airplanes; but none of these could have compared in any way with the experience he was having.

Then suddenly their captors dropped quickly downward through the trees.

Before the boys realized what was happening, the apes landed lightly on the back of an elephant! And there beside them, as if conjured up by some extraordinary magic, stood a strange man.

TORONTO MINING CLOSE

Toronto, July 17 — (CP)— Although some of the intermediate gold stocks were little profit-taking, the majority moved upward on today's mining exchange session and a few registered new top prices. Gold soared up after York Hughes had made a new peak in the forenoon. Silvers had a better tone and most base metal shares were higher. O'Brien and Read Authier were the biggest gainers, both adding more than 60 cents in active trading to make new highs of 3.80 and 2.85 but slipped a little below the close.

Higher golds included Paymaster, Perron, Bidgood, Kirkland Lake, Central Patricia and Chibougamau. Hard Rock added 31 to reach 3.75, Preston East Dome encountered selling and dropped 16 to around 1.50.

PIONEER LIBRARY MEETS EVIL DAY

Mudie's in London Was First to Loan Books For Fee

London, July 18—(CP Cable) Mudie's Library, founded in 1842, famous throughout the field of lending books to the public for a small fee, has fallen on evil days.

A receiver-manager was appointed in the chancery division yesterday on the application of a debenture stockholder who owns £3,500 ($17,500) debentures out of an issue of £19,500 ($97,500). The interest on the securities was in arrears.

An affidavit filed showed the company owed £2,100 ($10,500) in rents and over £2,000 ($10,000) to unsecured creditors.

Mudie's Lending Libraries were founded by Charles Mudie who had a stationery and bookselling business in Bloomsbury London.

He began lending books and in 1863 became so successful that he moved his "select library" to larger premises in New Oxford Street. Branches were added and in 1884 it became a limited company.

AUSTRALIA WINS OVER GERMANY

Heiner Hankel Defaults to Crawford After Two Sets

Wimbledon, Eng., July 18 (AP) — Australia took a 1-0 lead over Germany today in the opening match of the Inter-zone Davis Cup tennis series as the veteran Jack Crawford won by a default over Heiner Hankel. The young German quit tired after Crawford won the first two sets 6-2, 6-3.

The winner of the best three of five match series will meet England in the challenge round here next week-end.

Later it was announced Henkel had been confined to bed for several days suffering from chills. His weakened condition made it difficult for him to cover court.

Young Wild Ducks Die By Thousands in West

Ottawa, July 18.—(CP)—Untold thousand of young wild ducks have perished in Western Canada owing to the dry season, according to reports reaching the interior department here today. Thousands of sloughs and ponds in the south-west part of the Prairie Provinces, where the ducks breed are dry and this means death for young ducks hatched during the season. The drought this year is the worst so far as ducks are concerned, since 1931.

Failure of the young western ducks to mature will deplete the duck supply of the continent as a whole and will affect hunters in Eastern Canada as some breeds, such as mirres backs and redheads, migrate across Ontario and Quebec during the autumn on their way to winter quarters along the Atlantic coast.

New York, July 18—(AP)—Details of a disastrous earthquake which virtually destroyed Tumaco, Colombia, yesterday, leaving thousands homeless, were anxiously awaited here today. Communications failed shortly after the shocks late yesterday afternoon and had not been restored early today.

CAT IS RESCUED BY 16 YR. OLD GIRL

Crowds Gather To Watch Struggle in Welland

Welland, Ont., July 18 (CP)—Crowds gathered along the banks of the Welland Canal today and watched Miss Virginia Shoyer, 16 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Shoyer, of Virginia Road, swimming 75 feet to rescue a black and white-colored cat, by Virginia Road, 16 year old Welland girl.

Virginia, swimming out to the cat bank, noticed the fellow clinging to the life-saving cable chain along the shore was tired and with-drawing its head out of the water as though preparing to stay above the surface. She immediately struck out for the opposite bank in an exhausting swim and reached the cat first.

The battle then began. The frightened cat scratched its rescuer before Virginia was able to take hold of it in one hand and swim a distance of nearly yards to where the bank sloped.

King Edward May be Induced To Give Up Strolls in Parks

Indications Pressure May be Brought to Induce Him to Change Habits

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

London, July 18 (AP)—Scotland Yard officials, torn between a desire to please their Sovereign and their duty to protect him, were reported today King Edward would have to be induced to change his habits.

Reliable authority, at the source, reflecting public anxiety over the attempt on the King Thursday, indicated pressure would be brought to induce King Edward to give up his strolls on the streets.

Instead of being able to mingle with his subjects, His Majesty probably will be asked to travel about London in an automobile as his father, the late King George, always did.

George Andrew McMahon, who disturbed the Empire with his attempt against the King on Constitution Hill, was questioned again following medical attention.

It was understood he stuck to his story that he never intended to shoot the King but that he threw his revolver at the King as "a protest."

Summoned by a public call for witnesses of the incident, a long stream of people, mainly women, poured into Scotland Yard.

They included high officers of the Crown, who had followed the King in the procession Thursday, visitors from the provinces, from abroad and from the suburbs.

With King Edward's coronation day but a year away, authorities were determined to remove all danger of future incidents similar to that on Constitution Hill.

"A King is He Who Has No Fear"

This radiophoto from London shows the King, unperturbed as Thursday's incident as His Majesty was returning from the presentation of colors at Hyde Park. The King, indicated by upper arrow, is shown slightly turning his head to see what caused the commotion as he rides down the Mall. McMahon surrounded by police who have seized him and are pushing him from the crowd that surges forward. In the foreground is shown Special Constable Flood who at the instant raised his horse against between the King and McMahon.

RANGERS GAIN AGAINST FIRES

Little Spreading of Conflagration in North Ontario

Sudbury, Ont., July 18 (CP)—All along Sudbury forest fire front today cheering reports were heard from fire rangers contacting the district office of the Ontario Forestry branch. Cloudy skies aided hopes that the fire rangers had hold their own during the night. It was not expected that the fires which have been ravaging the timberlands of this district during the past two weeks would advance today.

"There was little spreading as all yesterday afternoon and none during the night," forestry officials reported today. "We are shifting men from a number of the fires which have been controlled and putting them on to the others."

The Second township fire which has caused considerable concern in this district due to the large amount of heavy red and white pine threatened was reported to be held. Ill pumps were turned against the blaze yesterday and 300 men, weary and from two weeks in the smoke, saw their work bringing results.

BABY DIONNE GAINS, NOW WEIGHS 8 1-2 LBS.

Callander, Ont., July 18 (CP)—Dr. J. E. I. Joyal, who ushered little Georgia Robert Talaspoore Dionne into the world, said today Mrs. Olivia Dionne is able to leave her bed for a while each day and will be able to remain up throughout the day by Monday.

The physician reported the mother and baby in excellent condition. The new brother to the Dionne quintuplets now weighs 8½ pounds, a gain of half a pound since his birth July 9.

Routine announcement is still lacking that the new baby will be christened tomorrow, but it is expected the original plans will be carried out, then at Corbeil Parish Church within Dion Dionne's estate.

Mr. and Mrs. Telesphore Demers, Corbeil, uncle and aunt of the baby, will be its godparents.

MARQUEE STRUCK BY LARGE TRUCK

Vehicle Driven Away But Eye-Witness Secures Number

A large transport crashed into the marquee in front of the Capitol Theatre early this morning, badly damaging the canopy and putting the neon lighting service, that skirts the marquee, out of service. The accident was witnessed by Willard Soderberg, who resides nearby, and who heard the crash and observed the accident from the window of his apartment next to the theatre.

Mr. Soderberg informed Constable Taylor, who investigated, that the truck mounted the curb and struck the marquee, later driving away from the scene of the accident. The witness procured the number of the vehicle, however, and gave police same.

The damage at the theatre was set at over one hundred dollars by the manager later today.

Hammers and axes swung into action with the police station yesterday afternoon when a steel machine that had been seized and the owner convicted of operating a gambling device two months ago, was destroyed. At total of $40.00 in five cent pieces was removed from the cash box. The machine was then smashed by a pile of scrap iron when the police got through with it. The breaking of the machine was witnessed by Crown Attorney Donnan, and Chief Kidd. It was later thrown into the dump.

CHALLENGE VASE TO CAPT. HALLEY

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Bisley Camp, Surrey, July 18 (CP Cable)—Capt. E. H. Halley of South Africa today won the T. George's Challenge Vase, one of the main events for the concluding day at the two weeks' Empire meet at Bisley Rifle Ranges.

Capt. Halley had a 71, four short of perfect figure, in the second and final stage of the St. George's. It called for 15 shots at 900 yards with service rifles.

Free City Danzig Constitution Abolished by Gov't, Report

Ritual Slaughter is Denied Jews By Order

NEW SECRET POLICE

Free City of Danzig, July 18 (AP) —Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, president of the Danzig senate, by a series of administrative decrees today virtually set aside the Free City constitution. The move was in keeping with his threat of July 9 to crush opposition to the Danzig Nazi Party Government, although he said then the letter of the constitution would be upheld.

Diplomatic circles were speculating on the attitude to be taken by Sean Lester, high commissioner for the League of Nations, and whether Poland will object.

The sweeping decrees calculated to crush opposition to the Danzig Nazi Party were published by the government of the Free City.

Any organization whose members with knowledge of the decrees on board spread news "endangering the state interests" will be dissolved.

Suppression of Opposition.

Berlin, July 18 (CP)—The semi-official German News Agency today published reports that the Danzig government had promulgated laws abolishing the constitution of the Free City.

The reports said that freedom to hold meetings has been suppressed in Danzig, a secret police established no longer will be subject to approval

9 PERSONS KILLED AT DUNDEE, MICH., AT RAIL CROSSING

Struck by Ann Arbor Railway Passenger Locomotive

AUTO DEMOLISHED

Pennsylvania Farty Wiped Out On Way Home

Dundee, Mich., July 18 (AP) — Nine persons were killed when the automobile in which they were en route to their home in Pennsylvania after a visit here was struck by an Ann Arbor Railroad passenger locomotive and hurled into the Raisin River this morning.

The victims were not immediately identified but the car bore Pennsylvania license plates.

The car was entirely demolished, and the railroad bridge immediately beyond the crossing was ignited by blazing gasoline.

Ray Wilson, operator of a filling station nearby, was the first to reach the scene of the accident.

"I heard a terrific crash," he said "and I ran out and down to the river. I saw at least seven bodies in the water, and there may have been more."

The passenger train was bound from Toledo to Ann Harbor. The crash occurred at the point Highway M-36 crosses the tracks on the east side of Dundee.

Wilson said the red signal light at the crossing was in good working order.

The Victims Identified

The victims were identified as Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schuster of Fairfield, Pa., and their three daughters and four grandchildren. Another Farrell family whose names were not learned at once.

The car, a large four-door sedan was struck as it was crossing and dragged about 75 feet to a narrow bridge where it crashed into a girder and fell into the river.

The engine of the nine victims fell 30 feet from the bridge into shallow water of the stream.

MILITARY REVOLT SWEEPS TO SPAIN; UNDER CONTROL

Uprising Stifled at its Root Says Spanish Report

FIGHTING ON BORDER

Frontier Guards Doubled by Spanish Government

Hendaye, France, July 18—(CP-Havas)—Unconfirmed reports reaching this frontier town near the Spanish border today said several garrisons in Southern Spain had revolted.

Reports persisted here that heavy fighting had broken out at Madrid, Cadiz, Seville, Burgos and Saragossa.

Communications from Hendaye and Spain were suddenly cut off again today despite the Madrid government's assurances that military revolt in Morocco was definitely under control.

Royalists Blamed
Revolt in Morocco

Detachments of insurrectionary troops now believed in control of part of Spanish Morocco today were reported massing to embark shortly for Spain and march on the capital.

The rebellion, said to have been fomented by Royalist elements in the army in an attempt to overthrow the Leftist government, has spread from the garrison town of Melilla throughout the entire protectorate, it was reported.

..... Revolt in Morocco .....

Reports from Madrid said warships were ordered to proceed at full speed from Spain to Algeciras, pick up all loyal infantry forces available, and hasten to Spanish Morocco as soon as revolt was received here.

Hendaye, France, July 18 (CP)—A widespread military revolt allegedly led by monarchists, which began in Spanish Morocco and then swept into Spain today, was reported safely in control of government forces, in information seeping through a drastic official censorship into this frontier city.

The movement in Morocco, where a third of the Spanish Legion and the regular garrison at Melilla mutinied, was planned by conspirators for months, it was charged, against the Leftist government, reports said, but authorities, aware of these plans, took all precautions to stifle the uprising at its root.

Police Conquered.

At Melilla, it was reported, the mutineers, after a brief fight overcoming garrison, but the civil population resisted the mutineers.

(Dispatches from Gibraltar reported that Socialist groups in Melilla had scrambled arms to civilians who forced the insurgents, under command of Gen. Emilio Mola, to stay within their barracks.

Gen. Morato, commander-in-chief of the Spanish army in Spanish Africa, was reported arriving in the disturbed area.

Similar to 1935.

The Melilla movement, observers recalled, was similar to the 1935 uprising in the Spanish frontier town of Jaca, where two garrison officers attempted to lead their troops to mutiny and were resisted by the people.

(Dispatches from Cerbere, just across the eastern end on the Franco-Spanish frontier, reported bloody street fighting between civil guards and Socialists, the latter disposing political factions in Barcelona. Spanish frontier guards reportedly doubled the frontier guards at all points to bar the return into the country of Spanish refugees who, after the last elections, in which the Leftist people's front won an overwhelming victory.)

MAGAZINE SOLD IS OF 1934 VINTAGE

The City Master buy a magazine shrilled a report this morning at early hour this morning. It's the last one I've got and I guess we have.

Grimy faced, the embryonic business man stared at his potential client with an innocent look. "Cmon be a sport" pleadingly. "You can have it for a dime."

A dirt streaked hand reached for the silver coin. And a childish voice broke into a shrill cry as the schoolboy racketeer announced to a pal that he was all set for the show this afternoon.

The "victim" glanced at his new purchase. It was of 1934 vintage.

TWEED
Former Resident Dies at Aurora

Frederick John Black Passes After Long Illness

Tweed.—Frederick John Black, a former well-known resident of wood, died on Tuesday, July 14th, at his home in Aurora after a prolonged illness of several months' duration. The deceased who was the son of Capt. and Mrs. J. Black was born in Cobourg 80 years ago. As a young man he was an employe of the Hudson's Bay Company and the Canadian Northwest. In 1897 he purchased a 50-pound business in Tweed, selling out in 1913 to J. D. Taylor.

The late Mr. Black was a member of Tweed Methodist Church and served on the official board for some years. Fraternally he was a member of the Independent Order of Oddfellows and politically a loyal supporter of the Liberal party. After disposing of his business interests, Mr. Black remained in Tweed for a few years, moving later to Aurora where he purchased a home. His wife, Alice Compert, predeceased him about 12 years. He is survived by one daughter, Miss Gladys Black, Ing., of Aurora, who served overseas as a nurse in the Great War, and two sons Capt. W. Black of Aurora and Charles Black, of Battle Creek, Mich., also by one brother, Coburg, also survives.

The funeral was held at Aurora, where interment was made on Thursday afternoon.

Late A. C. Barnett

The funeral of the late A. C. Barnett was held on Wednesday afternoon from his late residence. Rev. R. J. Greenwood, minister of the United Church, was in charge of the service. Mrs. M. O. Dales and Mrs. H. R. Grier sang very beautifully, "Face to Face." Surviving are his widow; a son, Arthur, and daughter Mrs. C. H. Kerr. The bearers were: F. S. Rath Q. A. Mathieson, R. T. Rollins, W. H. Rollins, J. W. Kingston, W. H. Young.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Beatty and Elaine are spending a fortnight at Pleasant Point. Mr. Beatty, accident fisherman, reports the fishing excellent and says that his friends in Tweed have enjoyed some fine salmon trout while he has been there. The largest specimen weighing over twelve pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Turnbull and two children, of Whitney, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Allen.

Mr. Arthur Kerr, B.A., who is attending O. A. C., Guelph, and Mr. Daniel Barnett of the Royal Bank Staff of Toronto, attended the funeral of their grandfather, Mr. A. C. Barnett, on Wednesday.

Mrs. Kerr, Barnett and daughter Ruby attended the funeral of the late A. C. Barnett.

Home Team Loses

Failure to bring runners to bit resulted in Laffman's great pitching effort going for naught in the Tweed-Stirling game at the ball park during the week. The locals were a bye in the fourth inning, a clock defeating Norwood in the first round, the home squad winning by 3-2 in the extra frame of 1 to 0. Exhibition games are keeping Gordon Steel busy on the mound with the play-downs in August as they have drawn a bye in the first round of the O.A.S.A. having been unable to secure a suitable diamond.

Tweed Vote $3 Mills

Tweed village council has been set at 53 mills, the same as for the year 1935. This was made possible by increasing the rate from 49 to 53 mills from 10½ mills, a decrease made necessary by the loss of 3 mills in the County rates and ¼ a mill in the Consolidated School rate. Relief cuts show a reduction. Tax collectors to date show an increase over the same period for last year, although arrears of unpaid taxes show little if any, decrease.

Several graduates of Tweed High School who have been attending Normal School at Peterboro and Ottawa have been highly successful in First Class Certificates, according to a recent announcement. They are: Peterboro Normal School: John Doran, Mary Kinlin, Kenneth Alexander; Ottawa Normal School: Jean Collins. Kenneth Alexander has been engaged to teach at Lake Mountain Grove for the ensuing year.

Tweed-Sulphide Band gave a band concert at Oak Lake on Sunday afternoon and evening which was highly patronized by campers and tourists.

Water Shortage

A serious water shortage is being experienced in Tweed. The prolonged dry spell has caused the water level in the well to a point that makes it impossible to pump more than six feet from the bottom. This makes the danger of shortage in case of fire very great and local users are urged to conserve the existing supply and to refrain from watering their lawns.

The Junior Farmers of Hastings County will hold their annual Field Day at Tweed Agricultural Grounds on Thursday, July 23.

Tweed-Sulphide Band will give the second of a series of concerts on Sunday night, July 19, at Tweed Memorial Park at 8.15.

Trenton's First Picture Deserves Preserving

In a secluded spot on the walls of Trenton's Municipal office hangs a picture of Trenton as it looked when known as Trent Port. The picture, painted by Lieutenant Governor Gibbs, who sat on Trent Mountain in the year 1793, is the first time the art has put drew the picture there were in Trent Port, somewhere in the neighborhood of the building, a log covered bridge and Rathbone's saw mill situated two miles down the bay, towards Belleville, on what is now known as Mary Island today. In comparison, following 51 years of toil, Trenton consists of 3,000 buildings, a steel bridge in place of the wooden one and along the river front, which were barren at that time are many thriving industries.

On the back of the picture appears View of village of Trent Port taken from the hill on the west side of the river, 1841. Looking from the same west side today where Sumpton's Island is, one sees a mass of buildings, the same Trent river only vastly changed as to an industrial view. Across the river again looms numerous structures and where the artist sketched a dense forest one raises upon the tree-covered mountain. Route No. 2 Highway winding its way towards the city of Belleville. These works of one of Trenton's outstanding pioneers will be preserved to keep clear in the minds of former Trentonians what hardships and duty their ancestors had to perform in helping to municipality up to what it is today. Everyone who passes this vivid description of Trent Port what is now their home Trenton, causes much interest but if it is not taking heed for it to be imprinted on the minds of a few who have had the pleasure of appreciating it.

MAN ARRESTED BELIEVED WANTED

Alleged by police to have been intoxicated and causing a disturbance, two men giving their names as J. L. Crawford, London and Harry MacLean, Toronto, were arrested in a tourist camp west of Belleville by Provincial Constable McIlrien, late last night. Today the men were arraigned before Magistrate Bullier, K.C., and remanded in custody, a police officer being discreetly issued for the apprehension of the Toronto man, MacLean.

Following complaints, that a man had assaulted Mr. Levi Pallie, of Perth, Constable McIlrien arrested MacLean and Crawford on the premises of a tourist camp, where, it was stated by Mr. Pallie, that MacLean was operating a public dance. Mr. Pallie, who is a farmer, stated that he had gone to the camp to purchase a tourist cabin occupied by Pallie's wife and daughter. When registering Mr. Pallie, who is an elderly man, MacLean set upon him and assaulted him, it is said.

When arrested Crawford was found in possession of a motor car bearing dealers' license plates, which police believe he did not own. Two weeks ago local police made a police circular to be on the alert for a man answering Crawford's description and who was wanted in Western Canada for fraud arising out of the alleged sales of trophies. Crawford, it is said, was posing as a pair on nominal charges of intoxication, while in the meantime police authorities in Western Canada have been notified of Crawford's arrest, it is said. Local police officials at the city on No. 2 Highway was instructed to be on the flier. A passing motorist noticing a red glow in the sky reported the fire to the police and gave warning to people in a nearby cottage.

Owing to the nature of the building, due to the intense heat of the fire, it was soon a mass of ruin to the flames. In a short time the roof had fallen in and all that remained of the district, was a blazing inferno.

A small quantity of hay and grain which was stored in the premises was destroyed. Fire apparatus from Belleville came and did splendid work in protecting nearby buildings from spark, absence of wind played an important part in the segregation of the fire.

Mr. Ernest Hubbs, the later summoned to the scene of the blaze, stated that the building insured and was seen in the vicinity of Mr. Hubbs' home from time to time. The fire breaking out. Constable Robinson investigated but found no evidence to show how the fire could have been number of reportedthefire and Mr. Hubbs is questioned as to and whether this practice was being continued. Although it has not fire resulted, we cannot determine at present. We intend to "more than likely" it was "smoking fever," stated Constable Robinson this morning.

Composed features and an agreeable disposition never accompany eyestrain! Reading Dorothy Cocks, beauty editor of "the Pictorial Review" . . . Eyestrain is one of the quickest and surest causes of wrinkles: nothing makes you look so pitifully old as those crisp, nervous little lines on your face, those drawn look at the eye-corners, those frowning furrows over the nose-bridge—all of which come from strained eyes. . . . Glasses, if the examination has been careful and experienced, can prevent those aging wrinkles.

On Wednesday, July 15th., at Whitby, Jeanette Elizabeth (Bessie) Donnelly, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Donnelly of Whitby, formerly of Tweed, was united in marriage to Clarence B. BEWARE OF SPREADING FIRE

Fire hazards are great in the woods at this time and in the fields. Even the cities with tracts of open lands or acreages uncultivated are not beyond the danger of starting conflagrations which may cause an immense amount of damage.

At no time is a fire so hazardous as it is today with the grass like tinder and a breeze blowing generally.

It behooves everyone to exercise every control of impulse in throwing away matches or cigarette butts, to be very careful. At summer resorts a spark may destroy an entire resort and harm the lives of many people.

For it is not only fields of grain, but lives which may be menaced.

SMOKE PALL

The pall of smoke from the Northern Ontario fires has reached London area two days Ago. Usually the northern bush fires are later in the year and late August is the season when the sky in these parts is partially obscured through a smoke haze. Everyone knows that peculiar sky appearance and the pungent odor of smoke of such a far-off fire.

WORLD WAR NAMES COMMEMORATED

Commemorating over one hundred persons or places in the Great War, a new map sheet entitled "Vimy", just issued by the Topographical and Air Survey Bureau, Department of the Interior, is of timely interest, owing to the pilgrimage to France this month. The map pertains to a district about 150 miles north of Ottawa, at the headwaters of the Ottawa river and just south of the transcontinental line of the Canadian National Railways. The township of Vimy, within the region, is the source from which the map derived its name.

Several other townships and a great number of lakes, bays, and rivers of the area, where the height of land separates waters flowing into the St. Lawrence from those whose course is in a northerly direction to James bay, now bear the names of Amiens, Aisne, Armentieres, Arras, Bishop, Bramshott, Byng, Cambrai, Chipilly, Courcelette, Dannee, Eloi, Esperey, Flanders, Foch, Gallipoli, Gault, Haig, Havre, Kitchener, LaFleche, Loos, Lorraine, Marne, Mulock, Nieuport, Ostend, Quentin, Reins, Saar, Serre, Somme, Verdun, Vickers, Ypres and Yser, besides many others.

It is interesting to note that a little over one hundred years ago the lumber trade on the Ottawa received a great impetus indirectly from important European events, chiefly centred in France, Napoleon in his efforts to become the dominant power in Europe endeavored to stop the supply of timber going from Baltic countries to England. Britain on the other hand to help provide for the necessities of the war levied heavy import duties on foreign timber and these duties were later retained with the object of promoting colonial trade. As the result the Ottawa Valley timber trade entered upon a period of rapid expansion.

Although the new "Vimy" map is of geographical interest primarily to those within reasonable proximity to the district anyone interested in a study of the place names used, and individuals or events with which they are associated, may obtain copies on application to the Surveyor General, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

THE SUN OF MAN

New York Times talking of heat and so on refers to the eighties when Jevons racking his brains for an explanation of the recurring cycles of depression and prosperity, suggested that they might be connected with the appearance and disappearance of spots on the sun. It says that his ghost must have many times regretted he ever suggested such a thing for it has been the source of laughter. But says the newspaper, "the theory was far-fetched, but not quite so inherently absurd as some of its critics represented it to be. It was Jevons' idea that sunspots might affect the earth's climate, which might affect harvests, which might affect the ups and downs of trade. He also thought it possible that sunspots might by affecting climate, affect the spits and attitudes of men. And lo, now there arises a disciple, not among the economists but among the astronomers, Louis B. Andrews of Harvard's astronomical observatory." The maximum spottedness in recent years has been in 1906, 1917 and 1928 and the minimum spottedness in 1901, 1913, 1923 and 1933. It is said that in 1901 there was a drought wich caused one of the worst failures of the corn crop, though it was an era of prosperity and trade.

It is remarked however that a large number of people may be made receptive to the notion of Jevons — that the sun has a great deal to do with human happiness and misery.

GREETINGS TO THIS GREAT FAMILY JOURNAL ARE ACKNOWLEDGED FROM D. CRANE TAYLOR, of Chicago, one of those writing chaps who wander up and down the world absorbing local color and getting more out of this life than most folk because of trained perception and enquiring mind. Just now D. Crane Taylor is resting at Green Point Farm, Picton, and writes expressing appreciation of a paragraph in this column dealing with his biography of John L. Stoddard. Says he: "It is fully as gratifying to me to be honored by my wife's home town as in my own. Indeed, my wife is fully as responsible for this book as I am. We first met the Stoddards together in 1930 and they called her their niece. The idea of my writing a biography of Mr. Stoddard originated with her. When-he approved of this we returned to his home in Menano where he secured most of the material, as I have related in the preface. As I wrote the book she took a parental interest in it, and suggested scores of additions, and corrections, which were incorporated in the text. As each chapter was completed I read it to her, and then we worked over the revisions together. This is always my custom for she is my most astute critic. Many books are born in this sense, joint products, and I think it quite unfair that the person who does the actual writing should receive all of the credit." The book referred to is "John L. Stoddard, Traveller, Lecturer, Literateur." D. Crane Taylor, author; Co-authur Hazel Taylor, formerly of Belleville.

THAT BUGABOO OF BAD BUSINESS HAS BEEN BANISHED, the world has returned to normal and Big Business Boosters are Ballyhooing for Bigger and Better Business all along the line. Folks who buried their talents, otherwise their savings, in tin cans and old socks have put them back in circulation and the wheels of industry are humming as never before. Signs of the Better Times are many, but one picturesque pointer may be mentioned in the revival of World Fairs, a la Chicago. Of course the Windy City led the procession with a greater and grander fair than the one that made history forty odd years ago. Then came San Diego, California; and now Texas is putting on a Big Show, while Lil' Ole New York is clearing the Jersey meadows for the Greatest Show on Earth next year. Paris comes back into the picture despite its left-handed government and will build a Bigger and Better Awful Tower, or was it Eiffel? This Great Family Journal has just received an official invitation to visit the Paris Exposition, 1937—so, until then—Au Revoir.

The Other Day.....

By Guillaume Michaud

THE OTHER DAY upon our street I met a man—a friend of mine, who said to me all interrupt: "Old chap, this very year, I think that you and you and I and Henry Jones, have, on our salaries, done splendidly, enjoyed ourselves more than ever before and will have lots and lots of money in the bank. And waking, found the sorrowful head that Pate has evidently willed it so, that you and I, and Henry Jones, shall live our years in shacks and attics, be ill in rain, and wind, and cause disease."

Goodfed in doubt: "How you, my friend, so lately off relief, and evidently suffered so, cracked up at last, and evidently not yet ready for the doctor? Or have you by chance, delirium, enjoyed Hepburn's brews, and spirits strong, till you have lost all sanity?"

Surprisedly he queried: "Then haven't you heard from Henry Jones the joyful news of late, that government is quite prepared, and will within too long a time, build great houses fine, that will compare quite favorably with any in the town? It's truth, old chap, it's truth, as I am a Republic, that you and I, and Henry Jones, can do this thing; fulfill our dreams, and verily, in fact, our every interest ridden, and sharp advice from experts versed in the art, of building homes for such, as you and I, and Henry Jones, and others too. We are assured by all concerned, that this is the truth, that Henry Jones expounds with glee this Housing Act, is sure and certain remedy, for present cruel and hard concerns, which strike such men as you and I, and Henry Jones. Leaky roofs are all passed by; and activity invigorate this bounty? And with me build, upon it, and, that gave us birth a mansion strait and strong? And those we love shall have a home, a heritage to live in free and joyfully. Wherein ourselves, not quite so young as once we were, may live our days in happiness. With full rein to our hearts content, our dreams fulfilled, our eyes may close, our spirits soar, and peacefully, like a man, we go, who makes this possible! Come, let us hie ourselves to the man in charge, in this our town, that we may very soon begin to build, and on our own ground, that dreamhouse for you, Gowers, vines, with grasses green and hedges trim and low, of once watching out the door, with faces bright, for you and you and I, and Henry Jones."

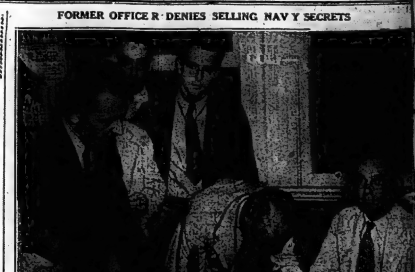
And as we met my friend and I, unto the place described for us, and found ourselves majestically with power vested in his hand to have us built in common men a figure broad of brow, of mouth, big as all and state our needs, benignant voiced. Now we are men, my friend and I, of modest mien. We do not fill, quite readily, into a scheme magnificent: of splendor bold, of shining floors, of tapestries of softened light of carpets soft beneath the feet. More are we used to barrenness of the naught floors, to windows cracked, to pockmarked walls, to yellow, fevered light, and poverty. So hesitant, in humble voice, we to this man make known our need, and stress, with pleading eye, our own, our children's plight and how for many years have lived in slums, in basements, in mildewed flats corrupt and mean. In fact lived through misery and how that we had failed, with grateful joy, the news had come to us that they'd done, forevermore and more. That we may build ourselves a home, a place quite suitable for such as we and Henry Jones, and others too.

Quick, he entrenched at calen desk, resplendent and serene: "Good news indeed, my friend for you. And tickled pink that you and I, have come this day to see me. I'll see that you get what you need this plan to which quite easily, you may subscribe, and from it benefit. I quite agree with you and you, that you have lived too long, long since, in hovels only fit for beasts, and such men. But the plan for housing you, makes all that a matter a nightmare foul. Simplicity itself! Your application of loose money here and there—and co-operation of the tenants, the builder and the government, have well done this. By simple application of loose money here and there—and co-operation of the tenants, the builder and the government, have well done this. By simple application of loose money here and there—and co-operation of the tenants, the builder and the government, you may erect a structure fine and gentle future. The citizens of this our land, may well be proud to see them with joy and gratitude, that men such as you and I, and Henry Jones have for them accomplished. What say you men?"

What could we say? With gratitude our hearts are filled, and quickly, "Kind sir, lead on, lead on we pray, prepare the papers promptly; for you and Henry Jones, and others too, are waiting."

"Why yes" I smiled, and Henry I shall, as soon as you are ready."

"Then ready now, sir! Waiting on you," we chorus in smart unison.



Amazedly he answers: "You mean to say substantially, you have the money with you? A full one thousand of the coin, correctly counted, dollars?" A fallen face disturbs him. "Did I not say, departments quite early in this session, co-operation was, of course, understood? Are we baffled? I'm sure I did, and rightly too for its quite necessary. Without that sum in cash and hand, there's no building can be done. But with that amount, in legal hands, we'll go ahead and build—but are you no longer interested? Good day my friends, and come again; is it that you curse me? Take heed, you men, there is law, you know, against all perjury. Good depart, I cannot have you all day standing round with such sundry!"

And we are bubbles broken. And gold proved dross and gems named glass. A thousand dollars such! It is laugh, not mercify. My friend I met upon the street, and I, may meet again perhaps, SOME OTHER DAY.

POISSON STATES HEPBURN RIGHT

Public Conservative Meeting Thinks Leaders Wrong in Attitude

Windsor, Ont., July 18 (CP)— A motion without Partisan in the Conservative meeting here to censure Ontario Government, Dr. Paul Poisson was on record today with a statement that he considered the attitude of Premier Hepburn's amendment to the Assessment Act, giving Separate Schools a share of the corporation taxes.

Dr. Poisson, who represented the County of Essex North in the Provincial Legislature, addressed a meeting of Ward One Conservatives here last night and declared that Conservative leaders are "absolutely wrong" in talking of repealing the amendment. He said he was not a plank in their platform at the general party convention, next October.

Dr. Poisson, who represented the County of Essex North in the Provincial Legislature, addressed a meeting of Ward One Conservatives here last night and declared that Conservative leaders are "absolutely wrong" in talking of repealing the amendment. He said he was not a plank in their platform at the general party convention, next October.

Dr. Poisson said so far as repudiation of the act, of the thought behind the act, Mr. Hepburn has not yet repudiated the Catholics of this province, to the extent he has given to them. The issue which are the "real issue" and the "Conservative leaders, he declared, are not interested in trying to talk of repudiation of the act. Mr. Hepburn's recent repudiation does need to be amended and corrected as to its statements contrary to the full intent, the idea behind the act.

"If we are going to carry on a religious campaign it will be a sad day in this province. I feel that this is thrown out of public discussion in the next few years that it is going to do more harm than good to the people of the province."

BELIEVE CONVICT MAY BE BURNED

Guards And Provincial Police Comb Bush Countries

Sudbury, Ont., July 18.—(CP)— Sergeant Alberic Knight, special agent of the Sudbury detachment of Ontario Police, said today he believed Edward Reed convicted murderer of Burwash, either was burned to death by Forest fires in Dryden Township or is now roaming far from that area.

Guards from the Burwash Industrial farm and six Provincial Police officers combed the bush country observers and reported a minute search of the district failed to reveal any trace of the man who escaped Saturday and is wanted for the slaying of Night Guard Alex Marshall Johnson, another convict, Saturday night.

Search of the fire swept forests placed the manhunters in extreme hardship and danger. In many places they were forced to beat their way through deep ash that still glowed.

Sergeant Knight said unless some sign that Gray is in the district appears soon the man will be remembered by their posts at Sudbury; Hornepayne, Espanola and Blind River. The sergeant said he thought Gray made his way out on the fire area, Sunday before the cordon was spread or had perished in the flames. Johnson's body was found in three feet of water at Rock Lake, Tuesday. An autopsy revealed a fractured skull and that the man died before his body entered the water.

The search for Gray, believed fleeing by the northland and setting fires in his mad dash for freedom became a systematic beating of the bushes after the convict had walked out in a great chain. Reports that Gray had broken into shacks and stolen weapons were not confirmed. Police said they believed he became crazed by the heat and smoke as fire reared through the forests.

Cheese Must Remain In Curing Room 8 Days Before Boxing

After some complaints that cheesemakers of this central district are not allowing sufficient time in which to cure cheese in the curing room before boxing, counties of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association at a special meeting held in the office of Mr. J. L. Irwin, local Dominion Dairy Instructor, last evening were unanimous in their decision that cheese remain in the curing room. Following considerable discussion of the matter, it was decided to forward letters to all cheesemakers and secretaries of cheese boards throughout Central Ontario calling attention to this regulation. This was decided upon in view of the continued complaints received from cheese boards during the past few years there has been considerable criticism by importers from Great Britain on cheese which are stored the several months, and also from merchants who store cheese in Canada, that the rinds on the ends of some of the shipments become soft and in a decayed condition. The law in force at present is as much as 10 to 15 pounds per cheese, which is entirely too much by half a pound.

The regulation under Part 2 of the Dairy Industry Act is:

"No grade of milk grade any cheese until in his judgment it is sufficiently mature to permit of the cheese being safely marketed or exported and he may refuse to grade any cheese that has been placed in boxes for shipment within eight days after the date of manufacture."

These cheese must remain on the shelves in the curing rooms of the factories for eight days after being taken from the press," pointed out Mr. J. L. Irwin, Dairy Instructor. "We've been getting complaints regarding this and have decided to enforce the regulation. It is for the cheesemaker's own good."

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Lamaque Gold Mines Corp. Earns $1.98 a Share Next Year

A strong feature of the mining market in the recent past, Lamaque sold up to a new all time high yesterday, advancing to over $7.00 a share. Brokers report that the stock is "hard to buy." It is a known secret that York Hughes are planning a step up in the Lamaque mill from 500 tons a day to 1500 tons daily. There have been reports current on the Street that production may be stepped up to 1,000 tons daily but according to information available in quarters that usually know, the step-up is to be 1,000 tons thus bringing daily output to 1500 tons a day.

On such a basis, Lamaque's earnings promise to be very substantial. In fact it is possible on visualize earnings of close to $1.00 per share in the next calendar year, and when Lamaque is operating on the basis of 1500 tons a day, monthly production should be close to $600,000 from an output of 45,000 tons a month. Net profits should be close to $300,000 or the equivalent of $2,000,000 annually or $1.20 for each share of stock outstanding.

Although there has been little, if any, information on results of new developments at depth it is understood that the latest drilling has shown in the average grade of ore, the last estimate of which was approximately one-third of an ounce of gold per ton.

O'Brien Rises to New High

O'Brien Gold Mines advanced into new high ground yesterday, getting near the $4.00 mark. Only a few months ago the stock was selling around the $2.00 mark and the high level which advanced in rich ore last week is said to be about very high values, running into several ounces of gold per ton.

The O'Brien property has been had on the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th levels. Crosscutting is at the fourth level, to discover if the upward indications of this rich shoot can be found; in other words, if it has been and to sink below the 9th level.

Ore is said to be of high grade.

According to president Hammell, Pickle Crow plans to double production. The necessary arrangements to bring the mill up to 600 tons per day have been ordered.

At the present time we are experiencing an excellent mining market. Generally, it is a professional market. Generally, strength in one mining issue attracts the public interest in the other but the present is apparently proving the exception, for the strength displayed in Lamaque following is being built-up and a broader and active market is in the making.

All kinds of rumors are prevalent with reference to O'Brien but little is reported unofficially that Lamaque's 1936 profits will be ear-marked to bring the mill up to 600 tons per day as mentioned ordered.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, July 18—Showers in the corn belt, together with continued favorable industrial reports helped to keep the stock market on a fairly even keel today, but reflected no buying or selling enthusiasm.

A number of issues, at their best, were as few highs for the past five years. Transfers approximated 800,000 shares.

ORGANIST TELLS POLICE HIS STORY

London, July 18—C. Harold Hincke, church organist of Grand Rapids, Mich., who witnessed the incident on Constitution Hill, told two Scotland Yard detectives today he believed that the revolver must have been fired by Miss Meredith.

Hincke after the interview said:

"My attention was caught by the glint of the revolver in the air.

"I can't see how the revolver could have been fired outside the man's hand to fly in the air as it did.

"It landed almost at the hind feet of the King's horse. I couldn't swear to it, but I don't think it struck the horse or the horse would have reared.

"The detectives asked if the revolver was covered with sand—which it could not say.

"Then they said, was not a lot different from the ones they have obtained from dozens of witnesses.

"I told the detectives everything I could. I was about 50 yards away from Hickson. As the procession came up I was especially anxious for the King to look my way so he could see his face. That is why I became aware something was up.

"As I reached the corner I saw a hand, as he approached, he 'kept looking to the left as if staring at something.

"Then the king suddenly stiffened up and rode on as excitement broke out at the point at which he had been staring.

"I am almost positive he saw the man. He couldn't help seeing him. Then I saw the revolver in the air. I can't see how it could have been knocked out of the man's hand. It looked like it must have been thrown."

Advice to the Lovelorn

Asks High Mash as Girls' Greatest Source of Power

Several weeks ago Dr. Arthur Christie gave a talk to the graduating class of the Emergency Hospital in Washington, and every girl graduate, whether she's receiving her diploma from a hospital or not, should read what the woman's colleges or a fashionable finishing school—there's scarcely a difference of them left—might profit by taking Dr. Christie's remarks to heart.

He said that notes of a sense of humor would take a girl through the most perilous experience and land her safely. And that is the way I went on to say. "There is a growing attitude of cynicism in America today, and morals and ethics are ragged as old tabcos. There is no greater fallacy than that. Men are not monsters. They are the greatest power in the world."

Another physician, speaking to the graduating class of one of the most famous hospitals in the world, congratulated the nurses on having a job and the opportunity to mend to follow it up.

The keynote of success as the mother or all misery, saying that he had been called in to attend scores of patients whose only ailment was illness. They had nothing in their lives to make them interested, and all the time in the world to brood over their imaginary diseases.

Phantom complaints can set up just as much misery as other internet in life of such pandemic proportions as to threaten themselves. To many rich, idle people—especially women—the depression was a fortunate calamity, setting a rid of the useless clutter in their lives, they were forced by the force of circumstances to brace up and accept realities, becoming all the better for the process.

In these days of shrunken incomes, however, everyone has less than in the affluent years, the doctors advise, and just a little bit like recommending a salty diet to a Hoosiine for a jobless man to do without.

But no one can afford to be fashionably ill these days, and it is to be devoutly hoped that the threatening of the graduates of girl graduates, if they're not going directly to a job, will make jobs for themselves. They might offer their services to some community center, settlement house, or Mission and find some something about humanity, even if they work as unpaid helpers.

If they're not sufficiently interested in the world around them to do this thing from idealistic motives, it is to be hoped they can do it from a selfish interest in their own growing power. Nothing is so wearing on beauty as the blues and dismal moods.

Interest in life, in one's job, or the preparation for a job, or in one's future husband or one's future mate, a vocation or an avocation, is the best gift for women, made and creaming that the latest in beauty parlors has to offer. Don't let yourself become mentally brained and battered by thinking of the unpleasant things of life.

Get busy about something. Have you any thought of taking a group of under-privileged children to a park, giving them a little outing, and letting their mothers have an hour or two of rest?

She Fears He Didn't Like Her Letters

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We met during an Easter vacation, and it was almost a case of love at first sight. He has a nice car and motored over to see me every week-end. He lives somewhere in about 50 miles from mine. Sometimes he called me on the phone ,wrote me letters, and asked me to write to him.

I'm no great hand at writing, as I left school in the Sixth Grade, and do not write very well. However, as I hope to marry this man, I thought he might as well know the worst about me, so I wrote him a letter. He didn't reply. I wrote him another, and got no answer to that one either.

My girl cousin knows his brother, so I got her to try and find out what was the trouble. He said my letters were a shock to him. It's true I did write in pencil, as it's easier for me to write in pencil than with ink.

Do you think my handwriting is so dreadful, and do you think that's going to him should have cause a break?

Margy.

Personally, I do not think your handwriting is bad at all. But if you wrote to the young man with the same pencil you wrote me, perhaps he could not be very efficient to read. Ink is, of course, better yet some people do write very good letters with pencil. But to be sure to have the pencil black enough to make a mark on the paper, as a letter which has to be held at every angle to make out its contents does not make a place for itself. . .

A Correspondent Asks Several

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Is it right for a girl to refuse to kiss a boy on their first date? Many boys have nothing more to do with a girl if she refuses him that privilege.

Also, is it rather rushing things to kiss a boy on the first date? People have fallen in love at first sight. Then kissing may be proper. But the case of love at first sight with two youngsters who meet casually and go out together for the first time is rather unusual.

Enjoy the Sun But Watch Out For Blistering

Marsha Hunt

DIP INTO the beauty budget and take out money for a suntan oil. Those preparations safeguard the skin against burning. If blisters form and break, there is danger of infection and if enough of the skin is destroyed fever may ensue. Yes, madame, sunlight, pure pepper in the human system, but it should be taken in small doses.

Take a bread-brimmed hat to the bathing beach, a pair of dark glasses and your precious suntan oil. This will keep your hair from changing color, the glasses will keep you from squinting and frowning and the oil will protect the face, arms and hands. Why get yourself in for a sunburn when you can have when they can be avoided.

Never use soap and water on the skin after exposure to strong sunlight. Cleanse it gently with an oil or a thin cream. If there is much redness, lave with a soda solution—one teaspoonful to a quart—and add to a glass of warm water—then use the cooling cream.

Tan may be fashionable but it does not improve the texture of the skin. Far from it. Nothing helps to comes thick and coarse and doesn't get back to normal for months.

That Mrs. Fashionable has a fun-ny bone is demonstrated by the ridiculous hats the dear hearts are wearing. Some are dark and others are terrible. The chic ones look charm it not placed at the right angle, but there's no definite rule for hat tilting. Some hang onto the back of the head, some go over one eye some are pulled down over an impertinent nose—depending on the character of the chapeau. The wrong pose, and the prettiest girl becomes an eyesore.

When choosing a hat, regard your nose carefully in the hand mirror and note if the coiffure is harmonious. There are no rules for solving the problem. Every one is a problem of its own. The seeing eye will decide and nothing else will.

WARM NIGHTS bring out piqué, linen and gingham evening things. A grand dress is of white piqué with a starry print, and has cordice border of checked gingham in red and white or blue and white.

IT ISN'T SENSIBLE to drag a lot of things on a trip. For instance, fussy coat of creased white taffeta quilted allover in a tiny floral motif, lined with green and worn at the waist by a green frog, can be worn with many evening and dinner frocks.

IT IS FUN shopping for clothes for youngsters. Frocks are as gay and bright, yet practical with-it. A grand frock for a little girl is of lemon yellow linen with short sleeves, cherries appliqued on the collar and gay, dangling cherry buttons.

A GOOD SPLASH in smart circles is made by a beautifully tailored one-piece bathing suit of rusty copper-colored satin. It has pleated pants, a snug waist and white revers.

NO MATTER how many dresses you may have for evening, it is difficult to resist the appeal of white chiffon. A lovely model, high-waisted, with full skirt, trailing skirt and trailing angel wings in back caught by a jeweled ornament, has an insert of red chiffon at the waist.

JUST DAZZLING is a hip-length evening jacket made entirely of tiers of white fur. It has wide sleeves and is guaranteed to excite exclamations of admiration and envy wherever it is worn.

Scotland Yard is a magic name wherever English is spoken. The imposing building by the Thames, quarried by the convicts at Dartmoor prison, the imaginations, standing for austere honesty, patience and bravery in the face of danger. Basil Thomson, head of the C. I. D. (Criminal Investigation Department) of the Administrative branch of the Yard from 1913 to 1921, has written of the British war on crime in his book "The Story of Scotland Yard". Thomson carried the Yard to new fame. He faced the problems of war time espionage and violence; he saw and overcame England's first kidnapping; he was the first methods of crime arise and defeated and defied the underworld then. He left the yard with the high favor of the government by the late Ramsay Wallace), its Flying Squad and many fascinating stories of the man who built it. The him a place in literature. Thomson tells with against criminal cunning, brave daring and with humor in every novel. The legend of the romantic criminal, from Robbin Hood to Professor Moriarty, is forever discounted by the appearance of new heroes and villains. Thomson's "If you were murdered in your bed (which God forbid) and found in bowlers and neatly rolled umbrellas were almost sure to catch your eye.

The traditions of the English are examined, not with the eye of reverence for historical significance, but with the eye of a continental spy. Fabien de Monbrison, Odette Keun, a Frenchwoman, comes upon the English like a foreign visitor from world, with eye wide and ears listening intently. Madame Keun came to the amazing conclusion that "having known English people out of England all my life, I discovered only in England that they are English even when they think I had thought". Here were people, Mrs. Tilly, Bailey, the ordinary average Englishman, is I firmly believe, the most naturally good-hearted, the most unaffected human son on this planet." Much of the book is devoted to the people of London, for here Odette Keun found, to the debonnaire in the London Times says of her book "Madame Keun has discovered the English. It is to be hoped that a very few number will ever discover Madame Keun!"

With the rapidly growing popularity for radio-fans, manufacturers of slippers will welcome the appearance of Radio-Slippers. Illustrations give handsome description of the Radio-Scuff. Mr. Reginald-Smith has written such a book in "Cars and Cars of Country Racing". He begins with general history of the sport, continues to racing rules, and concludes with a survey of racing at the start and during the race, under different conditions of wind and obstruction. Examples and diagrams are used clarify the text.

HARD TO BELIEVE ATTEMPT IS MADE ON KING'S LIFE

Attitude Expressed by Well Known London Newspaperman

REJOICE IN ESCAPE

Britons Ashamed and Shocked Because Attempt Made

London, July 18.—(AP) — The public found it difficult to believe a real attempt had been made to take the King's life.

This attitude was expressed by Ralph Mitchell a well known London newspaperman, as eyewitness of the incident on Constitution Hill.

"The feeling of the British citizen toward the attempt on the King's life," said Mitchell, "still is one of incredulity.

"Everywhere today I heard the remark in the crowds, among public men, and in Fleet Street: 'Surely he didn't really mean to kill the King.'

"Friends, who knew I was an eyewitness of the whole incident said to me a dozen times today: 'But you don't mean to say he really took aim? He must have just thrown the weapon on the roadway.'

"Another remark one hears everywhere today is 'surely the man must be mad; some poor fellow out of his senses—no sane man would do such a thing.'"

Mitchell also noted differing reactions on the part of bystanders.

"Admiration for the cool manner in which the King came through the ordeal," Mitchell continued, "was expressed on all sides.

'He's got guts,' I heard a bus driver say.

"But behind all these sentiments was the anxious feeling that every Briton was shocked and ashamed, that even the shadow of an attempt should have been on the life of the Sovereign.

"I heard a good many criticisms of the police. A man prominent in public affairs said: 'Such a thing ought never have been allowed to happen. On other occasions during Royal processions this type of man has been successfully kept off by the police. I consider it a grave blunder that he was allowed to be present at all.' "

Glorious Victory of Vimy to be Commemorated When King Edward Unveils Memorial

It was on Easter Monday in the year 1917 that the tattered Canadian flag floated in spirit if not really) from atop Vimy Ridge. Facing a front almost is impregnable as had been thought, it is to the Dominion's Canadian flags will fly again atop Vimy when King Edward unveils for Canada the magnificent memorial constructed to preserve forever the great victory. A pilgrimage from Canada will take 6,000 veterans back to "no-man's-land" and families placed where life had little meaning, where comrades laughed one minute, died the next. They will see the solid German trenches, kept intact since the war; they will visit shell holes where they left dead companions; they will see the ingenuity's structure dedicated their heroism. The Vimy Memorial will be unveiled July 26; it has taken 11 years and $1,250,000 to build; the work of Walter Allward, Canadian sculptor, it is the largest memorial in France or Belgium. The two flat pillars, and one of the carved figures are shown in the inset.

130 CANDIDATES NOMINATED FOR FIFTY-FIVE SEATS

Manitoba Campaign Enters Stretch Drive, Voting on July 27

ONE ACCLAMATION

Many Sportsmen Have Entered The Contest in West

Winnipeg, July 18—(CP)—In the sweltering heat of mid-summer, Manitoba's election campaign swung into the stretch drive today.

With one acclamation accorded a government candidate, 130 candidates were named for the other 53 seats to be decided in the legislature of 55 members, when the electors go to the polls July 27. Voting has been deferred in two constituencies.

S. S. Garson, Liberal-Progressive member of the last legislature, was the only candidate nominated in Fairford constituency when official nominations were made yesterday. A contest with a Social Credit candidate had been expected.

Only the Liberal-Progressive party under Premier John Bracken and the Conservative party under Errick F. Willis named sufficient candidates to gain a majority in the next legislature.

The Liberal-Progressive named 47 candidates and the Conservatives 37. The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation nominated 19 candidates and the Manitoba Social Credit League 30. There were seven others nominated also.

Sportsmen watched the race in Portage la Prairie in which former premiers of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association ended a straight fight. E. A. Oliver, president in 1934-35 was chosen Liberal-Progressive candidate against the sitting member, W. R. Desmoth, Conservative, who headed the C.A.H.A. in 1935-36.

In Sport Limelight

Many of the candidates held the limelight in sport. Mr. Willis, seeking election in Dekorah, was a member of Canada's 1932 curling rink at the Lake Placid, N.Y. winter Olympics. Hon. D. L. Campbell, Minister of Public Works and a candidate in Morris, is a former president of the Manitoba Curling Association.

Winnipeg's campaign was enlivened by the entrance of L. St. George Stubbs, former County Court judge as an Independent candidate. Mr. Stubbs was removed from the bench three years ago. Also a candidate in Winnipeg is Hon. W. J. Major, attorney-General, nominated in Mr. Stubbs' removal.

Mr. Stubbs was removed from the Manitoba County Court Bench after a commission had investigated charges of judicial misbehaviour concerning his actions in 1929 and 1930 when he was a Manitoba Surrogate Court Justice.

Twenty-one candidates were named for the Manitoba capital. 12 seats which will be decided under the new proportional representation system of voting. Liberal-Progressives and Conservatives each named five. C.C.F. nominated six and Social Credit three. James Litterick, a Communist, and Mr. Stubbs were the other two.

Explosion and Fire Destroy House

Welland, Ont., July 17 (CP) — R. D. Jordan of the Ontario Fire Marshal's department, and Sergt. Charles Alderson of city police, conducted an inquiry into an explosion and fire that destroyed the large frame residence of Stephen Morabito early today.

Morabito, his wife and their 7 children, were not at home when a blast ripped out one side of the house and sent the verandah flying into the street. The house instantly became a mass of flames and firemen were forced to direct their attention to saving adjoining property. Only loitering walls remain, the roof having caved in.

The blast shook nearby residences and cracked many windows. Loss was estimated in excess of $5,000. Whereabouts of the Morabito family was not known.

INFORMATION FROM VARIOUS POINTS

Budapest, Hungary; Leipzig, Germany—sealed with foreign looking stamps, sealing wax and bits of colorful ribbons. These are only a few of the addresses from which samples of mail come in one day to the local Chamber of Commerce. The majority of the mail comes from Europe, where alert publicity men are overlooking no chance to attract tourist trade to their boundaries. Not all the mail, however, is received from abroad. Letters from throughout Ontario and Canada come other circulars, letters and folders pointing to the various advantages offered by other districts. A clearing house for information regarding trips, tours, voyages and even industrial conditions here and elsewhere, the local Chamber daily fills the scores of queries received from visitors, who make the office their port of call.

STYLES CHANGING

A census of 24 dancers working with Fred Astaire in the film, "Swing Time" disclosed today that not one has dyed hair. They made up without false eyelashes or rouge. Only six admitted using lipstick. Powder for shiny noses is the only cosmetic that has lasted.

"They've got to life us as we really are nowadays," the girls chorused.

SECOND BAKESHOP IN 3 WEEKS BURNS

Ontario Fire Marshal to Investigate Fire At Bethany

Bethany, Ont., July 17—(CP)—Fire early today destroyed the second bakeshop in the past three weeks in this village.

On June 24, Nicholsdale Bakery was burned and today Browns Bakery was destroyed. Residents are of the opinion that both fires are the work of the same man as they started under similar circumstances.

In each case the engine had been out for more than 12 hours.

In the Brown Bakery fire the surrounding buildings were threatened but the villagers formed a bucket brigade and after hours of fighting they were able to save them. Several wells in the village were pumped dry as the men sought to keep the roofs and sides of nearby buildings soaked with water.

A request is being sent the Ontario Fire Marshalls to send an investigator. The extent of the loss has not been determined.

130 CANDIDATES NOMINATED FOR FIFTY-FIVE SEATS

Manitoba Campaign Enters Stretch Drive, Voting on July 27

ONE ACCLAMATION

Many Sportsmen Have Entered The Contest in West

Winnipeg, July 18—(CP)—In the sweltering heat of mid-summer, Manitoba's election campaign swung into the stretch drive today.

With one acclamation accorded a government candidate, 130 candidates were named for the other 53 seats to be decided in the legislature of 55 members, when the electors go to the polls July 27. Voting has been deferred in two constituencies.

S. S. Garson, Liberal-Progressive member of the last legislature, was the only candidate nominated in Fairford constituency when official nominations were made yesterday. A contest with a Social Credit candidate had been expected.

Only the Liberal-Progressive party under Premier John Bracken and the Conservative party under Errick F. Willis named sufficient candidates to gain a majority in the next legislature.

The Liberal-Progressive named 47 candidates and the Conservatives 37. The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation nominated 19 candidates and the Manitoba Social Credit League 30. There were seven others nominated also.

Sportsmen watched the race in Portage la Prairie in which former premiers of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association ended a straight fight. E. A. Oliver, president in 1934-35 was chosen Liberal-Progressive candidate against the sitting member, W. R. Desmoth, Conservative, who headed the C.A.H.A. in 1935-36.

In Sport Limelight

Many of the candidates held the limelight in sport. Mr. Willis, seeking election in Dekorah, was a member of Canada's 1932 curling rink at the Lake Placid, N.Y. winter Olympics. Hon. D. L. Campbell, Minister of Public Works and a candidate in Morris, is a former president of the Manitoba Curling Association.

Winnipeg's campaign was enlivened by the entrance of L. St. George Stubbs, former County Court judge as an Independent candidate. Mr. Stubbs was removed from the bench three years ago. Also a candidate in Winnipeg is Hon. W. J. Major, attorney-General, nominated in Mr. Stubbs' removal.

BISONS RALLY TO WIN FROM BEARS IN NINTH FRAME

Buffalo Gains Half Game When Rochester Splits Twin Bill

TORONTO WINS TWO

Si Johnson Hurls Both Games For Winning Team

The three way battle that has developed in the International League since the Newark Bears started north and got themselves knocked out of the lead has turned into quite a profitable affair for the club owners. After drawing banner crowds in their series at Rochester, the Bears moved on to Buffalo, lost another game but had a hand in drawing 18,000 fans into the Bisons' park last night.

A pair of scintilating rallies in the closing innings enabled the Bisons to pull out a 7 to 6 triumph over Newark and thereby increase their second place margin to three full games while Rochester, the defeat against Rochester's league leaders to 3½ games. The Red Wings annexed only an even break with Baltimore in the afternoon opening the first game 12-4 but dropping the second 5-0.

Steve Sundra, Newark flinger, nearly wrecked the Buffalo winning streak when he bolted home with two aboard in the first half of the ninth, but the Bisons rallied behind him for three runs in the last half to make it eight straight and give Carl Fischer his eighth consecutive mound triumph. Marvin Olson, who was batting in "relief" in that honor, sent the Bisons into the lead for the first time in the game when he hit for the circuit, his fourth blow of the game.

Rochester hammered three flingers for 14 hits in the first game to win easily but Bert Haas early lead in the second and lost out in the eighth when Bisons hit for six singles. Ab Wright home after the Orioles had tied it up in the seventh.

The Toronto Maple Leafs banded the cellar dwelling Syracuse Chiefs their twelfth and thirteenth defeats in fourteen games when Si Johnson pitched them to victory in both ends of a night double-header, 4-1 and 3-2. After hurling five-hit ball in the opener, Johnson came back to save the afternoon by pitching no-hit ball for the last 7⅓ innings.

The Albany Senators totted the hits around, smashing out seven runs in the seventh and another four in the eighth to turn back the Montreal Royals 8 to 5. Albany batters had a four-run inning and scored all but one of their 8 tallies in the last three frames.

PLAYOFFS NEEDED FOR ONTARIO OPEN

Borthwick And Cumming Tie With 144 Strokes Each

Toronto, July 18 (CP)—Dick Borthwick, Toronto Oakdale, and Lon Cumming, Toronto Golf club, will battle over an 18-hole route at Suburban Long Branch for the Ontario Open Golf Championship this afternoon.

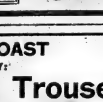
Cumming stroked steadily yesterday to go one over par on each of the 18-hole tests for a total of 144 of 72-72—144.

Borthwick started shakily to take 74 in the first half of the trip, but played better laterly to get a sub-par rating of 72 on the last 18.

One stroke behind the leaders in yesterday's play were Bill Kerr, Toronto Hunt Club pro., and Archie Grimmett, amateur star from Weston. Kerr turned in a brilliant 69 on the 18-holes after going out in 76. Grimmett had 73-73—146.



Two strokes back of the leaders came Jack Nash, London Hunt, and Willie Lawrie, Toronto Lambton. Nash set the pace with Grimmett in the first nine holes with 37, but took a 75 in the final round to 74. Lawrie carded 72-74—146.

Joe Thompson, Barrhaven, surprised everybody by playing the round although he had five stitches in his hand, the result of an automobile accident the day before. With his hand troubling him throughout, he took a 76-76—152.

Am 18 on the par five third hole proved his undoing. Sandy Scott, Ottawa Canadian amateur champion, was well down the list with 76-77—153.

Yanks Equal Home Run Record For One Inning, Rolfe, Gehrig And Dickey Being the Batsmen

Giants Also Equal a Record by Hitting Triples in One Frame

BOTTOMLEY TO QUIT

Stu Martin of Cards Taken to Hospital With Indigestion

While the relative slugging merits of the 1927 Yankees and the current edition of baseball's champions is a choice potato for argument, no one can deny that the present pounding outfit comes close to being just as great a crew of record wreckers as the previous collection.

In a day that saw headline developments on nearly every big league diamond, the 1936 homicidal squad equalled an American League home run record and set an assortment of other marks yesterday with 9-4 clouting conquest over the Tigers, which sent the world's champions down to fourth place in the American League.

At the same time, in other sectors of the big league front, the New York Giants were doing some record equalling, the St. Louis Browns in particular and the baseball "Gashouse Gang" in general, with "Sunny Jim" Bottomley plans to retire in a day dawn; Pinchhit Stu Martin of the Cardinals and veteran Al Simmons of the Tigers getting sick with stomach ailments; Dizzy Dean, with only 24 hours rest from his last pitching assignment said set, recovered from the injury that laid him low a year ago, and beat the Cardinals from their third straight defeat, and the gold-plated Boston Red Sox moved into third place in the American League.

Red Ruffing, Gehrig and Bill Dickey poled out homers in the third inning of the Yanks' rampage to tie and equal the league record for homers in one inning set by the Senators in 1902 and equalled several times since. The performance brought the Yanks' total homers for the season to over 100, making them the first club in the big leagues to turn that trick twelve times in a row—from 1926 through 1936—and fifteen times in their career.

Four Bolt Three-baggers.

The Giants' chose Forbes Field in Pittsburgh for their record stunt. In the first inning, Joe Moore, Mel Ott, Hank Leiber and Ed Mayo belted three-baggers against the Pirates to deadlock the National League mark for triples in one frame. The Giants held their early lead and defeated the Pirates 7-6 as Carl Hubbell showed top-flight pitching for the first time in a month and let the Bucs down with five hits.

Bottomley, who has a strained back and $100,000, chose Boston to make his announcement that he would retire at the former and live on the latter after quitting the game at the end of the Browns' current road trip. His announcement ending a 16-year first-batting career came as the Browns were dropping a 2-1 decision to the Red Sox on Johnny Peacock's two-run single with the bases loaded in the ninth.

Stu Martin, sensational Cardinal rookie, went to a hospital with acute indigestion and Manager Frankie Frisch went to second base. Things don't work out so well as the Phillies threatened to make it three straight over the Ole House gang until "old Diz" Dean stopped them cold for the last three innings and Rookie Johnny Mize hit a homer in the eighth to give the Cards a 5-3 win.

The Dodgers gave Van Mungo perfect fielding and batting support, and their right-hand ace let the Reds down with seven hits for a 5-3 Brooklyn victory. The Bees, meanwhile, finally found in Curt Davis a Chic Cub pitcher who could win, and proceeded to belt out a 5-1 decision, with Wally Berger's homer the big factor.

Cleveland Indians chalked up their seventh straight victory, taking over the Athletics 5-1 behind Monty Galehouse's tight pitching, while the clubbing White Sox swept their series with the Senators, winding up with an 18-hit, 16-5 triumph.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Carl Hubbell, Giants—Limited Phillies to five hits for 6-0 win.

Van Mungo, Dodgers—Let Reds down with seven hits for 5-3 victory.

Denny Galehouse, Indians—Held Athletics to six hits.

AWARDS MADE BY MAYOR HILL

Yesterday morning saw the conclusion of the free swimming instruction campaign for boys in the city and district which has been in progress for the past week and a half. Following seven periods of instruction under the watchful supervision of Messrs. Howard Carr, Arthur Martin and the physical director of the Association, the boys came back on Friday morning to take their tests. The results of the latter were highly gratifying to the sponsors of the campaign with over fifty percent being able to pass the initial test which was to swim across the pool a distance of twenty feet. Twenty-five members of the class demonstrated in no uncertain manner their ability to cover this distance while another eight or ten members of the class were almost able to make the grade, many of these latter swimming from half to three quarters of the way across. All the boys who succeeded in the first test qualified for the Association's Bronze Swimming award.

A second test was held in which the candidates were required to swim a minimum distance of fifty feet in order to qualify for the Y.M.C.A. Aquatic Proficiency Certificate, Seventeen members of the group succeeded in passing this test and in nearly every instance they swam from fifteen to twenty feet over the minimum requirement.

Long before the hour of swimming at which time the boys were asked to come to the Y in order to receive their awards, all were assembled and Mayor Hill made the presentation gand upon a group of eager and expectant faces. In making the presentation His Worship addressed a few words of congratulation to the boys for the success they had attained during the period of instruction and commended to the Association for the good work done in providing such competent free instruction available to the boys along with the facilities of the Association. CURRENT SPORT

"Jo Jo" Grabauld, star centre-ice hockey player of the Brockville Maroonies last season, will join the annual migration of Canadian hockeyists to England, an Ottawa press dispatch announced yesterday. "Jo Jo" will play for the Wembley Lions, last year known as the Wembley Canadians, coached by Clint Benedict, former Montreal goalie in the NHL. Grabauld leaves for the "old sod" in September.

Today the local senior club is slated to appear in Petersboro while the Picton and the Cherries battle it out in Oshawa. If the Oshawa squad trim Kingston and the Peterboro crew down the locals Skinner Bowman's gang will move into second place in the league standings, which wouldn't surprise us in the least. On Saturday next the local senior club will engage in an exhibition game versus the local Kiwanis nine at the Y.M.C.A. grounds. A collection will be taken up to assist the Kiwanis Club in the purchase of balls, bats and other equipment. Coach Harold's little lads are expecting a big attendance and are also getting splendidly versed from South Hastings league opposition and competition of such a game should prove entertaining.

The burning question of the hour around the Bay of Quinte following baseball is: "why didn't the executive of the local O.B.A. entry contract the services of Dave Keegan, whiskered nine, to play a night game in Belleville as he was last year done in Peterboro and Kingston?" We think that such a game had been executive of the local senior club received considerable thought but the House of David management regarding such a game as was played by Belleville's baseball fans when the locals would have realized a handsome gate. Such a game would appeal, and there is no doubt but that the receipts would be a few extra "green-backs" just now.

—Systematic programs including baseball and softball for bantams, juveniles, juniors and seniors as well as softball for girls along with tennis, handicraft and swimming are a few of the activities being arranged at the town hall playgrounds by Supervisor Geo. Laughlin. These games will be operated under the auspices of Belleville Inferno and the games being allotted certain hours on separate days. We have plenty of teams entered at the East Belleville playground and we look forward to a shortage of teams and players at the West Belleville playground. Children residing on the College Hill and vicinity should register at once at the office on the West Belleville playgrounds. Supervisor Laughlin is residing on the College Hill and vicinity should register at once at the office on the West Belleville playgrounds. Supervisor Laughlin is residing on the children from that section of the city. He is going to give the youngsters a real outing and we look forward to a big attendance at the facilities at the West Belleville which should be ideal for Mr. Laughlin's aims to us today.

Knowing the spirit of the College Hill gang we can say to Mr. Laughlin "come on you fellows from the College Hill" and send your kiddies to the playgrounds where they are afforded supervised recreation. Let's put these local playgrounds over with a bang.

At the East Belleville playgrounds the children are taking full advantage of the facilities afforded them and from early morning until sundown the joyous shouts of kiddies realizing good clean wholesome fun and recreation can be heard. All that is needed to make the project a success for the future is a better turnout of children at the West Belleville grounds.

The golfers from the Bay of Quinte Country Club journeyed to Picton on Wednesday for a friendly match with the Prince Edward County golfers, who won the day's honors by the score of 31 to 19.

Regarding the episode following the 7 to 5 defeat of the Pirates at the hands of the Cherries on Wednesday when Umpire Al Tyson was escorted from the field, the Kingston paper Whig-Standard the following to relate, much of which we can readily understand. In part he says: "But the biggest fun the visitors had was Umpire Al Tyson. We've seen some umpires but we've seen officials bowled out of the game before, the second work of Umpire Tyson last evening had them all stopped. He didn't seem to have any idea at what a strike was at times and at other times he was all over the place. The way it was his calling of a ball on a Belleville man was the last straw for the plate in the eighth that gave Kingston the game. Tyson had waved the way for the four runs that won the game for the visitors. Manager Frank Ryan of the Bays has been struck out on the pitch, but he's never had the call on his person in the entire Fair Grounds that he didn't think so. As a matter of fact it got so bad that after the game two policemen had to escort Tyson from the playing field while a crowd of fans handed him a terrific panning."

Two ties for first and fourth place were tossed at the conclusion of the regular schedule of the Belleville Industrial Softball League two teams being tied for first and two teams for fourth position. As a result of the tie arrangements the loop could qualify for play-off games and Manager Cecil Reeves ordered play-offs to determine the respective teams that would compete in the league play-offs. The Clares and the Collegiate Cubs will battle in the play-offs for fourth position and will battle it out in a two game total point series on Monday night, the winner advancing to the league semi-finals. Last night the Belmonts and the Belleville Sargent played a six-all tie in what was to have been a sudden death game to determine the league champion to be awarded first position, the loser dropping into second place. The Belmonts scored in the first inning. As we verdict was arrived at last night the Belleville Y's "Lockmakers" will tangle again on Monday night in a sudden death game.

Shipboard Training For Olympic Team Of Light Variety

By ELMER DUDMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

On the way to The Olympics Aboard the S.S. Duchess of Bedford, July 18 (CP)—Shipboard training for the Olympic Games started today for more than 100 members of the Berlin-bound Canadian band and Sammy Mannis' overworked general manager of the expedition, enjoyed his first rest in more than a week.

Training aboard the Duchess of Bedford will be limited for the next five days to light muscle-loosening exercises, track men are limited mildly up and down the decks, practising darts, harness and wrestlers, however, became positively rough in the gymnasium and attracted most attention among the non-athletic passengers.

Runners worked out in odd corners of the available space but 220 sprinters had to look at water 20 around them without having a swim. The ship is without a pool.

The swimming team is one of the youngest ever sent abroad by this country. Joan Langdon of Vancouver, breast stroke star, is 12 years old and the baby of the entire squad. George Athans, Vancouver diver, is 14.

Tee Yeong for Trip

Sixteen year old Morden Trump of Victoria, winner of the breast stroke events at the Canadian trials in Montreal, was slated to go to Berlin, but her parents decided she was too young to make the trip. So 13 year old Joan will look after the breast stroke business.

Irene Pirie Milton of Toronto, heads the swimming 'n' aquatic crew. The Toronto girl, now married to Fred Milton, holder British swimming title, is going to her third Olympiad. Only other three Olympic competitors in the party are Fitz Edwards, 800 metre runner, and Maurice Bouton, Montreal, free style swimmer.

Without sleep since he reached Montreal early last week for the swimming, wrestling, track and boxing trials, Mannis is now 10 pounds underweight.

"Boy, this is the life," sighed the genial manager as he sank into a deck chair and stretched his feet out.

NO DECISION IN EXTRA INNINGS

Belmonts And Belleville-Sargent Play a 6-6 Draw

Battling two extra innings to determine which team should be awarded first place in the local Industrial Softball league play-downs, the Belleville-Sargent and Belmont Restaurant squads played a 6 to 6 tie at the Coleman Flats last evening. The clubs will resume hostilities on the same diamond next Tuesday evening in a sudden-death game for the mythical leadership of the Industrial loop previous to the final league play-offs.

The Belleville-Sargent "lockmakers" introduced their dark-horse mound-man, R. Bateman of Springbrook, whose deliveries proved no mystery to the Barriage-led Belmonts, however. They welcomed Bateman's deliveries for ten hits and a total of six runs in the first four innings, After Bateman settled down, however, he blanked the Belmonts for the remaining frames. Frank O'Neill, with a homer and a double, led the Belmont attack while St. Louis, Barriage and Townsend cuffed the ball for extra base hits.

Harold Dracup ascended the mound for the Belmonts and constituted splendidly until the seventh and last frame, when the "lockmakers" staged a belated rally to score four runs and tie the score at six all, no score being registered by either team in the two extra frames played. McMartin opened the rally for the four base clout for the "lockmakers" and was aided another single by his hitting prowess, Hughes and Bushell, were the other members of the Belleville-Sargent nine to hit a profitable number. Each team registered ten hits, the winners six six runs in a tie game.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"The Princess Comes Across"

Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray have done it again.

The pair proved themselves ideal screen sweethearts in "Hands Across the Table" in "The Princess Comes Across," which opens a two days' engagement at the Belle today, they have shown that the success of their first teaming was not accidental.

It is not easy to explain, either. Neither Miss Lombard nor Fred MacMurray will fit easily into any neat categories of sweetheart types. If you call Fred "handsome" you do not describe him justly. He's a good egg. If you call Miss Lombard "glamorous" you are only telling half the story. She's a good egg, too.

Both, somehow, are like the people you know and enjoy. You enjoy them because they are people and because they seem to enjoy themselves.

In "The Princess Comes Across" the two are placed in a story perfectly suited for their type of romance. Miss Lombard is a beautiful American girl, posing as a Swedish princess in order to gain a film contract. MacMurray is an accordion-playing, singing band leader. The story, from start to finish is set aboard a transatlantic super-liner.

They fall in love as the picture opens, where there is conflict as to which shall occupy the ship's suite of honor. Before the liner has docked at New York, the romantic tale has been punctuated by two murders, much snooping by five international detectives, and an exposé of the real identity of the "princess."

The story has suspense, music, laughs and romance. It has Alison Skipworth outdoing herself, Ben Blue's adventure star, as enlisted on the side of the gallant red-coated police of Canada in "O'Malley of the Mounted," new Fox drama which shares honors today and on Monday with the above feature, "The Princess Comes Across" on a double feature program.

Playing the title role in this tingling adventure story, adapted from the original by William S. Hart, O'Brien is a "mounted" on the 10 man hunt, who returns with his man but loses his heart to a pretty girl.

On the basis of this feat, O'Brien wins the friendship of the gang leader. With daring and resourcefulness he works himself into the confidence of the bandits until everything is prepared for their capture.

Then O'Brien is trapped. But Irene Ware, who has fallen in love with him, carries the message that enables the "Mounties" to catch the bandits red-handed in a holdup and a smashing dramatic climax paves the way for a romantic close.

The late Belle News Pictures will also be presented at each performance today and Monday at the Belle in addition to the excellent feature presentations. Complete change of program starts daily at 2.30, 7.15 and 8.30 p.m.

CAPITOL

"Come Out of the Pantry"

Members of the peerage do all sorts of queer things for a living nowadays. Take the case of Jack Days when a guinea-pig director-producer is the only method by which a self-respecting peer could turn an honest penny. Jack Days will do everything from selling hats to passing buns. So far they have not succeeded very far into the film business, but even that will come.

These great thoughts are prompted by Jack Buchanan's new picture "Come Out of the Pantry," coming Monday to the Capitol, in which he plays Jack Days, a peer, who finding himself in New York without a dime (his bank has bust) is obliged to take a job as footman to Mr. Reginald Fitch Avenue business man.

What, you may think, is carrying this democratic business a bit too far. But there it is and you'll have to put up with it. At any rate, Jack gets plenty of fun out of the situation as well as the said Reginald's daughters, pretty, and presumably wealthy, also.

The scene where Jack Buchanan waits on his employer's guests at a small dinner party and proposes to the pretty niece while serving the hors d'oeuvres is one of the funniest things the screen has seen for a long time.

"Come Out of the Pantry," by the way, is not a "musical" though it contains the first three musical numbers. It is a straight farcical comedy, based on the work of the American authoress, Alice Duer Miller.

Besides Jack Buchanan the cast of "Come Out of the Pantry" includes Fay Wray as the pretty niece, Ronald Squire, Olive Blakeney, Fred Emney.

Hand in hand with the title of this picture is another piece of beautiful Hostess Overware. Free, matinee and evening. Monday and Tuesday "Come Out of the Pantry" with Hostess Overware.

Two feature films are his on the same bill, Zane Grey's "Arizona Raiders" and the revival showing of the hilarious torrid musical "In Calente."

Developing a Child's Co-operative Instinct

It is Best Accomplished Through Habit and by Example of Parent, Says Writer

By LIRA ORENSLIE

PATIENCE SAID that when he was a little boy nobody helped him with his lessons. He went on at length to tell about all the things he had to do as a child without help or even an encouraging word from anyone.

Patience's mother was much too soft with the children; fathers usually do. If one of the children does something, why should mother not help? Is it laziness or why should he be asked to bestir himself? (Father had the whole house in an uproar because one of his was mislaid, but we'll let that pass.)

He upheld his principles, as all fathers should, and refused to help the children with their homework or do their errands. It made the children responsible, self-reliant and independent, like father, eh? Quite.

Lazy Bench

Yet father wasn't entirely satisfied, it seems. He complained because the boys were often content to help and not always too willing. Now what do you think of that?

Perhaps you have noticed lazy young people sitting about, while mother or father scuttle about with the dishes or the lawn mower. Perhaps you have noticed how refreshing the exceptional son or daughter who arises unbidden without being asked to assist or to wash or dry dishes. Is this child essentially more ...ly ...illish than the others? Or is it all in the training?

Adolescents who do not do their share of the dirty work are spoiled. That certainly is the general assumption. Yet father refused to help the children, because children who help around the house are spoiled, and spoiled. Yet how can you expect a child to help, willingly, if he is not helped in turn; to develop the spirit of co-operation if none has been shown toward him?

Yet children are naturally co-operative. They like to help, it makes them feel important. They like to be helped, not just because they are little, but because they prefer to do something with someone that he can do it alone; most of us do.

But mother does not always welcome Jimmie's and Janie's offer to help, they being less skilful and, so kindly, but a little impatiently, she shoos the children away and they are hurt, discouraged and resentful. Mother's obvious scorn of their abilities is painful, but being normal children they adjust themselves and from generation later in scraping dull duties. Soon they are no longer offer to help later do not want to help.

Children should not be helped too much with their lessons, or with their pets or problems. Father was right on that point. Even a six-year-old must not learn to rely too much on other people. Certainly no child should be helped unless help is asked for in return.

But in order to develop a child's co-operative instinct, he must be given some job to help and parents should set up a mechanism for co-operation with him sometimes.

SHORT MEETING OF COUNCIL HELD

At a special meeting of the City Council held last evening, it was recommended by the Property Committee that Norman Montgomery, of this city, be appointed agent-for city property rentals at 2½ per cent. commission. A commission of 5 per cent. will be retained on all city property.

It was recommended that men required for work service in the Public Works Department from this date be taken entirely from the lists of those receiving relief, unless the latter is insufficient in number.

The Belleville Municipal Band was authorized to hold a tag day at a date to be subsequently named. All proceeds derived from the forthcoming International Municipal road race to be held in Belleville on Labour Day will also be given to the assistance of the band, it was announced today.

FIRE CHIEF LYNCH SHOWS FORESIGHT

Showing admirable foresight in attempting to remove fire hazards in the form of dry grass, Fire Chief William Lynch has taken the direction to the post in several parts of the city, which have been mentioned through the presence of dry grasses.

Relief men working under the supervision of experienced city firemen have removed by controlled blazes dangerous patches of grass on fields at the corner of Sinclair and Yeomans Streets, the vicinity of Albert College and Mary and Dundas Streets.

Chief Lynch's firemen aided by city workers will remove the dangerous growths on Coleman's Flats on Monday.

SAILORS' COURAGE SAVES PASSENGERS

Moving stories of terror, and of high courage aboard the Chesapeake Bay excursion steamer, State of Virginia, that was rammed by the steel freighter Golden Harvest, were told after 363 passengers, including Governor Harry W. Nice of Maryland, were safely ashore at Baltimore. There were no serious casualties, although Governor Nice suffered a bruised leg, and other passengers were scratched or suffered minor injuries in the pandemonium that reigned on the excursion ship for a few minutes after the crash. All the passengers in acclaiming the courage of him displayed by the crew of two ships, and of Gov. Nice, refused to leave the ship until all other passengers were removed. SEALED FOR OVER YEAR DEATH CITY OF QUETTA RE-OPENED

Quetta, scaled city of death in India, has at last been opened. Photo shows workmen removing debris of the great earthquake of May, 1935, traces of which have not yet been obliterated. All structures on both sides of roads and lanes collapsed, as shown in this picture.

Twenty years ago there were dims entwined for France. Their tears and uniforms as young Canadian men were grim one and many never returned—many more were carried home. To-day another contingent of 6,000 Canadians returns to France on a pilgrimage to Vimy, where Canada displayed to the world the heroism of her sons 19 years ago. This time there was song and laughter and joy as the contingent sailed away. From every city they come, these veterans of Vimy (nearly all of them were there); as they left they sang old war songs, told army jokes that were hoary 20 years ago. This time, many did not leave their wives and sweethearts behind them, to Vimy they will go, there on July 26, to see King Edward unveil the magnificent memorial atop the ridge, built by Canada to commemorate that unforgettable victory. In the layout ABOVE are shown scenes of the joyous leave-taking as veterans in Toronto (TOP) and Vancouver (BELOW) embarked on their second "invasion" of France.

The Missing Man

by

Mary R. P. Hatch

"Still, there is some vulnerable place in his soul. There is in every one, I think. To doubt it would be to doubt the good Father. Would He, do you think, allow any of His creatures to be so depraved that they could not be redeemed from sin? What man cared for the twin brother of my husband, and he must have good in his nature still; for his parents were good people, and wicked environment cannot quite change, quite pervert, a noble nature, can it?"

"Perhaps not. Still you cannot conceive of the difference between good bringing up and the reverse. Before I came here I was engaged in missionary work that brought me into contact with the most degraded people. They actually had no conception of goodness, no belief in a better life. If people seemed good they deemed it hypocrisy. They would laugh to scorn any appeals to conscience, for they literally seemed to have none. Such people deserve the profoundest pity."

"But he is not like that. He is sensitive; he is capable of affection: my children love him, and he appears to love them. He has noble impulses. Such a man can be appealed to. When you consider that he was stolen by wicked people as, of course, they must have been, and subjected to evil teaching; when you consider that he became engaged in criminal acts that brought him into antagonistic relations to the public laws, that he might have been driven here, an refugee,—you may be able to conceive that were an outlaw, almost, he could not accept it."

"Mrs. Hamilton, you are the one to make the appeal."

"Oh, I cannot. There is a reserve between us that no words of mine can bridge. When in his presence I forget everything but that he has been restored to me, that I am alone at times I can think of him as unfortunate and to be pitied."

"I will talk with him, then, for you, and do what I can," said the minister.

"Oh, thank you, thank you!" she said, gratefully. "I sometimes think there was never so unhappy a woman as I. Torn from my husband, and forbidden to mourn, because the belief is general that he is my husband. And to be called unfaithful—I, the most faithful of wives!"

"It is indeed hard," said the minister. "Whether right or wrong in your belief, I know your heart is true."

"Your faith in me is a great comfort," she said, lifting her eyes earnestly to his face. "You will see him and do what you can?"

"Yes, I will see him and do what I can."

And then Mrs. Hamilton left the study, and the minister threw his sermon to one side and bent his head in deep thought.

Could he touch this man, if he were the impostor Mrs. Hamilton conceived him to be? Could he do it? Could any one? He doubted it. Still, he would try. It was not late: barely nine o'clock. He would go that very night.

Changing his dressing-gown for a coat, and making some other trifling alterations in his dress, he set out on his errand, and soon reached the Hamilton residence. He rang the bell and was admitted to the hall, which held a few boxes and a trunk. Mr. Carter and Mr. Hamilton came in great haste, and the former said, as he stepped over a box:

"Vane is going to the hotel, for he will not keep Constance from her home any longer. He is a noble fellow, Mr. Hammerty."

The minister felt a chill creep over his resolution, but only for a moment. Whether she was right or not he would keep his promise to Mrs. Hamilton, and as soon as Mr. Carter left the room, arranging himself on account of some duty, Mr. Hammerty broached his errand.

"I do not say, Mr. Hamilton, that you are not what you seem, but I came simply at the request of Mrs. Hamilton, who really believes that you are not her husband. It is her solemn conviction, and it is cruelly unjust to rank her with many unfaithful wives, some of whom should make pretences such as have been ascribed to her. You surely, do not think her capable of such baseness?"

"No, I think she is sincere in her belief. She is a noble woman, incapable of such an act. It was not my wish to have her name dragged before the public as it was, but one cannot do as he would at such times."

"Mrs. Hamilton is convinced that you are her husband's brother, that you have been led almost without volition on your own to wicked courses which are at variance with your real nature. She thinks with different environments, you would have been a different man."

"What else does she say?" asked Mr. Hamilton, as the minister paused.

"She wished me to appeal to you to give her back her baptismal name, is very miserable; very much changed from the happy woman I first met from the happy home of Grovedale. Now when I come to Grovedale. She is a rare woman: one among a thousand."

"I'm sure right. She is one among a thousand. Would you give up such a woman?"

"I?" The minister's hot face flushed with emotion.

"Your question is a strange one, from you to me. If she is torn my wife, nothing should drag her from me. But if she were not my wife, no boys, nor her beauty, should allure me. Your question has made me doubt, and I will open my heart to you, as I never have to mortal before. I loved that woman profoundly. I loved her as I never shall love another. But I did. Yet can do it, if it is a sin to cherish it."

The minister was walking the floor, his face contorted by strong feeling, but he stopped before Mr. Hamilton and repeated, "You can do it?"

His eager words were coldly met.

"You misunderstood my meaning, Mr. Hammerty. I meant to show you how futile were your words. There is a great mistake; Constance is a good woman, a noble creature. There is no question of giving her up. I respect your motives, Mr. Hammerty, and forgive your suspicions, so evidently the result of them. As for your confidence, wrung from you by a misapplication of my words, it shall be sacred. I thought you were a good man. I know it now."

Mr. Hammerty arose to depart, and the two stood a moment, face to face. Then each reached forth his hand. "Good night." "Good night," they said, and parted.

"No use, no use," said the minister. "I laid bare my heart for nothing. She must be mistaken."

Mr. Carter came into the library and found Mr. Hamilton in deep thought, evidently, for he did not look up.

"I think I will go to bed Vane," he said.

"All right. I will close the house," was the reply, and soon Mr. Carter was asleep and dreaming.

One of his dreams he recollected in the morning as a little curious. It was of Vane going by his door, light in hand, all dressed in fine black and gleaming linen, tall, fair, and grand, handsome as a prince. And so he went on down the stairs, and Mr. Carter went on dreaming, but nothing quite so realistic as that.

But it was not a dream. Mr. Hamilton did pass down the stairs and out the door, dressed with care so to look his best, and he was exceedingly handsome.

He saw a light at Mrs. Fry's, and he went there and asked to see Mrs. Hamilton.

"Please say I want to see her alone, and on important business," he said.

"If she is still up."

"Yes, she's up. She don't sleep so great nowadays," said Mrs. Fry, throwing an accusing look at him before she left to deliver her errand.

"Walk this way," she said, returning in a few minutes. "She says she will see you," and Mrs. Fry conducted him to the sitting-room, which had been given up to Mrs. Hamilton's occupancy. The night was chilly, and a light gleamed from the grate of the little stove upon the lap and white hands of Constance as she sat before it. But her face was in the shadow, out of the range of the ruddy, feebly burning. She did not look up when he entered, and he strode to her side and gazed down at her before speaking. Then he said, almost with fierceness:

"Look at me, Constance."

She raised her eyes and let them know I love you so? Have you no

"Now it's up to you to get that pup and keep him quiet. Get him out into it as plain drunks: the rest's your job. What? Say, what good would this place be to me if I didn't have every last rat on the staff on my pay-roll? I could get away with murder here if I had to; but it would mess up the premises too much; and when it comes to baking cops for rides you're the expert—Walt a shake, will you?"

Impelin broke off at this stage to look round in resentful wonder as Tom Boyce, flinging the wheel at the window wide open and heaving in through them, offered a dreamable interruption.

"What the devil—"

CHAPTER XLI

Lazyard, cut short without stirring watched the woman chamberer reel over the parapet and pass him with flimsy, unseeing eye in a face shaken with fury, now turned cautiously pitched as he was between the window and the pier, till he commanded through the hinged opening a cramped view of the room.

Tom Boyce, with a pose of fine theater, was at the moment throwing the shagreen case, new, on to the table.

"What does this mean?" she shrilly demanded. "What's the idea? Where are those emeralds?"

Impelin was more mechanically in a dumbfounded statement. "What—what—"

"You heard what I said. They weren't in the case when I opened it downstairs just now. Where are they? What was the idea? Trying to spy me?"

"Hair a moment, Tess."

Impelin, acting on admirably quick recovery, without raising his voice made to step forward; but it was him what a lift of his hand Steerice so much as he swung round to the telephone again a man in uniform with words GOTHAM SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY stamped upon the beam of his tunic moved into the picture and placed the case to examine it.

"Ah right, Sherry," Impelin curtly finished. "You know what that you've got to do; now get busy. Don't be long. Half an hour, and give me a buzz when you start. So long."

He replaced the instrument upon its cradle and got up, in full command of himself, as the Boyce was not. If in a rage as rabid as hers, and even, by the black fire of his look, more malignant.

"Now, what's this nonsense?" he barked. "What do you mean—where do you think you'll get off—talking to me like that? If the emeralds are missing from that case, you know more than I do what's become of them—and you know I know it! If there's any sprying being done, you're doing it. Come clean, kid." He gave a perfunctory contract her at close quarters. "What have you done with them?"

The man made at the same time as if to catch her wrists, but she was ready.

"Keep your hands off me!" The pistol of gold and pearl was whipped up from the folds of her dress, and Impelin started back as if she had thrust a snake in his face. "And don't try it on! And be quick about it: you know me. Presto! you know I wouldn't hesitate a minute."

"That goes for you too, Wally! Stick up and don't make me tell you twice."

Instant obedience proved that her head hadn't been an empty one, that the two men knew her temper too well to try combinations with it. Impelin for one, quite aside from the fact that his hands were high above his ears, took a new attitude with her, struck a pose of pain and one that was conspicuously as poor as recently it had been rich in authority.

"Don't be a fool, Tess. We won't get anywhere this way. If those stones are gone—well, there's something damned queer about it."

"I'll say there is!"

"And it's up to us to find out what it is, and we won't do that, ever, unless we quit bawling each other out and do some teamwork instead—"

"Oh, yeah?"

"Put that gun up, now, and be sensible—"

"I'll put it up, all right—when I get ready. And that will be when I've put you where you can't put it on them. Turn round, Wally, and back up. And don't kid yourself you'll get anywhere stalling on me: this is serious."

Persuaded more by the pulsing grimness of her countenance, perhaps, than by a threatening flirt of the pistol, the gunman with a sick grin gave in, hailing his back of some progress when the woman bade him quit suffering her to ponder the heavy automatic from his holster at his thigh.

"That's right." The woman deposited the weapon on a console-table behind her. "Now, Mamma says if you want to keep your pretty faces you can start marching. That's far enough. And mind you MAY try and keep your hands where I can see them. Now, then, what's the idea?"

"Oh, come now, Tess!" Impelin was attempted to reason with her. "This is all so uncalled-for! As if you didn't know you're safe with me—"

"You bet me your life I know it—when I've got the gun in my hand. "And you know I never pack a heater—"

"Sure I know it—nothing but that trick thingummy in your vest pocket that looks like a fountain-pen and squirts a soft-nosed .22 slug. But you wouldn't kid a trusting woman, would you, Freddy? Not unless you thought you could. Keep 'em in the air, kid, and don't even think of making any funny passes while I take it."

The Boyce stepped in, nipped the deadly device out of Impelin's waistcoat, and smartly stepped back to inspect it beside the other weapon.

"Now you two heroes sit down and make yourselves comfortable," she sneered. "Smoke if you like—while ye discuss this funny business of the disappearing emeralds. I don't get it yet, if you want to know, what necessary you figured to make by playing games on Mamma; but a nice little heart-to-heart talk ought to make everything clear—don't you think?"

A blast of fingervation dwindled to a mutter on the gunman's lips at a sign from his brother; and pettishly throwing himself into a chair, Wally rammed both his deep into the pockets of his breeches and stretched out his patent shoes.

Yet Impelin himself proved no more ready with a proper reply—as during all the ensuing scene in which he seemed to ponder some withering retort—than his brother. At the table, he absently drummed with fingers that did the music's cords much credit, and rendered to the standing challenge merely a wry, uncertain grimace.

"Well, what's the answer?" she exploded in utter loss of patience. "Or maybe there isn't any? Is that it, sweetheart?"

"I'd call that pretty obvious," Impelin made a half-hearted attempt to reassert his lost prestige by falling back on his Park Avenue air. "Until you come to your senses and put that pistol away—"

"And let you book for a ride like those two poor children in the next room are going to take! I see myself!"

"But you are both right," Lazyard tiredly protested, entering into the scene by the windows at the woman's back. "Forgive the intrusion; but when such good friends fall out, and the fruit is mine—what else can I do?

The Boyce writhed upon him with a scream; but Lazyard had already taken charge of the weapons on the console, and the one that had come from the gunman's holster was formidable enough in itself to put Impelin and his brother back in the seats from which they had started.

"Thank you, mesdames! And you madam—don't be cross, but be sure of this; it will profit you nothing. Neither will you accomplish anything by snapping that toy at me; I pulled all its teeth before I left it for you to play with. As for the mystery of the emeralds—permit me to set your minds at rest: there isn't any. Neither was there any treacherous look of you played fair. The stones were in the shagreen case when Monsieur Impelin gave it to you, madam, and you dropped it; they are now in my possession. I will explain how I came by them presently, if you wish; but I will be in time. Crosier's again. Ah, pal! Just phoned?

He let his voice out till it overrode the woman's.

"Impress me your applause, pray —or as you say in American, please smile instead and hand me your patience yet one minute more. The pleasures of conversation are soon forego, I'm afraid, if we seem to be known beforehand."

He turned to the table, and finding a battery of several telephones parked upon it, hesitated over his choice, and hesitating, saw Impelin, with a respectful look, step close toward him.

"There is most obliging," he remarked, at the same time taking note that this was a French-type instrument. "Ah, yes! I thought it for granted, just because that wretch of a Crosier was there and I were in jail, that we'd heard the last of that bunch and everything was simply lovely—" He bent a morose glare on Lazyard. "Why didn't you tell me your friend Orano said Impelin had such powerful friends in the underworld that we might as well be prepared for a little—for some attempt to avenge his arrest?"

I hoped, to tell the truth, he was drawing as an exaggerated picture and wanted to avoid alarming you without real reason, I guess."

"Well! I've no doubt you meant well, but I wish you hadn't been so darn considerate. If I'd dreamed that anything like this would happen I'd have stuck to Fenna and her own shadow, never have let her out of my sight a single minute—

What are you making that funny face about?"

"Forgive me, but I found the thought amusing—"

"That's most unpalliant of you if you think I'm not still sorry enough to keep my wits that obli—

"I think it would be well if I did doing."

"The girl does go, I grant you, once she gets started. I admit it would be as good for me as a reducing diet." As Fay paused to give the thought a rueful smile, a chirp sounded under Lazyard's desk, and the lady had a start. "What's that —the telephone?"

"It might be Crane reporting progress," Lazyard nodded—as he took up the instrument at his elbow. "But I'm afraid it's of some recreation that he listened, interjecting in a faintly—startled voice, "Yes? Yes, speak to him: very well. Show him in, please."

Then, an apologetic look, he turned back from the telephone.

"Monsieur Impelin, I'm afraid. It's Monsieur Pico of the Surets, calling to talk taxes, I suppose. He's going home with Navarra. I understand; and she sails tonight at midnight."

"I don't mind, of course—though I will say I wasn't infatuated with the creature, the horrid way he behaved to you, coming over—"

"He was very kind to me in the upshot, however. We must not forget that. If he hadn't proved himself a fair man at heart, if he hadn't overridden the Captain and set me free, that night—"

His response to a tap on the door brought in a familiar, alarming, wizened shape, tricked out in curious elegance, as for strolling on Sunday in the Bois, in morning-coat with grey-striped trousers, fawn-tinted boots and spats, lemon-colored gloves, an ebony stick and a lustrous stovepipe topper.

"Ah, mon-ami!" he piped at the sight of Lazyard, extending his arms; but in the next instant, discovering the latter's companion, he caught himself up and subdued his transports, performing a demonstration the Continental bow from the hips. "And Madame Crosier? But what pleasure! Figure to yourselves that one had no suspicion that the good Crosier was there and he permitted to—how do you say?—slay two birds with one rock."

"How is that, pray?"

"But it was my intention, naturally, to inquire of my friend Monsieur Lazyard where I could call on Madame Crosier to pay her, as my homage and felicitations."

"What is the news, then, about? Felicitations?" Fay Crosier cried. "Open the library event of that day, madame?"

"Are you mad?" The lady indignantly bridled, and then, reminding herself that the affair of the Surets couldn't possibly know of what had happened, made her manner more grandeur. "But no, a moment's quiet see that you do not under-stand—how should you?—that there is anything but a day when Mr. Lazyard and I can reckon the sort of felicitations. It is, to the contrary, for us a day of sad anxiety."

"Ah, madame! But what calamity can possibly have befallen you upon you?"

"We are not yet sure, monsieur," Lazyard replied, "that it is truly a calamity. We merely do not know. It is since seven o'clock this morning that Madame's daughter, Mlle. Fenna, left her home to go a little shopping. She was to have returned in time for a luncheon-party that Madame was giving some friends. She did not. So far we can ascertain, she visited none of the shops she was to have gone to, and did not call at the home of any of her friends. Mme. Crosier feels certain that if nothing untoward had happened to her, if she had simply been detained, say by some unforeseen accident, she would have telephoned her mother to explain."

"Ah madame!" The Frenchman introduced a most lamentable groan. "One's heart aches for you—

"Nor is that all," Lazyard pursued. "My son, who has disappeared. He left the shop here half an hour before noon, saying he had some affair to see to before luncheon. Nothing has been heard of him since. It is our fear that both young people have been made the victims of some scheme of vengeance plotted by such members of the Bellamy mob as have thus far avoided arrest."

"But that puts another light on it!" Pico protested, all at once the sympathetic, grieving friend no more. "If Monsieur Maurice disappeared at the same time, and the two left you in the dark as to their intentions—It is simply that they were thoughtless, as young people preoccupied with the romance of life are apt to be. When you know the truth, be sure, you will forgive them—"

"The truth?" Lazyard demanded. "What is this that you are so sure you know? Speak, tell us!"

"Shall I be a spoil-sport?" Pico expostulated. "But no, there is no need. I have indeed called in an amateur hour, my friends!"

But nobody was listening to him now—for the door had unceremoniously been thrown open, and Fenna herself was on the threshold, being transformed in a flash by drinking deep of the joy of life and its beauty —with Maurice showing a face as happy over her shoulder.

"Mother! What a fuss to find you here!" The girl flatly threw herself into her parent's arms. "We've been looking for you to tell you, and only stopped for a minute to talk!"—she looked round impishly at Lazyard and flung out a hand to him—"to tell Father! We've been out of town all day—such a divine day—motoring up to Connecticut to get married."

"Married!" Fay Crosier gasped. "And you're sailing tonight for a honeymoon to France. Say you forgive us, dear, do say you do!"

"It was that, you comprehend," Pico put in, "that brought me up here to tender my felicitations, Madame Crosier, and you, monsieur, my friend! When I saw that the terrible smile on the Navarre had been struck, I felt sure that you, Monsieur Maurice Lazyard, it was a natural conclusion, surely, no one to blame, seen what I had seen on the voyage over, that that boy would be Mademoiselle Fenna. And I had a happy inspiration: he brightly confided me while Lazyard and Fay Crosier were recollecting their wits, that I proceed to me that a certain special wedding present to the bride and bridegroom, and I had the hope that she might be gracious enough to permit me—"

He conjured out of some recess in his garments a little box wrapped in white paper and bound with a white satin ribbon, and with a flourish presented it to Fenna-no's hand.

"But, monsieur," she breathlessly protested, "this is too good of you—"

"Not as good of me as it will be of you, madame, to accept."

"Then how wonderful!"

The ruby ring of the Rajah of Ladore blazed on the white satin bed of the box that Fenna had opened.

"But before you do me so much honor, madame, let me tell you a secret." Pico bent to her ear. "That ring you see there was not come by honestly. That is the truth, madame, I tell you. It was taken from the hand of a certain white wave of legal honesty. Yet I will leave your father-in-law will tell you, too, that you need not hesitate to take it from me: there could be no more fitting wedding present for the bride of the hero of Ladore."

"Pardon, monsieur," Maurice interposed. "There is a small matter to take there. Forgive me if I venture to remind you," he frowned to his father and took his arm. "The Lone Wolf's son no more, monsieur—but Mr. Michael Lazyard's."

THE END.

KING DEVOTES HIS WEEKEND TO TENDING GARDEN

Going to Vimy But Will Go by Boat And Train

GIVES DINNER PARTY

First Meeting of Coronation Committee to be Held Wednesday

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 20 (C.P. Cable) — The King will not fly to France for the Vimy Ridge Memorial unveiling on July 26. He will cross the Eng. lish Channel from Portsmouth to Calais in the Admiralty yacht Mashantress and travel from Calais by train.

Authoritative quarters said reports the King would return to London after unveiling the memorial to Canada's dead of War days were unfounded. He will go straight from Vimy to Rouen, in the French Riviera, as planned.

His King spent the week-end at Fort Belvedere, his Windsor forest retreat. Much of the time he devoted to farming and gardening. He has been enthusiastic about gardening this summer. Today he has a small dinner party last night.

The first meeting of the Coronation Claims Committee to consider the claims of those desiring to tender their services to His Majesty at his coronation in May, 1937, will be held on Wednesday.

Probably it will be open to the public, Subsequent meetings, more or further action privately. It is not likely to assemble until after the holiday season.

Special thanksgiving services were held in many churches today, involving the gratitude of his subjects that the King had not been harmed when a man aimed a loaded revolver at him on Constitution Hill last Thursday.

No Change in Guarding King

Any drastic changes in the future in the guardianship of guarding the King as a result of last Thursday's incident, is unlikely. It is understood that the police consider the present unobtrusive measures are effective.

Meanwhile preparation of the case against George Andrew Mcadam, 40, got under way as Scotland Yard wound up its search for witnesses of the attack on the King. A spokesman at Scotland Yard said he believed all useful witnesses now have come forward.

Lord Kennedy, Mcadam's counsel, planned to confer with his client as soon as private visitors be followed.

Sir Edward Tindal Atkinson, Director of Public Prosecutions, started his consideration of Scotland Yard's investigation this morning.

It will be Sir Edward's task to make any decision that may be necessary to the charge on which Mc-Mahon presented a loaded weapon of a revolver with intent to endanger life."

Some sections of the press suggested a graver charge of high treason might be preferred against the apparent absence of a political motive.

Ballistic experts examined Mc-Mahon's revolver. Home Office physicians prepared a report of his mental condition for presentation to the Bow Street magistrate today.

Kerstein announced that following his protest a news reel company covered by without the words "attempt on King's life" and substituted assassination" from posters and film sub-titles in connection with moving pictures of Thursday's episode.

He stated the company communicated with every exhibitor which has a copy of the news reel and instructed them to remove the words from the film.

Constable Determined To Drive Nudists Back to Mountains

Long Valley, N.J., July 20—(AP) —Will Sanries, constable-farmer, renewed his war today on the nudist Schooleys Mountain nudists "right back to where they came from", even if it takes the militia.

You—and even if he has to leave a field, build a grand-stand and hold clambakes every Sunday so the world at large may gaze at those in the nudist ride who have placed camp right next to the Morris County W.C.T.U. camp.

Sanries, complaining the sight of the nudists disturbed his noises, drove the back-to-nature folk into a strategic retreat last year by blocking chunkers on his property which adjoined that of the nudists.

He reopened his campaign against them yesterday. He has photographers to the camp to get pictures, and "the nudists they should be ashamed, and tried to interview the farmer but was told to mind his own business.

Will said he didn't know the nudists had moved back this year until he saw it.

"My son was out riding with his girl friend Saturday on a motorcycle and they were mystified by what they saw, returning themselves right by the road.

"The girl was driving and trying to look at them at the same time and the car hit a fence post."

The War was declared when Will Jr., reported to Will Sr.

She Said "Women Have Never Been up to Any Good"

SELF A FEMINIST

Surprised Her Words Not Taken as Joke She Intended

Sheffield, Eng., July 20 (AP)—Amy Johnson Mollison explained today she was just "kidding" when she said "women have never been up to any good."

The pilot wife of the famous woman pilot, who brought a gasp of astonishment from the audience at Woman's Engineering Society dinner, were designed to "rouse the little pep" in the meeting, she declared.

"Why, I had my tongue in my cheek," she asserted. "Of course I am a girl and I think women have had a great past and will have a great future."

She explained her speech as the Friday night dinner was:

"Where I became president of the society I decided our dinners would not be boring, so I decided to liven up the proceedings a bit.

"I'm sorry that my words were not understood as a joke. Certainly I believe in women."

Plane Back-tracks

Her previous statement, which she explained, was: "Women have never been up to any good. My candid opinion of the species, decked in feminine finery, is that they have created little else but trouble."

The flier also backtracked on another statement in which she described women engineers as unworthy of the title because "I don't know any who will put the plumbing right or mend a gramophone."

She said she didn't consider this either—or another statement in which she declared:

"I think there is a lot to be said for our grandmothers' technique of bees and knitting. A fool cannot in tears by the side of an automobile with the punctured tire will never fail so produce results."

Firemen Decorate Their Fire Hall

If by any chance, or strange twist of fate, Belleville should be fighting husking, abduct, in the future, decide to change their location, they should meet with little trouble in finding a job connected with the fire service.

For during the past two months, when not out fighting their favorite enemy with hose and reel, the boys have taken up hammer and saw, paint brush and pail and rejuvenated and redecorated their quarters on No. 1 station.

New wooden partitions, fairly glisten with paint and varnish. New windows and sash are in position. The station "just ain't what it used to be" and is a distinct credit to Fire Chief Lynch and his crew of sleepy men.

SURVEY FLIGHTS SOON TO START

Trans-Ocean Route Will be Thoroughly Explored

Ottawa, July 20—(CP)—Return today of Transport Minister Howe from an inspection trip of the trans-Canada airway between Canada and the United Kingdom.

First of the giant British "commodore" passenger planes that will test-fly the trans-ocean route this summer will leave Mr. the factory and survey flights are expected to begin next month. A giant airport is under construction at Gander Lake, Nfld., designed as a stopping place in the Oldest Colony about midway between Montreal and Ireland.

Work on the trans-Canada airway is still in progress. Fields under the Trans-Canada Air Movement closed the unemployment relief camps, while there are still many points and establishing a radio beacon service for night and fog flying.

It is considered doubtful if the trans-Atlantic service will be extended for commercial service much in advance of the Atlantic route, probably not before 1938. Considerable preliminary meteorological survey work has been done over Labrador, Newfoundland and Greenland in connection with the Great Circle Ocean route but no attempt has been made to span it with commercial flights or even survey flights.

It is believed two services will be inaugurated over the Atlantic within two years, a northern one in summer touching Newfoundland and having a Canadian terminus and a southern one in winter via the Azores and Bermuda to New York. A large airport is almost finished in Bermuda.

Imperial and Pan American Airways are believed to have reached an agreement whereby they, along with the British, Canadian, Newfoundland, Irish and United States governments to fly the service jointly but no detail has been made public.

Continued dryness and lack of moisture during the past few weeks has resulted in many of the maple trees in the city doing their leaves and taking on a burned and brown tinge, comparable with the autumn hues of the fall. "The work they are asked to do is not hard, and their turn comes only once in so often. A few of these men have apparently been content to sit for the rest by using various dodges to get out of work. We have no other course but to cut every man off, unless he can show a good reason why he isn't able or willing to take his turn at this regular work", commented Mayor Harry Hill today.

PROVINCE NEEDS FISH LICENCES

Minister Believes The Non-Resident Getting Value For Money

United States residents who visit this section of the province annually protest the necessity to purchase or secure fishing licenses on the grounds that being owners of summer camps and property, they should be classed as municipal taxpayers, have had the whole matter under review by him in a statement by D. J. Taylor, deputy minister of Lands and Fisheries Department of Ontario.

In a communication received by Mr. F. W. Wright, secretary of the Leeds Game and Fish Protective Association from Mr. Taylor, it is pointed out, that this matter has been given consideration by the Minister and the House, but as yet no action has been taken. "There has been a considerable trade from these contributing in excess of $25 per annum. In lieu of this Province of Ontario should be given the consideration that the non-resident angling licence is given.

"You will appreciate, of course," continued the letter, "that the revenue of Ontario is large, with a particularly considerable profit to the Province in the Fisheries Branch, due to give adequate protection and to maintain a class of fishing that our tourist friends demand, necessitating considerable expenditure of money. We do not think that our non-resident friends as a whole do not feel harshly dealt with in the matter of fees providing the class of fishing which is produced by the Province. In fact the complaint has been rather in considering the thousands or non-resident licence holders we have in the province last year, and to reduce the fee to an appreciable extent would not net much revenue, but in saving to the individual, but would be a considerable loss of revenue to the department considering the number of licence holders we have. We have every desire to give the recommendation to our tourist friends and it is only reasonable that they should expect in return to make a fair contribution to the treasury of the province to assist in this respect," stated Mr. Taylor.

Dozens of Grass Fires Flared Over Weekend

Acres of burned and blackened pasture land and fields in the area immediately surrounding the city, and even front and back yards within the limits revealed, over the week-end where dozens of grass fires leaped into the air during the latter part of last week, creating one of the busiest periods of activity for firemen of the local department experienced in years.

Most of the city which pasture fields were burned over, while firemen from neighboring districts were brought to stem the advance of the blaze creeping steadily toward the fences and buildings of the Fair-grounds. On Albert Colliges campus another brisk, wind-fanned fire also gave the department a stiff run for their money on Saturday afternoon, flames crackled through the heavy growth of dried grass, bringing alarm to householders of the hill as the fire steadily ate its way upward. No actual damage, however, was reported from the series of blazes.

Noted Artists Heard At Church Service

The Union Service of the Tabernacle and Bridge Street United Churches was of special interest yesterday in the morning service in Bridge St. Church, by musical numbers contributed by Mr. Melvin Haig, soprano of the Canadian Radio Commission and Mrs. Helen Finn Allen, violinist, of Hollywood Pa. Mrs. Haig sang the very beautiful "Ave Maria" by Bachgounod with violin obligato played by Mrs. Allen, and also the solo "Come Unto Him" from "The Messiah". These numbers were sung with a voice of rare purity of tone and reverential style. Mrs. Allen's solo was the "Andante" from Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, beautifully sweet was played with beautifully sympathetic tense, displaying real musicianship and temperament on the part of this talented violinist. The organ accompaniments were played with Mr. Hunt's accustomed ability. Dr. Seguin's sermon on "The Message of the Roses" was appropriate and eloquent, conveying a message of helpfulness. HELD FOR PERJURY AFTER TESTIFYING

Bert Jones, Picton, Arrested in Police Court During L. C. A. Case

"Arrest that man on a charge of perjury," was the sudden and startling command from Mr. Crown Attorney, K.C., local Crown Attorney, while Bert Jones, Picton, market-gardener, testifying in a L. C. A. case, when Max Marcus, Willard Street, Belleville, was the plaintiff in the suing case, contrary to the L. C. A. In the Police Court immediately following Chief Gunther of this city, following which they went to Marcus' home and had a drink of beer. Who drank the beer?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"Marcus, Gunther and myself," was the answer as he later added they procured two bottles of beer and were about to have the drink when they were also stopped by the police and the beer confiscated the case later adjourned at June 30th last.

"Did you pay for the beer?" emphatically asked Mr. Donnan.

"I don't remember; you see, I was feeling pretty good. It seems to me I borrowed the bottles of beer and was to return them the next morning," answered Jones.

After consulting a moment with His Worship—That is all the evidence I require in this case," declared Mr. Donnan, "and I charge you with perjury."

His Worship then dismissed the charge against Marcus. Against Max Marcus Ball was set at $3,000 by His Worship Magistrate Butler. Mr. Donnan stated that another charge, to be laid against Marcus, C.C.A. charged to having, receiving or giving beer, would be laid against Marcus following the close of the court. Bail was asked for the withdrawal of a purchasing charge against Jones.

The charge laid he would have had bondsmen available this afternoon, Mr. Chas. Deserre, M.P., appeared as counsel on behalf of Marcus.

Car Hits Transport But No One Injured

Rain varying to get back sudden-ly into the line of traffic to avoid a headon collision resulted in serious damage to a car accident on Highway No. 2 five miles east of Napanee late Friday afternoon at 5.30 o'clock. Driven by Miss Rosalie Kelly, of Kingston, was about to pass a large transport travelling in the same direction, when suddenly Miss Kelly saw another automobile coming directly from the opposite direction.

Miss Kelly immediately applied the brakes of her car and tried to swing in behind the truck, when the momentum of her car carried it at such a speed as to have the vehicle crash into the rear end of the truck and completely demolished the front of the smaller vehicle. Fortunately no person was injured in the crash. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine reported after investigations.

Tourist Party at Camp Only Hour When Two Are Drowned

(By The Canadian Press)

The Province's accidental death toll stood at nine today after a week-end in which five persons lost their lives by drowning, three were killed in car accidents and one man died from carbon monoxide poisoning.

A double drowning fatality occurred at North Bay when Cara D. Owens, Hamsburg, Ohio, 28, and his father-in-law, Homer K. Johnson, 6, Orwell, Ohio, were thrown into Lake Nipissing from their boat. An outboard motor on the craft started suddenly and spun the boat in a short circle, throwing Owens, Johnston and Mrs. Owens into the water.

Mrs. Owens was rescued by an employee of the summer resort but the two men sank. Both bodies were recovered. The party, which included Mrs. Johnston, had been out on the lake only an hour when the accident happened.

A second double drowning fatality occurred at Midland, when a man believed to be Edward Rae, Toronto, and an unidentified woman drowned while swimming in Macey's Bay. The bodies were recovered.

While his bride of seven months looked on, Richmond McLatchie, 32, Ottawa, drowned in the Ottawa River at Constance Bay, 25 miles from the city.

Struck by a car as he waited with his 11-year-old grandson for a bus at Simvale, Ont., Neil Strain, 78, Cavilla died in Midland Hospital half an hour after being admitted.

Miss Mary Tolmie, Toronto, was killed, and her companion, Fred Bick, also Toronto, seriously injured when the car in which they were riding near Owen Sound ran off the road and turned over.

Charles Leveque, 46, Toronto, died in the hospital after being struck by a truck trailer as he walked along a road in the suburban Long Branch. Doctors said death was due to a heart condition aggravated by the shock of the accident.

A. Hamilton, Ont., Dickerson, 52, was making repairs to his car in a garage when wind blew the doors shut. Fumes from exhaust gas from the exhaust overcame Dickerson and he died in the hospital a short time later.

Lumbermen Estimate The Damage at Nearly $3,000,000

(By The Canadian Press)

Generally less serious than last week, Ontario's bush fire situation today continued to engage the attention of Forestry officials who saw four new fires start in the Port Arthur area and between 30 and 40 blazes still active in the Sault Ste. Marie district.

In the latter section of the province last week's fires burned over 75 square miles of timber land and lumbermen estimated total damage between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000. The estimate took account the fact fires burn away the top soil and kill the land of its fertility for future tree growth.

Around Port Arthur, where 56 fires still burned, Fire Rangers reported only four or five out of control and these all in the Lake Nipigon district. One new blaze started in the Burwash area.

Port Arthur's four new fires brought the total since May 1 to 100, but none of the fires now burning are considered serious. The only blaze giving concern at present is two miles north of the town of Long Lac, 150 miles northeast of Port Arthur, but officials said no immediate danger threatened the town itself.

Rain fell in scattered sections of the Thunder Bay region but no heavy downpour occurred and officials said a heavy general rain was needed to stamp out the fires completely.

BATHING NEAR LOWER BRIDGE

Children have been using the Moira River below the lower bridge for bathing in quite large numbers. The use of this spot has caused considerable comment as many feel when they see these youngsters disporting themselves in the water, they could wish the boys and girls had chosen a much better spot. The water is sluggish and low and a casual glance at the river at this point and at the conditions would seem to indicate that foreign matter is getting into the water as it passes through the city. Every stream brings down foreign matter and the Moira is no exception. The lack of movement means the formation of a delta where cat-tails grow at great height just south of the bridge. Here the water is not marked by that crystalline appearance which should be the first requirement of bathing water.

Parents should take a look at this place and it is safe to say they would discourage and no doubt many would forbid their children using this spot.

Children should be able to discover spots which are safe from the standpoint of wading and also where the water is refreshing and clear.

WEATHER IS IDEAL

The weather from the blistering, smothering heat of less than a week ago has tempered delightfully to mildly warmth which makes the days joyous and the nights excellent for sleeping. After the rages of the heat wave, it was expected of course that there would be a considerable change, but if there had been guesses taken from weathermen, there would have been great variety, from a cold spell to something less frying than prevailed for a week beginning the week before last.

Mother Nature is infinite in her possibilities. As no two men are exactly alike in the infinite combination of the elements which make up physical form and character, so weather may be said never to repeat.

This time Nature has been benign, however ruthless she was for a time.

THE CALL OF EARTH

Montreal Gazette

With centuries of city-dwelling and the habits of countless generations of townsfolk behind him, man still feels the elemental allure of earth, sky and water when the sun beats down on pavements, and homes of brick and stone become confining prisons. Feet coddled by modern transportation habits, the automobile and the tramcar, decline to trudge a mile upon mile of open road, but ships and trains and motors carry light-hearted thousands away from work to play, to the sea and the mountains or to lands of enchantment.

No matter if the destination be a palatial summer hotel or a primitive camp in the woods, it is the selfsame urge that calls all her sons to return to Mother Earth, to feel the springy sod under the feet, whether they be encased in immaculate new golf shoes or the treasured but atrocious old pair of boots that are trotted out periodically when vacation-time comes around. Whether the breeze that fans his cheek blows across the deck of a ship or through forests surrounding a cabin in the woods, he who revels in its touch is answering the call of far-off ancestors that stirs in his blood, reverting to type and in his soul becoming one with the whole of creation. New forces are born in him, and the mastery of business, of scholarship, or trade or craft grows insignificant compared with the thrill of the fishing rod in his hand as he battles with salmon or trout, of the play of muscles as he drives a canoe against the wind on a white-capped lake, or wields an axe in the cool of early morning as he chops wood for the camp fire.

Even those who cannot leave the city for the country answer the call of the earth and pay their tribute to the spell of things brought to life and growth by the sun and the sudden summer showers of rain. A vivid window box, a tiny garden patch where carefully tended nurselings of vegetable and flowering plant produce leaf and bud, bloom and seed, these proclaim mankind's first, last and eternal love.

The measure of a master is his success in bringing all men round to his opinion twenty years later.—Emerson.

Frame your mind to mirth and merriment, which bar a thousand harms and lengthen life.—Shakespeare.

Pithy sentences are like sharp nails which force truth upon our memory. —Diderot.

AINT WE GOT FUN? Who wouldn't be editor of a weekly newspaper. The Havelock Standard, T. P. Lancaster, Publisher and Proprietor announces: "Our subscribers will please take notice that the Standard's annual holidays will take place during the next two weeks, and that this paper family journal will not appear again until August 6." We can visualize that editor, publisher and proprietor, getting into his car or trailer or both, with fishing rods and all camping equipment and hitting for the Great Open Spaces where men are human and not just newspaper critics, and women are scarce but good cooks and jolly companions. Editor Lancaster just turns the key in the lock and forgets about delinquent subscribers, slow advertisers, and hard-headed critics for two whole weeks—while the subscribers are given a chance to experience just what a vacuum is created by the non-arrival of the home newspaper with all the . little chit-chat and news of the countryside.

MUCH WATER HAS PASSED UNDER THE TRENT BRIDGES and much argument has been wasted on the Dredging of the Trent Canal and the enormous sums expended thereon by various governments (Some say wasted) but no one expected that a Trenton newspaper would admit such to be the case when a recent issue of the Trenton Sun carried an article by a staff writer actually deploring the amount of government money spent upon the Trent Canal! It came as a shock. Such candor in this day and age of government patronage is amazing.

WHILE ON THE SUBJECT OF TRENTON let us pass on a couple of editorial paragraphs from the Courier Advocate to the Sidelight Family. The first refers to the "Iroquois Trail" which we have been cautious about for some time but have not been able to find out where it is supposed to lead to. We followed it as far as Stirling and then lost "sign" and turned back. Some info re the "Iroquois Trail" would be appreciated. The other paragraph sounds very Harry Moorish and advocates a general holiday for business men during the month of July. Seems like a good idea and we are all for it. However, here are the paragraphs. Read 'em: ✓

The Chamber of Commerce has at last made a move to show the motoring public in which direction to find the Iroquois Trail, that imaginary Indian path that leads to big fish and lots of them; picturesque country, fine camping spots and at this particular time of the year, mosquitoes that are annoying but can be faced with equanimity by the courageous angler. Up the Trent is the place to go and you don't have to go far either.

July is the holiday month when Trenton business-men either sit around and wonder what has happened to bread and meat and butter and milk, to shut up shop coming first of July in each year and all go away to loaf for a while. A good rest is something that every business-man requires and what better month to take that rest than in the month of July when the flies are bad, the sun is hot, the water warm and business is cold.

It is now on exhibition in the show window of Mr. G. B. Hamilton's store and is much admired.

CROSSES OCEAN FOR 26TH TIME

P. J. Mulqueen Recalls Seeing Scholes Win Diamond Sculls

By ELMER DULMAGE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

On the way to the Olympic, aboard the S. S. Duchess of Bedford, July 18.—(CP)—Europe bound for the 26th time, bright-eyed Paddy J. Mulqueen stretched himself carefully into a deck chair today and figured this would be his last official visit to the Continent.

"You know," he said, "the first time I crossed the Atlantic was on the Lusitania. I went over in 1904 to see Lou Scholes of Toronto win the Diamond Sculls. And nearly every trip since has been in connection with one sport or another."

The veteran Canadian Olympic enjoys Olympic company as much as ever. Since the Belgian-bound Duchess of Bedford left Montreal Friday, he has spent a good deal of time talking to the youngsters as Howie McPhee, who may be Canada's next Olympic sprint champion; 13-year old Joan Langdon of Vancouver, a swimming prodigy; and other Olympic aspirants, and to Mr. Mulqueen's grandchildren.

"Yes," he admitted, "I love this sort of thing. We have a great time. We have a fine group of athletes and are aiming the world's greatest sport events." Earlier this year he attended the winter Olympic games in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany.

West With Scholes

Mr. Mulqueen, the story came out later, went to the English Henley with Scholes in 1906, because the latter sculler's father, Captain John Scholes, Toronto boatman, was ill and could not accompany his son.

Pat looked after young Lou, saw he had the best available training facilities in England, "and then he won the race and had won, he cabled this message to Captain John in Toronto: "You are a great sire."

A fine carsman in his own competitive days, Mr. Mulqueen loves all sports but the Olympics became his favorite subject as far back as 1908 He saw Bobby Kerr's Edwardian win the 200-metre dash that year in London, defeating the fastest South African, Reggie Walker.

He attended in 1913, 20, 24, 28 and 32. Now he's going to the first Olympiad ever staged by Germany and he knows Canada has a good a chance as ever before to make a fine showing. He doesn't expect to "give up" because only a big nation can do that.

YOUNG LAD CATCHES RARE FISH NEAR HALIFAX

—Central Press Canadian Photo

By CENTRAL PRESS CANADIAN

Halifax, N.S., July 20.—Something of a sensation was caused at the Dingle, a summer resort at the Halifax North West Arm, when 9-year-old Kenneth Hearon caught a marine monstrosity weighing 50 pounds and almost as big as himself.

Ken caught the sea-brute with a hook stuck so clumsy that a country boy would disdain it for a fishing pole to land the smallest trout in an inland pool.

"I saw the thing in the water from a staging," said Ken. "I shoved the stick in its mouth. It had an awful big mouth and it grabbed the stick right quick."

Ken set up a holler when the monster refused to let go and held its grip on the stick between jagged rows of teeth in its foot-wide mouth.

Joe and Henry came a-running from a nearby tea-room they operate. Then the three joined in dragging the flapping monstrosity up on the shore where it was helpless.

Crowds of holiday makers left the beach and tea tables to see the fish taken from the salt water. None of them knew its species and it was not until the next day, when the fish was examined by an official of the Fisheries Experimental station at Halifax that the monster was identified as a "skonk" fish.

But the expert was puzzled to explain the presence of the oddity so close to shore. Now and then "Monk" fish are taken by offshore deep sea fishing vessels but rarely are they seen in shoal water.

Yarmouth, Famous Sea-Coast Town To Celebrate 175th Anniversary

Was Once One of World's Greatest Ports —Still Busy.

Here are scenes from the famous town of Yarmouth, N.S., which celebrates its 175th anniversary on July 27th. Ocean floors call to Yarmouth harbor; fishing is the chief occupation and Yarmouth sailors are noted for their courage and agility. In the upper picture, at left, Sealed Landers, descendant of the founder, lays a wreath on the old grist mill stone, one of the first things made by the town's settlers.

LOWER LEFT, Sealed Landers, Yarmouth's centenarian, who is still active. LOWER RIGHT, Yarmouth Harbor—Walker Town, everyone has had his job, and has done it well. The Walker fish department are officially sponsoring the event—and it's a small town, nobody's more respected than its firefighters.

Mayor Lindsay Moulton of Yarmouth County when the first group of settlers arrived by small ship from Sandwich, Cape Cod, June 9, 1761. On board, with their possessions, were the families of Sealed Landers, Ebenezer Ellis and Moses Perry. Two days later there arrived from Connecticut other Hoyalists, and 80 persons spend the winter here.

Yarmouth, N.S., July 20.—(CP)—In 1761, 175 years ago, the settlement of Yarmouth began, which since has flamed its name over the civilized world through its great shipping and ship-building industries.

To-day, with the glory dying out with its old skippers, Yarmouth has more than a score retired captains who turned regretfully from the splendor of wooden hulls and roaring chests to bare poles and pounding engines.

Still a premier port on the Nova Scotia coast it remains, but boasts of having had recent annual passenger list in the entire Dominion of Canada.

During the height of the tourist season, which arrives annually about the middle of June, daily steamers from Boston and bi-weekly liners from New York, bring a total of over 2,000 persons in bigger and better ships than ever before.

Celebrate "175th"

Other times they are attracted by legend, history, beauty, peace and quiet. But during the week of July 27 a great throng will come to Yarmouth to attend the monster celebration in honor of "the 175th."

For just a year a hundred committees have been working to assure a successful celebration. Mayor Walker Lovett, who is also chairman of the executive committee, has had his job, and has done it well. The publicity department are officially sponsoring the event—and it's a small town, nobody's more respected than its firefighters.

Mayor Lindsay Moulton of Yarmouth County when the first group of settlers arrived by small ship from Sandwich, Cape Cod, June 9, 1761. On board, with their possessions, were the families of Sealed Landers, Ebenezer Ellis and Moses Perry. Two days later there arrived from Connecticut other Hoyalists, and 80 persons spend the winter here.

French-Acadians Deported

Landers erected a grist mill at the head of the harbor, and the grinding stone was unveiled last Natal Day by Sealed Landers, direct descendant, who still lives here. It is on view and marked the exact spot where the mill stood so long ago.

The English settlement prospered and hardy stock naturally took to the sea. In the heyday of wooden ships, and iron ones there was hardly a port touching any of the seven seas in which one could not find a Yarmouth skipper. At one time Yarmouth had a greater tonnage per capita than any port in the world.

Before the English came, there were a few French-Acadian families. Their tragic deportation in 1755, 1756 and 1758, when families were torn apart, many never to be reunited, has been widely heralded. Yarmouth county's present population is half French-Acadian, direct descendants of those who escaped Col. Lawrence's brutal order, and who ten years later returned to their village, long since laid waste, but home, nevertheless.

Week of Celebration

It is particularly in connection with these French-Acadians, peaceloving, industrious, and honestly, that Yarmouth county's history is rich. A museum at Pubnico is a treasure house.

In Yarmouth's public library there is a rustic stone found across the harbor, which American and continental scholars have declared genuine, and have written that it was left by the Norsemen in the year 1000. Yarmouth claims the find. The school here, 7462 Children, has discovered America" holds Hall-of-Fame water here.

The week of celebration will feature parades, all types of sporting events, including the International yacht races for the Prince of Wales Cup, and baseball games with the Yarmouth Gateways, Maritime providences champs.

PLEADS GUILTY TO CRUELTY CHARGE

Alleged Pigs Placed in Cramped Quarters on Local Market

Henry Foster, Demorestville farmer, charged with cruelty of not guilty to one of guilty, after considering charge of cruelty to dumb animals heard in today's local police court before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.c.

"The object of this prosecution is to improve conditions so that they all treat their stock especially by placing them in more comfortable crates and boxes to bring them onto our markets," explained R. C. Donnan, S.P.C. local crown attorney, previous to the meting out of a two dollars and costs fine.

Foster was apprehended in possession of six pigs in an enclosed box on Saturday's local market, the box allegedly being too small to accommodate the animals and there not being adequate ventilation. A charge of ill-treating six pigs by conveying them in a box too small, contrary to Section 542, the Canadian Criminal Code, was the substance of the charge.

Sergeant Walter Snobb and Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine summoned Foster. We found the six pigs in a wooden box five foot four inches long by three foot wide and one foot wide. The box was a solid wooden structure with no holes for ventilation. I later remeasured one of the pigs and it was approximately two feet long, so you see the animals could not even stand up in the box," Sergeant Booth informed the Ontario-Intelligencer today.

Foster has been repeated complaints received by the police regarding this practice of ill-treating pigs that are displayed on the local market for sale and we would like to have this warning issued to the fiers of live-stock," added Chief Kidd in reference to the matter.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Opinion on Lamaque

Ore findings continue to exceed all expectations both in old veins and new discoveries, results that can only continue to move ore reserve position upward. Rumours of an increase to 1,000 tons a day or better are based on inches reasoning.

It should be remembered, however, that the new main production shaft is not yet finished or sinking, will require about one year for completion and will have important bearing on mill enlargement plans. Lamaque gives every promise of becoming a big mine, so much so that The Mining Analyst's previous rating of 1,000 to 1,500 tons daily is subject to revision with a new figure of 2,000 tons or more considered considered conservative.

Howey Gold Profit Totalled $113,033 For June Quarter

Howey Gold Mines in its report covering the three months ended June 30 shows operating profit of $113,033 which compares with $118,-881 as the average quarterly operating profit for the year 1935. The above profit is shown before providing for taxes, depreciation and pre-production charges.

The ore reserves at last week was a heartening affair for the reason that instead of the usual method of only a minor portion of the list but was spread out to include a number of industrials and many mines. Incidentally, it is in fact Quebec mines that are proving outstanding features on the upside with every indication pointing to a continuation of this trend.

TWO GIVEN MONTH IN BIGAMY CASE

Magistrate Says Couple Did not Realize Seriousness of Act

Robert Brown and Helen Carter (Mrs. Helen Brown), both were sentenced to serve one month in the common jail after being convicted of bigamy in today's local police court before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.c.

A. H. Collins, K.C., appeared for Brown and requested clemency as shown in the matter of sentence. "I believe it was a case of love at first sight on the part of both parties and love being blind the parties are very inexperienced in leniency," added Mr. Collins as he asked for a suspended sentence. "I do not think they realized the seriousness of the offence," added Mr. Collins.

His Worship found Brown guilty as charged and added—"I think a month in the common jail is quite reasonable, owing to the seriousness of the crime."

Helen Carter (nee Helen Simpson) who had pleaded guilty to having married Brown, while her former husband was alive, in a previous court, was also subject to the same sentence. "Do you realize you might have been sent to the penitentiary for this crime? This time I'll be rather lenient, owing to the surrounding circumstances and sentence you to one month in the common jail," concluded His Worship. R. C. Donnan, K.C., local Crown Attorney, did not press either case.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

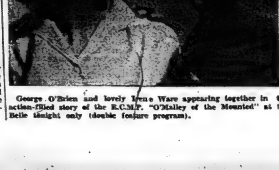
"Come Out of the Pantry"

After seeing Jack Buchanan as the happy-go-lucky Jack Brewster feverishly squandering a fortune in "Brewster's Millions" it comes as a surprise to find him putting his money in the wrong bank in his latest film, "Come Out of the Pantry," which is showing at the Capitol Theatre until tomorrow night.

This time Jack is seen as Lord Binding Head, a pleasant young man, who goes to New York to see the family portraits. He sells the pictures for £30,000 and then rushes back to London to deposit his new fortune in a bank. His love affair is short-lived, for in the morning the bank crashes and he is left penniless. Unable to communicate with his mother, who is cruising, and unwilling to appeal to his snippish and elder brother, Lord Robert wanders aimlessly about the city. He meets Nicky, a barker formerly employed by his family, who takes him home and installs him as footman in the Beach-Howards' residence.

The kitchen staff are delighted with the new footman, particularly the kitchen-maid who is captivated by his singing and dancing. Lord Robert rapidly becomes proficient in his new duties and with usual celerity falls in love with Hilda Mr. Beach-Howard's beautiful niece. She, in turn, is intrigued and suspects that he is something more than a footman.

Complications



Hilarious complications arise when Robert's nasty elder brother arrives at the house to ask for the hand of Hilda. A dinner is held to announce the engagement. Unrecognized by his brother, Robert serves at table and takes the opportunity to propose to Hilda as well as causing several drinks over the obnoxious relative. Hilda accepts, and Robert reveals his identity and takes his place as an honouring guest, much to his brother's chagrin.

In a part which fits him like a glove Jack Buchanan keeps the laughter going with effortless ease. He has never been given a better advantage. He dances, of course this time in the humble confines of the kitchen, where he and Hilda Stewart, the lovesick maid, give an amusing burlesque of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

Interspersed with the comedy are two songs —"Everything Stops for Tea" and "From One Minute to Another"—the latter being over to his own inimitable style. These tunes were composed by Messrs. Seigler, Hoffman and Goodhart, famous as the composers of "Little Man You've Had a Busy Day" and "A Little Dash of Dublin".

Supporting Buchanan is the beautiful Hollywood star, Fay Wray, who makes her role stand out by sheer artistic ability and charm.

Free to the Ladies on Monday and Tuesday another beautiful piece of boston ovenware.

George O'Brien and lovely Irene Ware appearing together in the action-filled story of the R.C.M.P. "O'Malley of the Mounted" at the Belle tonight only (double feature program).

AT THE BELLE

"One Rainy Afternoon"

What happens when a handsome young man kisses the wrong girl in the wrong place is the theme of "One Rainy Afternoon," is depicted in hilarious fashion in the gay, frantic, romantic story of that title which brings dashing Francis Lederer to the screen of the Belle Theatre for two days beginning today.

"One Rainy Afternoon" presents part his Lupino opposite the star and others prominently featured in the comedy are Hugh Herbert, Roscoe Karns, Erik Rhodes and Joseph Cawthorn.

The story centres around the frantic adventures of a struggling Paris actor, who is carrying on a passionate flirtation. He and the lady invariably meet in darkened movie theatres. Well, it is at such rendezvous that Philippe (Francis Lederer) meets Barbara, a strong seat and inadvertently kisses the beautiful stranger in error.

A shriek! A resounding slap! A scandal! Philippe is brought before a court of love at first sight develops between him and his beautiful victim. Complications, with the result that his fine is paid and he goes free. A hectic romance, carried on chiefly in ice skating palaces, develops between the two, and the romantic publicity growing out of the trial makes him the toast of Paris.

Excellent Cast in "Speed"

The drama and romance of modern industry which the world always seldom recognizes combined with a striking power in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production "Speed" which will be presented on the same program Tomorrow and Wednesday at the above theatre, is the Rainy Afternoon."

The picture is happily titled. It reflects the pace of the mechanical age and at the same time humanizes the scene in any typical industrial plant. It is the story of an automobile manufacturing plant, daredevil tests on dangerous curves, with a colorful love affair in progress.

The cast consists of James Stewart, Wendy Barrie, Una Merkel, Weldon Heyburn, Henry Hunter, Ralph Morgan and Patricia Wilder.

Stewart portrays a daring young man at the wheel, who is chiefly concerned with his invention of a new carburetor.

Miss Barrie is charming in the role of a factory executive's secretary who goes to work in the plant and promptly wins the heart of the world's most reckless test driver.

The picture is thrilling in its dramatization of the life of a race driver and it is unique on the score of presenting a side of American industrial romance that seldom reaches the public.

Edwin C. Hill presenting the latest Metrotone News Flashes in his capable and entertaining manner is also a feature on the program at the cool Belle beginning tomorrow. Complete performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10 and last complete show at 8.30 p.m.

Ends Tonight

George O'Brien, ace of adventure screen stars, in his latest action filled feature "O'Malley of the Mounted" and the laugh riot of the year "The Princess Comes Across" featuring two of the screen's most popular stars, Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, supported by an excellent cast of funnymakers, will be presented at the Belle Theatre tonight for the last time. Complete performances, including the presentation of the Belle Late News Flashes, that is particularly interesting this time, will commence at 7.15 and 8.30 p.m.

He Should be Taught Labor Cost of Clean Clothes, Says Writer

(By Lisa Grenelle)

Six-year-old Gloria pulled fresh frocks out of the bureau drawer until she came to the one she wanted—and then left in lawful order.

She pulled the frock on in haste —she had to hurry since it was nearly time for the bus to take her to school, because it was bobbed. She had to yank it of again after school, for it was a dirty one and her rage on the offending dress, because it said that it was a dirty crumpled head on the floor, along with other dresses she had tossed out of the drawer.

When she finally was dressed and had left the room, there were four dresses on the floor which had to be washed, ironed and mended all over again.

Take Care of Clothes

Children, as well as many adults, take for granted the drudgery that makes their clothes comfortable and pleasant. They don't mean to be cruel when they waste needs and create extravagance, they make unnecessary work for others, just as a small friend or grown-up unacquainted loss cannot truly sympathize or understand others' bereavement. Children of a child who grows up entirely ignorant of the labor involved to keep him comfortable cannot be expected to consider the consequences of his carelessness. Why should the child save or sympathize with the sewing girl, if he has learned what work costs?

It is useful or even to punish Gloria for her lack of consideration, her carelessness, waste and wreck. She needs at the most act as a slight deterrent. It will teach her nothing. She will be left in complete understanding. On the contrary, it will tend to make her sly and resentful.

She Should Know How

Only if Gloria is taught to wash and iron, is encouraged to help mother or the laundress, will she understand the cost of her carelessness. A girl of six is too young to be left alone and started in laundry. But at four she is not too young to wash socks and doll's clothes, and to work together. Six is not too young to own a light iron, and to press her handkerchiefs, on doll's clothes, not too young to understand and the value of manual labor.

It doesn't matter whether Gloria's or mother's job it is, or whether Gloria will ever have to do a washing herself. She should know how, she should learn early that clothes don't take to clean up a room, wash a dress or cook a meal. She also should learn, early, something of the value of dollar.

Such a small child first learn about the simple tasks that make civilized home possible—washing, cleaning, growing, weeding and building. Later, when he has acquired some experience and knowledge of common, manual labor, he can drift off to higher, more skilled paying. If that is where his inclinations lie.

Lose Charm If Slouchy

(By Helen Follett)

Here is something to be kept in mind by those girls who lack good posture. Place your finger in the centre of the throat and let it slide downward to that spot where the breastbone ends. Directly beneath culture call it the vital centre because it is close to the heart. That centre should be slightly shoved to extended outward. The body will become balanced, shoulders will take the proper pose and the tummy will be flat.

With the vital centre to the fore, it is impossible to let the head droop, a bad habit that causes rounded shoulders and ruins the straight, graceful contour of the back. Correct posture gives the vital organs a happy inward curve at the waistline. With the backbone functioning properly, the muscles of back, chest and abdomen grow strong, giving the figure life and charm.

Every woman of distinguished appearance, who wears her material draperies beautifully, gets credit for good taste in dress because she knows how to carry her body. The coolest robe on a slumpy, sloughy figure loses character and, chicken. So we must offer that good old reminder, "it isn't so much what you wear as how you wear it."

When a child or adult walks or stands with the feet outward, more weight is thrown on the inner side of the foot than nature intended.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrison and baby were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Golden on Saturday evening.

Between 35 and 40 of all ages enjoyed the cooling water at Mrs. Mains below the dam on Saturday evening.

This may cause a change in the position of the bones and result in painful foot disorders.

Place the foot so that the inside of the heel and the great toe will be on a straight line. This will save strain on the arches and make walking a pleasure. Point toes straight ahead and walk with a spring.

Soft corns come between the toes and are caused by moist flesh and pressure. To cure them it is only necessary to keep the skin dry and wear shoes that provide more room for the little pink toes.

Any foot powder will effect a temporary cure, however be sure to soften the exudations of the sweat glands. Sprinkle it on generously and cover with a tiny pad of cotton.

Falling Temperatures, Rain Rout Heat Wave

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—Sinking and falling temperatures in the wake of destructive winds routed heat which had taken 4,500 lives and shook the grip of drought on much of the United States corn belt today.

A gale which struck northeastern Kansas and northwestern Missouri at 55 and 60 miles an hour killed two persons and injured at least a hundred, but brought rain to some parched sections.

Twisting north winds, whipping up blinding clouds of dust, swept across eastern Nebraska and western Iowa, damaging tasselstorm Kansas and northwestern Missouri at 55 and 60 miles an hour killed two persons and injured at least a hundred, but brought rain to some parched sections.

A large number from here attended the Orange Celebration in Belleville.

The field day on Wednesday was a great success. The first ball game was won by Latta and the second won by Foxboro.

There was a recess between the two games and the booth did a thriving business there. After the last game lunch was served to both teams and coffee which made a welcome drink. Prizes were started about 2.30 p.m. and ending about 5.30 p.m. Foxboro and Latta played both games.

Mrs. Frank Parks of Hay Bay spent a few days this week with her sister Mrs. E. Denyes.

Mrs. Jas. Harrison and Mrs. Archie Meeks and baby spent Wednesday with Mrs. John Bolcrick.

Picton in Tie for Leadership of Loop

Ranger Ron Church, veteran righthander of the Picton Blue Sox returned to the baseball wars with a bang when Picton met Belleville, when reminiscent of the good old days, he came in turning back the opposition with monotonous regularity, he heaved his team into a tie for the leadership of the Quinte shore Intermediate Loop by turning back the Port Hope squad by a 4-3 count.

Only six safeties were garnered from the Churchian shoots by the opposition while the big fellow added his own name to the list by the apple for two solid hits. He makes clustered five of their hits in the second innings to send three runners galloping across the plate, and again in the sixth they showed another marker on the scoreboard by virtue of two timely smacks and a walk.

The visitors counted one run in the fifth and another in the seventh. Port Hope .. ..0000010[illegible] 2 6 0

NEW HELP FOR SWIMMING STUDENTS

A new swim-study technique, or a method of keeping cool during that heat wave? Anyway, it looks thought this you-can't-go-too-far arrangement was designed primarily by swimming coaches who wished to study the style of their proteges more closely. The pupil swimmers can kick and flutter all they like, but as long as the cords hang on to the rope they can't get far. But it is an idea for those hot days.

Three Score Records Fall Beneath Briton's Wheels

Capt. George Eyston, of London, latest British speed king, pulls his maroon-colored two-ton mechanical monster, Speed of the Winds, into the pits after 48 hours of driving at an average speed of 136.364 miles per hour had shattered all existing records. The daring Briton cracked more than 60 records from 500 kilometres up in his wholesale assault upon time. He was assisted by relief driver Bert Denly. Capt. Eyston (TOP) and car are shown as they completed the terrific grind.

Won Eleven of Thirteen Games With Team Riddled With Injuries

CARDINALS GAIN

By SID FEDER

Associated Press Sports Writer

Jimmy Dykes is the number one "Hard Luck Guy" of this big-time baseball show, and his Chicago White Sox are supposed to be a crew of cripples but you'd never know it to look at them now.

For they've headed home today at the end of the "shuttlecock" road trip any collection of Sox has had in years—a trip on which they won 11 of 13 games. It's been that that boosted the overhead on balls tremendously all through the eastern parks, and dropped right out of the second division into a fourth-place tie in the American League.

All this, mind you, in spite of a string of breaks even tougher than either Frankie Frisch and his Cardinals or Mickey Cochrane and his Tigers have had to take. In all the time to time this season injuries have taken their toll on top hitters, Big Haddix and Luke Appling, and such others of their stars as Mule Knerich, Mule Haas and Larry Rosenthal. Still Dykes has shown their ability to slug with any club in the loop.

The Sox completed the jobs of leaving the second division yesterday by whipping the Yanks in a streak to eight straight with a doubleheader sweep over the athletics, smashing out 28 hits for 11-3 and 8-3 decisions. Meanwhile the Red Sox trouncing the Tigers 12-3 again lifted them to the cellar, the cloisters moved into a deadlock with Detroit.

Yanks Having Trouble

The Yankees, meantime, were having trouble with the hoary St. Louis Browns, getting no better than a split despite Lou Gehrig's 37th and 38th homers to take the big slugger lead. After winning the opener easily, 10-3, they fell 5-4 before Sad Sam Knott's pitching in the nightcap.

Cleveland Indians' winning streak was the most longer than the White Sox, was snapped at nine games as the Nats whitewashed the opener of a twin bill 11-3 from Jess Haines, found Monte Weaver too tough in the nightcap and lost 4-3.

The Cardinals saved something out of a more-or-less disastrous week by pulling into a game behind the league-leading Chicago Cubs on the National League loop with a doubleheader victory over the Boston Bees, 8-1 and 7-6. Both the Cubs were getting no better than an even break with the Phillies, losing the opener 5-4 after 11 innings on Bucky Walter's wildness in the final frame and then collapsed 4-1 before the four-hit pitching of Schoolboy Passeau in the nightcap.

The Pirates, dropping their fifth straight by a 4-3 margin to the Dodgers on the strength of Van Mungo's 14th victory, finished 5-3 but lost their third-place standing as the improved New York Giants split with the slipping Cincinnati Reds, lotting the latter 7-2 after taking the opener 4-2.

Leads Can. Olympic Cyclists

Lionel Coleman of Hamilton, Ont., is Canada's best bet in the cycling events at the 1936 Olympics. He is on his way to the Games now with more than 100 other athletes. The 19-year-old pedal pusher cleaned up all in sight in Toronto. He won the quarter-mile, the half-mile and the five-mile races.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, July 30.—(AP)—Mickey Cochrane is expected to wind up in the Detroit front office as general manager of the Tigers next season, Claude Jonnard, young right hander who has been doing a swell job of relief pitching for the Phillies, has supplanting Sandy Lesile of Brooklyn as the No. 1 hero of Miss Pinkie Rink . . . the suggestion that Babe Ruth succeed Bill Terry as manager of the Giants left owner Horace Stoneham, Bill's personal friend, quite cold . . .

Did you know, or do you care that Hightower of Austria holds the world's left-hand snatch record in the 165-pound class? . . . Tom Sweeney, who turns out a breezy column for the Worcester, (Mass.) Telegram, claims Boston has that Joe DiMaggio ever falls under the .300 mark he'll buy Mug Ruffing of Di Mag to the left field bleachers . . . Slat members of the Atlanta crackers are being scouted by Major League clubs.

Just to show you what a little punch will do, the Yankees, who had a habit of belting homers by one run last season, already have won 19 by that margin this year . . .

Leave it to Jimmy Corcoran of the Chicago American to turn out the total comic of the year . . . Radcliff of the White Sox the "years of years" in the matter of "July" Golf experts are really enthusiastic about Craig Wood, 15-round Bob Dobuque, Ia., girl who won the Women's Western Open championship at Oakland Hills, Mich., . . . She qualified with a 77, two under par, and then romped for seven . . . If her game has any weaknesses, Al Watrous and Marvin Dutra, veteran pros, haven't been able to spot them.

OSHAWA LEADERS DEFEAT KINGSTON

"Doc" Rowden Hits Homer And Two Triples in 16-hit Attack

Oshawa, July 30.—(CP)—Oshawa started the week-end in first place in the Central Ontario Baseball League series by handling Kingston Ponies 8 to 5 in Memorial here Saturday. Ken Biddle hurled the route for the winners getting the last two innings.

"Doc" Rowden knocked out a homer and two triples to lead Oshawa's 16-hit attack which drove "Tammy" Jamieson to the showers. He was replaced by Williams, who pitched brilliant relief pitching. But lost their third-place standing as the improved New York Giants split with the slipping Cincinnati Reds, lotting the latter 7-2 after taking the opener 4-2.

'Sunny Jim' Bottomley Has Played Last Game

New York, July 30 (AP)—Old Sunny Jim Bottomley said goodbye to the diamond yesterday.

They gave him a rousing send-off at the Yankee Stadium, the band played "Auld Lang Syne" when he came to bat and the fans rose to their feet and cheered.

That hit probably was his last in the big leagues. It ended his 16 years of sparkling first baseing, first with the St. Louis Cardinal championship teams of the late '20s and the early '30s, then with the Cincinnati Reds and finally with the St. Louis Browns, he's decided to hang up his glove and spikes.

An aching back is the reason. The 38-year-old star is through in the big time will take care of him down on the farm he bought with a view to the future.

ELIOWITZ AND FERRARO BOLSTER MONTREAL BACKFIELD

JOHNNY FERRARO

ABE ELIOWITZ

Montreal's senior football club starting its season with the depths of last year's disastrous season, have lined up for the coming gridiron schedule just about the greatest pair of backfield aces ever to toss the pigskin around a professional field. Montreal has taken big Abe Eliowitz from Ottawa Rough Riders and Johnny Ferraro from Hamilton Tigers. Ferraro who will coach the Montreal team, led Hamilton Tigers to the Dominion championship two years ago and then stepped in to form a stumping brigade and lead them into the Dominion finals last season. Eliowitz, kicker, plunging and forward passer is rated without peer as an all-round backfielder. He will act as assistant coach under Ferraro. Ferraro hails from Cornell and Eliowitz from Michigan.

Petes Now in Second Place In C. O. B. L. Standing by Defeating Locals by 5 to 2

One Bad Innings Gave Winners Enough Runs to Coast Home

BAWDEN HURLS WELL

Allows Only Six Hits, Struck Out Seven And Walked One

Belleville dropped a 5-3 decision to the Petes before a good crowd in Riverside Park yesterday. It was a nice ball game and turned into a pitching duel between Johnny Bawden and "Spook" Scriver. Bawden was touched for but six hits as he struck out seven and walked one. Scriver held the Locals down to four hits while fanning six and issuing three walks. His support was much better than that of his mates.

The Petes bunched four hits, including a triple, with two errors to score four runs in the third. They added another in the fifth after Belleville had tallied twice in the fourth. Despite their six errors the visitors had all the fielding features. Bawden's fine pitching during one hand catch off P. Cullaine, Belleville outfielder pulled off a hard foul fly, St. Louis ran far to his left to take a fly also drawing applause with a neat running catch. Both aids had a rally double play.

Bill Callaghan is the leading hitter at bat with two in four trips. Burton, Petes' catcher banged out triples and Covert and Kearns got the other two hits. Smith, Urwick, Bennett and Hann were the only Belleville batters to connect safely.

Game Lost in Third

With one out in the first, St. Louis singled but was forced at second by Smith and Weir flied out. Kearns was safe on an error in the Petes' half but a snappy double play on him off Urwick walked in the second and Bennett singled but Vinny died on third. Starr was safe on an error for Peterboro but was forced for the third out. Belleville went down in order in the third but the Petes scored four runs in their half. Covert singled and was sacrificed. He went to third on Kearns' hit, the latter stealing. Both tallied on W. Callaghan's hit to left. Bill taking second on the throw and third when the boys got away from Latchford. Burton banged second and Callaghan scored on Hann's bad throw of his grounder. Weir's triple in the nine sent Burton home.

Belleville got two back in the fourth. Weir and Latchford drew walks and both advanced a base on Urwick's hit. Bennett's fly scored Weir. Hann's hit sent Latchford to third and he counted on Bawden's fly. The Petes failed to threaten again except for the fifth when they scored a run on W. Q. Callaghan's single and Burton's triple to centre. And Belleville did not get a runner second from the fourth inning on as Bawden fanned Bennett and Hann to keep the batters stopping up or grounding out.

AMATEUR BALL

(By The Canadian Press)

There was a noticeable tightening up in Ontario's Senior Amateur Baseball circles during the week-end as teams in all three major leagues got within shooting distance of the playoffs. In practically all cases, however, season-long leaders continued to maintain their margins.

Oshawa seems to be the stumbling block of the team that went through all competition in the province could offer last year. Tonight, the 1936 champions fell a 13-3 victim of the Oshawa team, as the Lakeshore boys increased their lead in first place in the Central Ontario League.

Ken Biddle hurled shutout ball for Oshawa until the last two innings when Hamilton scored four runs and two triples to lead Oshawa's 16-hit attack. Jack Williams was called in to replace Tammy Jamieson on the Kingston mound.

Peterborough kept on the heels of Oshawa with a 5 victory over Belleville, with the latter team going further down the ladder. It was a pitching duel between Johnny Bawden of Belleville and Spook Scriver. Scriver pitched four-hit ball and struck six. Bawden allowed six and struck out seven.

Hamilton moved into third as Inter-county pepped up with Moodus clinching a place in the section playoffs with a 6-3 victory over Brantford. A four-run rally in the eighth did the trick.

Dundas Now Second

Deadlocked for second place, Dundas slipped past Leonards with an 8-6 win that gave Dundas the edge for the remaining berth in this section. Only three games remain to be played.

In the Eastern division of the Intercounty Leonards moved to the Brantford's loss, the game put each out in front by a half-game margin. Dunlop outhit Cobalt 8 to 5 but got five errors.

London continued to lead the Western division but went 11 innings before nosing out a 5-4 victory over its west-end game with Stratford. Jimmy Mosley knocked out two home-runs to pace London's victory.

Carling Kerrlake pitched for Stratford under a one-game penalty while the team argues with the Ontario Baseball Association decision for a certificate.

Three straight after one was out in the ninth gave Merritton a 6-5 victory over Welland in a Niagara District League contest. Two men got Merritton within half a game of Welland in the battle for second place.

Chippewa defeated Port Colborne 9-2, dashing Port Colborne's hopes for a play-off berth. The win put Chippewa among the first four teams.

In a third Niagara District game Thorold defeated Niagara Falls 4-3. George Jamieson, Niagara Falls, pitched a one-hit ball but in the game in the ninth, when he failed to score when a fly fell safely.

BOUNDARY BELTS PLAY IMPORTANT PART IN GAMES

Buffalo Bisons Stopped After Winning Nine Straight

LEAFS WIN

Albany And Montreal Put on Real Scoring Bees

(By The Associated Press)

The Buffalo Bisons' nine consecutive victories and giving the league-leading Rochester Red Wings a lot to think about as they moved into a threatening position, the Buffalo Bisons finally have been stopped by the same method, that produced many of their victories.

A pair of home runs played the leading role in Newark's 5-3 victory yesterday, that ended the Bison string and proved the Bears are the team to beat for the rest of the race yet. While Bill Harris and Mervin Lowe gave up 17 blows, Roy Schalk's boundary ball with the bases full in the ninth and second inning and Johnny McCarthy's with two aboard in the ninth were the big blows.

Big innings and four-ply wallops played important parts in nearly all of yesterday's game as Rochester split a twi-bill with the revamped Baltimore Orioles to increase their margin to two games, Albany and Montreal battled to a draw and Toronto's Maple Leafs took their fourth straight from the Syracuse Chiefs, 9 to 1.

Ray Benge, obtained from Rochester 13 to 4, the Orioles scored five runs in the third inning and added five in the ninth. Paul Whitehead no big bunches as they won the nightcap 6 to 4. Both pitchers gave three homers, including one of record-breaking 27th circuit clout by Estil Crabtree's second of the day, Bob Weiland, League leading rifle-shooting catcher, by hurdling the left ball for his 18th victory of the season.

Albany and Montreal gave the fans exhibitions of concentrated scoring as the Senators won the first game 10-9 behind Dave Harris' four-for-five and Ben Sankey's last flinging and Montreal came back with an 11-6 triumph. Ethan Allen's home run in the ninth inning of the opener, scoring Jimmy Ripple ahead of him, Royals nearly doubled that in the fifth inning of the second game, scoring all their runs then.

While George McGahan contributed a single, double and triple and ringing was the big factor in Toronto's triumph over Syracuse, as he got four singles and fanned five.

Gananoque Canoe Club Wins in North Division

Ottawa, July 30—(CP)—Gananoque Canoe Club paddlers, their supremacy in the northern division of the Canadian Canoe Association again evident, prepared today for the C.C.A.'s annual meet Aug. 1 at Kingston, Ont.

Over the serious threats of two Ottawa clubs, Gananoque won five first places, four seconds and three thirds in the intermediate and senior regatta here Saturday on the placid waters of the Ottawa River.

Ottawa Canoe and Gananoque Club was second with 29, five points behind the Gananoque eleven and third place. Close behind was Carleton Place with 17 while Brantford and Kingston with 6-3 victory over one point, Ottawa Britannia, which heads the membership of the C.C.A. Amyot, Captain and manager of Canada's Olympic paddling forces, was third.

Three disqualifications marred Saturday's regatta, in one senior war canoe C Lavalley's Rideau crew finished first and was announced winner. However, it was learned later, one man fell out of the boat which, finished with only 19 men, automatically disqualifying it. The Gananoque crew of Johnny Wing, Bob Hunt second, won the senior race.

There were 14 events on the program, all but one half mile, and two were run from the quarter on senior events in two-mile canoe races were all evenly contested and Gananoque had all it could do to keep its supremacy intact.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

No matter how they perform it seems as though the local senior club has to have one bad inning, usually sufficient to lose a ball game. On Saturday the locals outplayed the Petes in every frame, except the third, when the Waterloo crew up to their old tricks of booting the ball and presenting the opposition with runs. In that inning the Petes scored four of their five runs, enough to win the game. Pitcher Bawden down Teddy Renn had booted two and Cliff Bennett threw one wild. These errors coupled with three hits gave the Petes just enough edge to win. It was tough on Johnnie Bawden, who turned splendid ball and deserved a better fate than he was forced to accept.

As the Oshawa Cherries downed the Kingston Ponies 12 to 5 in the Memorial City on Saturday, the win locked up by the Petes coupled with their four point lead over the Oshawa team, left Belleville in the C.O.B.L. Today we find the Petes holding down second place, last 11 games and resting in second place. On Wednesday Skinner Johnson's Oshawa team invades Belleville twilight fixture, that seems much like a ball game. Should the Belleville sheiks happen to upset the dope and down the Petes, well and good, but we're even in the habit of how the Petes. Incidentally the Oshawa team has improved over the year was versus the Oshawa club and that reverses handed the Cherries a trimming in the first game of the season. It will be locals away from home for the remainder of the season and the chances of the fast-traveling Petes. Incidentally Ed McIver is slated to be on the mound for Oshawa.

Getting back to Saturday's game: The Belleville gang supplied the fireworks with the two double-play sensations of the first order. Roy Smith leaped the proverbial mile to the air to spear Pat Callaghan's line drive over his head. "Speedy" St. Louis ran to the barrier to grab a high foul, while Cliff Bennett made the fine, assisted by the thoughtful sounds of applause. It seems too bad, that the local kids have to indulge in such thrills in each game to mitigate their chances in victory. However, they were also the beautiful pitchers' battle and only that third inning lapse when the Petes batted around, aided by three Belleville errors, the opposition never had a chance. Johnnie Bawden and Spook Scriver by the calibre of their hurling was the big factor in Toronto's triumph over Syracuse, as he got four singles and fanned five.

Then to add insult to injury Vinny Urwick, after coming through with a much-needed hit in the third, wandered off into dreamland and started a rapping off of Spook Scriver's delivery.

The locals had Scriver well on the run in the second inning when Urwick was out with Urwick on third as Smith stole second. On the play Eddie Latchford, the Petes' catcher, did not try to catch Renn going down. Instead he threw to third in the hope of catching Urwick off the base. Vinny had a play, that stopped the Petes' rally on a most lucrative play.

Dean Ford, who played splendid ball with the Petes last season, and who, right here, has completely redeemed himself as a baseball player, Dean arrived in Belleville on Friday and accompanied the Belleville team to Peterboro on Saturday. He is back at his old job at the Belleville Y.M.C.A. and quite desirous of playing for the local Petes. Despite the fact he has only played in one game with the Petes this year, he cannot appear in a local uniform, as he is not registered. All players in the O.B.A.A. must be signed on or before July 15th and Dean failed to get his name on the turning house. "Tough luck Dean, but we hope to see you out next year."

Manager Skinner Johnson introduced a new face to the fans on Saturday in the person of Ken Stewart, ex-Belleville hockey player. Ken played right field and put up a good game. Incidentally his lone single started the Petes rally in that hectic third and he scored the home club's first run.

During the game Saturday Peterboro fans were heard remarking on the general direction of Johnnie Bawden's tough luck kid, if you got any support out of your mates you'd be too bad for Skinner's gang today." All of which was more truth than poetry.

On Saturday the annual King-Queen baseball-softball-sports-ball game was not played due to the inability of the Limestone City boys to get to the Whip on that date. The game will be played this coming Saturday at 4 o'clock at the Cricket Field.

Considerable interest has been aroused over the Class-Carden Intermediate play-off games this evening. Incidentally the loser will be eliminated from the play-offs, while the winner gets fourth position in the loop. Then tomorrow evening the Belleville-Sarnia and the Oshawa-Peterboro series will renew hostilities in their battle for first place. Having played a six-all tie before this evening the local senior club and the Kiwanis Club will play an exhibition game at the Fair Grounds. The Kiwanis juniors have been officially named as entrants in the Hastings County junior league and will advance to the junior O. B. A. play-down through the right. They expect to meet the Niagara juniors in the final round commencing late this month.

After denying that Umpire Al Tyson had been in any way penalized, during the fracas that followed last Wednesday's C.O.B.L. game in Kingston, the Limestone City sport columnist had the following three paragraphs in his column on Saturday:

And just so that the league and officials can have the benefit of the facts, I would like to announce Umpire Tyson to be none other than a fearless kind of the classic man, but he needn't worry over Mr. Tyson as far as Kingston is concerned. It will probably be a long day before the Ponies will tolerate Tyson, for they have stated they will refuse to play if he is in charge.

What really worries the Oshawa scribe is the fact that a whole flock of fans were even in the Oshawa players, who'in their Wednesday game in Kingston said their shots as far as hits and errors go. The trouble is that the Oshawa players have not yet decided to their own ball park, where the fans will probably have to be the league a couple of times. Outdown, where they can't declare a game on account of hitters.

Kingston outhit Oshawa 14 to 8 largely because in some of the hits the Oshawa infielders wouldn't let a chance on errors. Both May at Miller were playing it safe as some of the blows looked too hot for the fielders and didn't get where the balls were hit. By the way they managed to keep defensive record clean, though, the Oshawa scribe says, they certainly deserve errors and plenty them.

The Missing Man

by

Mary R.P. Hatch

In the heart of a true woman there are veils of pity and forgiveness. In these elements she approaches nearly to the divine spirit, which would never withhold the shrinking heart. Constance had long conceived how a noble nature might be, by evil associations perverted, but until now she had felt no particular sympathy with the possible struggles of this man. All was changed now. She saw in him the unfortunate child grown to manhood, the victim of wicked environment. It might have been Vane hastened, and who should say in that case that he might not have succumbed as this man did?

"Will you not tell me," she said again, "how it all happened?"...

A new light struggled into his face.

"Constance," he said, "I am not all bad. I am indeed Vane's brother and I long ago knew of his search for me. I am a forger, a bank defaulter, but I am not a murderer."

Constance drew back. She had forgotten about Lenora in the excitement of the interview. Now the dreadful charge came back with terrifying force, and she could not prevent the repellent movement.

"No, as Heaven is my witness. But of what use are vows in one like me. Here are my written words. You shall tell you all—everything. I wrote it long ago, for I meant to give up to Vane; only your beauty kept me in spite of my will to leave. I came here to give you this paper tonight: for that, and nothing else; but you see I was led out of my resolve when I saw you. Will you promise me one thing?"

"I think so. Let me hear your request."

"Let this interview be secret and do not read this paper until a week has passed."

What could she do? She was a weak, loving woman whose sympathies outweighed her sense of justice. She had in mind the Saviour's words to one who had broken the law: "Neither do I condemn thee. Go, and sin no more," and she said, gravely and earnestly:

"I promise not to read it till a week has passed. Would you like to see Clare and Percy?"

"Yes, if I may."

Without speaking she led the way to the room where lay Clare in her own bed and Percy in his crib, pictures of childish grace and innocence.

"I was once like that," he said, bending over and kissing them very tenderly. "Clare loved me from the first," he said. "What can you tell her?"

"I shall tell her that you were her Uncle Victor, and when she is older she will understand, perhaps."

"How changed I am. Constance! Once so repellant, now so forgiving."

"It is because you were trying to deceive me. I almost hated you at times for that, but now it is different. You are changed."

"Yes, I am changed; but I scarcely know what has changed me, unless it was the ring my mother left me, my different surroundings, the sudden, sour weeping influence. Perhaps it was all combined, and perhaps I am not naturally bad."

"That is it, I think, Constance, eagerly; "and you will go away where you can live a good, honorable life, will you not?"

"Is it not too late for that?"

"It is never too late—never. Why you have only to call back the line of noble virtues inherited from your good parents. You are not naturally depraved, like some."

"No; I think I should like to be good. Evil has no attraction for me. But I know no better. I was nurtured upon wickedness. My talents were coined into evil deeds. I did not believe in honesty. I had no faith in Christianity. I thought it simply a clever Kindhearted God, so far as I knew of it, was linked with many perversions. Even Lenora, though she loved me, aided and abetted my wicked schemes. Can you understand it?"

"I think I do."

"Then you will understand that when I came to Grovedale there was a change in me. I saw at a glance that the good, honest citizens could not conceive of me as a villain; your uncle's simple faith in me touched me to the quick; the children's kisses sometimes were like fire coals to me. My mother's sighs spoke continually to my soul. But still I kept on. It was nothing for me to deceive the public. I always had a strange power over people. I meant to turn back, but each step made the task more difficult. But for you—I will say no more."

He took her hands, looked into her face, and was gone. Constance sank down into her chair and began to cry silently. But there was joy in her tears, joy for herself and Vane, but sorrow for the one who had left her; who had gone out with the world again because he must. What would be the end of it all?

She arose, and with compressed lips hid the closely written sheets in her drawer, and she did not read them for two weeks instead of one.

Meanwhile, Mr. Carter was alone in the great home, with Tilly only for company. The man known as Primus Estes was in prison, but with comfortable surroundings and cheered by a message from the stance couched in four words, "Courage! Then to his heart's wish she was still with Mrs. Fry.

No one wondered at the absence of Mr. Hamilton, not even the minister, and no one had the least suspicion that he would never return,—no one but Constance.

THE CONFESSION

Chapter XI

I am the twin brother of Vane Hamilton, and when an infant I was stolen by Solomon Marks and his mother in the hopes of receiving a heavy ransom, as my father was a very wealthy man at that time. But there was raised such a hue and cry that Marks did not dare approach with offers of restoration. I was hidden away for months, and my father had fallen in love with Bess and my abductors fell that the hope of reward would scarcely balance the fear of being brought to justice. Therefore I was kept concealed and allowed to grow up among their evil associates in the midst of criminals, if not in equator and wretchedness.

Marks and his mother were uniformly kind to me, and as I grew up, Marks thought he saw in me means of gain to himself, for he fancied I had talents which might be made useful. Accordingly I was sent to a good school, where I remained until I was fourteen. I learned easily and well, and never forgot Hunkinstone to say nothing about my associates. Thus early was I trained to secrecy.

The boys at the school did not appeal to my better nature. They were ruffianly bullies, the most of them, and might, rather than, rulad in the playground. Thank boys were thrust to the wall, but when they got the chance these same timid boys were themselves the tyrants. All deceived the masters, when they could with impunity, and the teachers themselves were by no means impartial nor just. In short there was nothing at that school to develop the latent good in my nature, and I returned at the age of fourteen to Marks, who had a partner at this time named Soule. No doubt they were engaged in various undertakings, but I did not know anything about until I was sixteen. Then I was invested with some of the secrets of the gang of which Marks and Soule were the leaders.

I do not recollect that I shrank from their enterprises, which were chiefly such as required great skill and ingenuity—not actual robberies, but dishonest schemes of a pronounced nature. Marks had an office and organized a peculiar kind of business. He sent out letters to business men informing them that on such date their buildings would be consumed by fire, professing to know through the medium of clairvoyance that such attempts were meditated. At first no notice was taken of the communications, but after several warnings were followed by the predicted conflagration, the matter began to be inquired into, and he became interested themselves in the matter. Marks was taken into custody, but he appeared innocent of any criminal knowledge, laying it all to a peculiar gift by which he could tell when such fires were meditated; that was all, and he was released. Afterwards a new feature was added to their communications. Marks professed to receive inspirations that if such sums as he stated were sent to a given address no fire would take place. The sums were not large, and if paid all went well. If not paid the buildings were burned.

There was no visible connection between Marks and the address he gave, and my efforts of the most noted detectives could establish anything likely to indicate such an unthinkable. Marks strenuously maintained his utter ignorance of any gang of incendiaries, and the matter was shrouded in mystery. A regular bureau of information was established, and its edicts were obeyed by business men, who said as little about it as possible, however. Nevertheless, the affair got into the newspapers, and was widely commented upon, as many will recollect. That a connection did really exist between Marks and certain incendiaries I firmly believe, but that it was so wide branched as to fall of detection by local police efforts was evident. I was in Marks' office, and even to me he professed utter lack of knowledge, and it was his aim to keep me in ignorance.

Marks would fall into a trance, or hypnotic state, and I would write down what he said and send it to the merchant whose establishment was threatened.

I cannot say these letters were not genuine—indeed, I think they were, and that his marvellous powers were communications received from some other medium at a distance. The case was most remarkable, and the "bureau" was in existence five or six years. Then Marks was warned to leave the city by a special edict, and he turned his talents to new achievements. We all went West.—Marks, Soule, and I—and we established banks in new growing communities, forging our charters which more fortunate young people are nurtured. Understand me—I am not acquiring means to live here in our cities accounted necessary for the preserving natures of the rich and mighty. We were all natural communists, and while we were never guilty of small robberies or personal assaults, we looked with pitying tolerance on those who were confined to regular work which was loathed by the limited range of their faculties. We knew nothing of legitimate employments, for we had been brought up outside its limits.

But for all this Lenora was beautiful, and true to me, and she gave me her hand with all the graciousness and sweetness of the most high-bred and cultured lady. She was very beautiful, as I have said, and she owed much of her lovliness to the unique color of her hair, which was of an emerald tint, the color of the sea. She was always beside me, and she bore well her part in the society of the mushroom towns where we established our banking institutions. I was far more popular than either Marks or Soula, though they were more clever and subtle than I. My free-handed manners and my wife's beauty and pleasant ways were important adjuncts of success.

TARZAN AND THE L— (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Tarzan, dreadful, mysterious, stalked the dark jungles of Africa. And the people who dwelt in the shadows of the forest were seized with a fear which they had never known before, for they knew not where the claws of the Terrible Visitor would strike next.

The jungle folk were familiar enough with the facial talons of the lion, the leopard and the panther. Each of these beasts they had fought. Sometimes they had slain; sometimes they had been slain. But there was no mystery in these stark, primitive encounters.

The Taloned Death, however, was a thing apart—an awesome Thing that struck silently, without warning. Once it struck, no victim lived to relate the horrible experiences. And the Jungle, dwelling place of a thousand mysteries, kept its frightful secret.

Tarzan of the Apes heard rumors of the strange death, but he paid little heed, for he knew the black people's credulity to superstition and exaggeration. Then, one day, within his own domain, he came suddenly upon an actual victim of the Mysterious Death!

REBELS REPORTED 35 MILES FROM MADRID

Hon. R. Rogers, Former Federal Public Works Minister, Dies at Guelph

HON. ROBT. ROGERS DIES AT GUELPH, INVALID 2 YEARS

Filled Several Cabinet Posts in Federal Government

LAKEFIELD NATIVE

Recaptured Winnipeg Seat in 1930, His Last Election

Guelph, Ont., July 21 (CP)—Hon. Robert Rogers, who filled important cabinet posts in several Conservative federal administrations, died in the Homewood Sanitarium early today. He was 72 years old.

Mr. Rogers has been in the sanitarium for about two years and death was caused from infirmities of advancing years.

His last appearance in a federal election was in 1930 when he recaptured the South Winnipeg seat from J. O. McDiarmid by whom he was defeated in 1926.

Was 72 Years of Age.

Mr. Rogers was born at Lakefield, Ont., in Peterborough County, Mar. 1, 1864. He went to Western Canada before he was 30 years old and entered business at Chilliwack, Man. His first venture into politics came when he was 29 years old. He contested the Manitoba constituency of Minnedosa and was defeated by only 13 votes by Hon. Thomas Greenway, leader of the Liberal opposition.

He was defeated again by Mr. Greenway in 1892, and went down in his first federal contest in 1896 when he was defeated by R. L. Richardson in Lisgar.

Heads Public Works.

He was successful in the Manitoba elections in 1899, soon afterward becoming Commissioner of Public Works. In 1911 he accepted the same portfolio of Minister of the Interior in the cabinet of Sir Robert Borden at Ottawa. A year later he relinquished that portfolio and became Minister of Public Works. He did not run in the campaign that returned the Union government in 1917. He was defeated in 1921 in Lisgar, but in 1926 won in South Winnipeg over Hon. T. R. Norris, former Manitoba premier, who was defeated by Mr. McDiarmid in 1926.

His wife, Aurelia Regina, daughter of Charles W. Chesterfield, died in 1934. There is one son, Robert George Rogers.

EX-POLICEMAN TO HIGH OFFICE

Auckland, New Zealand, July 21 (C.P. Cable)—William Joseph Jordan, former London policeman, received an automobile send-off today as he and his wife embarked for Great Britain where he will assume New Zealand's High Commissioner in London.

Jordan succeeds Sir James Parr, whose extended term of office expires at the end of this year.

Fear Child Drowned In Old Millrace

Peterborough, Ont., July 21 (CP)—Police are dragging the old race near the Quaker Oats plant here today in search of the body of seven year old Bobbie Holland, son of Chas. Holland. It is feared the lad has been drowned in the slimy water. The child had been bathing at Inverica Beach yesterday and on his way home left his older brothers and sisters saying he was going home another way.

He did not reach his house. Police found the shoes he had been wearing on the bank of the raceway.

KING SURROUNDED BY YOUNGER MEN

Appointments To Royal Household Are Younger

London, July 21 (CP)—While press comment today on the new appointments to the Royal household was naturally restrained, it was noted that the ring gradually is replacing older with younger men.

The Times remarks: "It may be permitted to say—since there is always a tendency among the older of us in time to the view that a long-established staff is irreplaceable—that it is absolutely right and fitting that a young King should surround himself with his own friends and contemporaries."

The Times concludes with a tribute to Lord Wigram, another private secretary, "who has rendered the final service of establishing the new origin on firm foundations and who would be the first to insist that a change was now desirable."

Major Hardings Succeeds.

Lord Wigram is succeeded by Major Alexander Hardinge, equerry and private secretary to George V, King George from 1928. Major Hardinge is the oldest surviving son of Lord Hardinge of Penshurst, who had a distinguished career in the diplomatic service. He served overseas during the Great War.

Wigram was a "Grenvey" of the late Lord Kitchener, at the time he was commander-in-chief in India.

Has Distinguished Career.

Major Hardinge, who has been a page to George V, to Prince of Wales, asked Kitchener to find him an aide for his tour of India in 1905. Wigram became assistant to the chief of staff during this royal visit to India. He was appointed to the Royal household immediately after the coronation of George and Queen Mary and subsequently King George from 1928. Major Hardinge is the oldest surviving son of Lord Hardinge of Penshurst, who had a distinguished career in the diplomatic service. He served overseas during the Great War.

BAND CONCERT IS MUCH ENJOYED

Before a large and highly appreciative audience in the Park grounds on Sunday evening members of the Belleville Municipal band presented almost a full hour's concert as part of their regular summer series. The program, unfortunately cool weather the afternoon was above that generally experienced at such open air concerts. The band was conducted through the most difficult selections and familiar compositions by bandmaster Lt. Fred Johnson.

NOMINAL SUM TO TRANSPORT VETERANS

WEED GROWTH IN RIVER QUITE HEAVY

A fantasse sea of thick weeds now covers the river mouth of the Moira and the channel at Bayhurst through which boats must be laboriously poled when owners use these channels. Believed due to the hot weather and high temperatures of the past few days, the weed growth is exceptionally heavy and dense.

WOODEN BRIDGE IS UNSAFE FOR TRAFFIC

Occasional car owners who have been using Victoria Park as a driveway are warned through the machine of a small fine now placed on the structure by the Board of Parks that the wooden bridge leading into the park is unsafe for all but pedestrian traffic.

'LUNGE' START TO ROWLETTE BAY

'Lunge are biting more freely in the Bay of Quinte with the advent of cooler weather. Benjamin Ritman, well known Picton fisherman, landed a fine 14-pound specimen while fishing in the bay near Glen Island on Saturday. Some difficulty was experienced in landing the fish.

HEAVY DEW SEEN AT BOWLING GREENS

Dew so heavy that lawn bowlers of the city were almost forced to forego their game on the Victoria greens at the Fair Grounds last evening on account of the slipperiness of the grass was reported today. After a period of excessive heat and of rainless weather in the district the presence of the heavy dew in this section of the province was taken up by one weather-wise observer as but another sign of continued dryness.

Covey of Wild Ducks Near Filtration Plant

Protected for the past two or three years from shooting hazards and gun carrying poachers, denizens of Victoria Park at the city filtration plant have increased in number and greatly increased in numbers during the period the plant attendants. At the present time the natural sanctuary affords habitation for covers of wild ducks, a pair of perennial loons, ball-diving grebes, and other water fowl. One of the newest arrivals yesterday was a huge crane. "The biggest bird of this species I have ever seen," stated Manager E. T. Austin today. Squirrels are also uncommonly bold and saucy, have also taken up quarters in the trees which fringe the park.

ALL SMALL BOATS SHOULD CARRY LIGHTS

In order to avoid any duplication of the Muskoka tragedy in which one life was lost when a skiff was run down by a motorboat, drowning the occupant, it was pointed out today by Harbormaster Robt. Gourly that all small boats using the bay or waterings should be equipped with sufficient lights to show their position on the water. "Even if it is only a punt, it should carry a lantern or some other light just as a safeguard," it was advised. A slow speed limit for boats entering and leaving the harbor limits must also be observed, according to regulations, it was pointed out.

COWS PASTURING IN WHEAT FIELD

Deciding that his field of wheat was ripe enough to cut regardless Mr. John Donovan, just north of the city, moved a binder into it and commenced work. Too short to cut with this machine, it mowed the next trip. Blades of this machine also failed to reach the short stalk, and cut the ears.

The grain field which showed promise of a bumper crop in August has now become a pasture field for a large herd of cows owned by him.

FAILURE OF CROPS HURST EMPLOYMENT

Victims of more or less prolonged employment on highways, on which construction work is now starting throughout the province, according to the Unemployment Bureau this morning.

"We hate to have to turn the majority of them away" said Superintendent Jack Mann "but the nature of these highway jobs call for a limited number of men. Most of these men on city relief get the first chance and by the time these are hooked after the list is pretty well cleft. We have a number of applications from people who claim they have a number of dependants and say they are much older than they actually are.

Failure of canning factory crops, which have been a source of revenue and a source of employment has been the chief cause of the increased number of unemployed this year.

S. A. YOUNG PEOPLE ARE ENTERTAINED

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Brown were host and hostess on the S. members of the Salvation Army Young People's Legion at their cottage at Rossmore. Forty young people were present. Early in the evening a game of softball was enjoyed, after which the host was host when a stiff wind. Around a blazing camp fire the company sat toasting marshmallow roast. Later on the lawn, a program of choruses were sung and short addresses given by Capt. Cook, Honeyander, Lieut. Grace Etchells and Corporal Robinson. Mrs. Brown spoke of her pleasure in entertaining those present and President Clyde Naylor offered a vote of thanks on behalf of the members of the Legion to the host and hostess for the lovely evening. Closing with "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" and the sing and prayer offered by the Chaplain, Miss Irene Young.

STEEL SAFE DOOR REFUSES TO OPEN

Defying the efforts of local and Toronto locksmiths to open it, a safe in the office of A. E. Elliott, Peterboro lawyer, is successfully holding its own in a self imposed closure strike.

After his office staff had departed last Wednesday Mr. Elliott had occasion to go to the safe but the big door could not be coaxed open. Thursday a locksmith friend of the staff failed also. A Peterboro locksmith tried and failed.

Toronto smiths are now on the job. They have bored holes in both front and rear and have employed nearly everything but nitro-glycerine, but the safe door remains impervious to their efforts.

Scissors Grinder Revives Old Sounds

A sound long since forgotten and believed irretrievably extinct in these parts was again heard in Belleville today when the ringing of a bell on the streets of the East Hill aroused the residents' curiosity. Subsequent meetings revealed an old-fashioned scissors grinder and umbrella-mender slowly wending his way along the street and ringing his conventional bell of introduction. "Scissors sharpened and 'brella mended", slowly drawled the peddler as he continued his ringing and carried his bell-ringing to the customary stand and foot-propelled grindstone. So flustered were residents in seeing shadows of the past, that the poor scissors grinder found business sadly wanting.

Stricken Taking Medicine, Tweed Man Dies in Garden

Timothy Hopkins Found Dead, Believed Stroke Victim

HAD BEEN UNWELL

Tweed, July 21—(Special)—Lying face downward near a small tree outside the woodshed of his home at Tweed shortly after nine o'clock this morning, the body of Timothy Hopkins, well-known resident was discovered by Mrs. R. Masters and Mrs. Louis Johnson, neighbors who had passed the home on their way to do some gardening. A brake of medicine was found beside the body. Death was believed to have occurred at the rear of his home and suffered while the aged man was in the act of taking some of the medicine.

Summoning the nearest neighbors, Mr. Samuel Dafoe, Coroner Dr. M. G. Mabee, was called and viewed the body in company with Constable Clare Hayes. No inquest was considered necessary, it was stated.

Born in Hastings County, Mr. Hopkins had carried on the occupation of farming nearly all his life retiring in Tweed some fifteen years ago. Since then he had lived simply, making many friends throughout the district. On Monday he had complained of a numbing pain in one arm, and of late had apparently been in poor health. Investigation proved that his bed had not been slept in during the night, leading to the belief that death had overtaken him prior to retiring.

One son living in New York has been advised of the death.

POLICE BLOTTER

Local police today were asked to investigate the reported sale of soft drinks in the city being made by out-of-town manufacturers and allegedly peddled in Belleville. Local dealers and manufacturers complained to the authorities, that the bottles of soft drinks were being peddled from door to door at cut rate prices. The matter is being investigated.

L. W. Smith, Point Anne, reported the loss of a license plate from the rear of his motor car. The plate, number 47-783, was last seen between Napanee and Belleville, the owner stated.

Police throughout Eastern and Central Ontario have been asked to be on the lookout for Fred Rinch, 50 Octavia St. who has been missing from his home since July 14th. Mr. Rinch is a naturalized Canadian of 57 years of age. He is believed to be headed west and was last seen in the vicinity of Cobourg, information revealed.

Mr. S. Rosenberg, 315 Charles St., reported the loss of his garden hose that was stolen from his residence some time over the week end. The hose was 50 feet in length and practically new. This is the second case of a similar nature to be reported locally this month.

Mrs. J. Piggotte, R.R. No. 7, Belleville, reported the loss of a ten and two five dollar bills, lost on Front St. yesterday. Police gave Mrs. Piggotte little encouragement regarding the possible recovery of such a sum, but promised action in the matter.

Only two transients slumbered at the police station last night. No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours while Motorcycle Patrolmen of this district reported "all clear" on local highways.

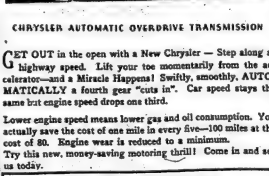
ONE YEAR IN BUSINESS AND PREMISES ENLARGED

Young Firm Celebrate First Birthday by Doubling Business Premises



Just one year old a Belleville business enterprise celebrates its anniversary today by enlarging its business area and adding another building, a very encouraging sign of the trend of business today away from the standstill of a year ago yesterday. The business referred to is Mount's Barbershop and Hairdressing, 16-13 Cannifton Road, started one year ago by "Doc" Mount, well known travelling salesman and dealer in various motor car supply products.

In connection with the birthday celebration of this business a Safety School will be held for motorists with the Johns-Manville Safety Car and instructors featured. Wednesday evening a dealers convention will be held in the Hotel Quinte, also sponsored by this firm, at which matters important to the trade will be discussed. Upward of seventy dealers will be present.

In congratulating Mr. Mount upon the success which has attended his efforts, and the reputation won for splendid service it is fitting to mention Mr. Perc. Hart, mechanical superintendent, and his assistant Mr. Stan Kerr, with Mr. Jack Beare as salesman, as important factors in the success achieved.

A special invitation is extended to motorists to visit this business enterprise Thursday and help celebrate its first birthday.

LOCAL MARKET 60 YEARS AGO AND THEN TODAY

Stuart Hooey of Trenton Recalls Marketing Here in 1876

Sixty years ago, Mr. Stuart Hooey, now of Trenton, but then a stripling storekeeper of this city, known also as Belleville, the district at the present time as one of the most ardent and perhaps the oldest consistent cyclist in the Province, paid a visit to the Belleville market for the purpose of purchasing butter, eggs and other sundries for his grocery situated then on Upper Front Street on the east side, just above Victoria Avenue.

Today Mr. Hooey, after cycling from his home at Trenton, a mere jaunt, despite his advancing years, of fifty miles, is still a keen cyclist. The change that has occurred, not only in the variety of products offered, but in the means of delivery is remarkable, he points out.

Then the farmer came along by horse and buggy and sturdy teams, and the well grown oxen drew their fifteen and burn up the roads to and from the market in their hurry to get there and back. Today's driving wheel is the chassis with fence wire, steering knuckles, which govern the action of the steering mechanism, being bolted in position were also attached with wire.

When the officer shook the radar, the audible reminder passed through the entire machine, even the rear end growling its disapproval.

Police, it is said, are endeavouring to rid the highways of these antiquated vehicles, but it will be many a moon before they run across another similar to the above.

Milk Shortage Not Noticeable in Factories

Although there is admittedly a milk shortage in the district, the condition has not been particularly noticeable in the cheese factories throughout the district, it was observed today by Mr. James Irwin, Dominion Dairy Grader of the local office.

"Our cheese production seems to be holding up well, and so far we haven't had any reports in as to reduction of make due to this condition," Mr. Irwin added.

Creameries of various sections, however, are commencing to feel the effect of dry pastures, it was stated by Mr. H. Clarke, manager of the Canada Packers Limited creamery here.

"We estimate that our milk production is down about 25 per cent at present, and that the corresponding business is down between 25 and 30 per cent," he added. "It is the same all through this section, according to reports I've had from other creameries I've been talking with.

"If this condition keeps up it looks like a case of the cost of milk will go up for local consumers. Butterfat has been up in higher prices for what we get, and so will the consumers."

$5,000 BAIL ASKED

Toronto, July 21.—(C.P.)—Charged with assaulting Oliver Silver, 63, Indian agent at Sutton, yesterday, Joseph Shaw, a farmer, was remanded until July 27 on bail of $5,000 when he appeared in York County police court today. Crown lawyers asked for substantial bail because of Silver's age.

Racket Ends When Looking for Record

Business is business no matter whose photograph one has. A twenty-year old boy took advantage of a situation, which he recognized, to earn cash in coppers and nickels on a London, Ont., thoroughfare on Saturday night. He ran afoul of the sympathy of hundreds of pedestrians.

Donning a pair of smoked glasses, the child sat down on a wooden box and by a placard displayed two photograph records for odd change. The proprietor, a Mr. Young, left his stand to go for supper. In a few seconds the youngster had a record in each hand and was busy holding the cup for people to drop their pieces of silver.

"Clank" went a copper into the cup. Then another, and another, until several dollars had collected.

Then came the crash. He was asked to play a certain record.

While looking for it, someone in the crowd realized that racket was being worked. The police were called and the "business" came to an abrupt ending.

The boy stated he was going to take the money home to his father who was out of work and on city relief. He said he was one of a family of fourteen.

"Didn't somebody drop a quarter into the cup?" asked a policeman.

"No," replied the youngster, "I earned that selling papers."

"Well, a man said he dropped a twenty-five cent piece into the cup," continued the officer. "No, he didn't", answered the boy. "He only dropped in a big copper."

Mechanical Monstrosity Seen Near Lindsay

Patrolling a stretch of highway near Lindsay, Traffic Officer J. C. Manningham was startled to hear a loud noise, which sounded like the immediate aftermath of an explosion in a boiler factory. He gazed about him. Nothing was in sight.

Then over the top of a slight incline came a mechanical monstrosity, which was originally intended to be a car. The superstructure, despite his advancing years, officer held out his hand, and with many groans, grunts and weird noises the nightmare came to a standstill.

From the interior of the contraption, came a man, with whose assistance the officer made a close of inspection. A few things noted were, no radiator grill, no headlights, no tail-light, no horn, poor brakes, no muffler, sections of the body were wired on, the chassis with fence wire, steering knuckles, which govern the action of the steering mechanism, being bolted in position were also attached with wire.

When the officer shook the radar, the audible reminder passed through the entire machine, even the rear end growling its disapproval.

Police, it is said, are endeavouring to rid the highways of these antiquated vehicles, but it will be many a moon before they run across another similar to the above.

FIRE LEAPS OVER SATURATED AREA

Firemen Soon Eliminate Possible Danger of Loss

Fire, which mysteriously jumped across a water-saturated protective area between the brick homes of William Argent and Timothy Sullivan on George Street at noon today, was extinguished in the blink of time by city firemen who were working in a large adjacent vacant lot, burning down dry grass growths.

Foresight on the part of Fire Chief Lynch in saturating a large area between the fired growths and four large gas tanks belonging to the Superior Co. averted probable disaster.

Earlier in the day a squad of city relief workers and city firemen burned grass on the large lot confronting the Houston Lumber Co. Water was poured for a distance of fifteen yards behind the tanks and in the rear of the aforementioned properties.

In some mysterious manner the blaze jumped across the saturated area, setting fire to the grass between the two houses. Firemen rushed to the scene and an alarm was sent in. Flames had crept to the edge of the Argenti driveway and were creeping in a semi-circular direction to the vicinity of the tanks when prompt and efficient action on the part of the fire department's small staff might have been a serious conflagration.

She had left the kitchen when the house was rocked by a terrific blast. Her children, Eleanor, 9; Ruth, 11; Russell, 10, and Gilbert, 4, groped their way down stairs through clouds of choking smoke. The lower part of the house was gutted by the fire that followed the explosion.

Trenton, July 21 (Special)— J. D. Johnson, K.C.M.P., was found guilty of reckless driving at court yesterday afternoon and was sentenced $18.75. His operator's permit was suspended for one month. He was given until July 30th to pay the fine. Johnson pulled from in front of the Bank of Commerce had Thursday night making it left hand turn onto Ridgeway St. He apparently could not right his car out of the turn and smashed head on into Mark Tripp's parked auto on the western side of Ridgeway. The impact forced the Tripp car back for a distance of twenty feet, causing $175.00 damage to the front, police said. The Johnson car was travelling at excessive speed as tire burns on the road showed for a distance of 128 feet.

William Steen charged with driving his motor vehicle without a permit paid $13.15. He was also charged with operating his auto with too many lights in front of his car. The Magistrate remanded the case for sentence as only two prisoners were found riding in the front seat. The circumstances of the case were, William Steen was driving along highway No. 2 with his girl friend and another couple. When Constable's the traffic officer spied Steen with his arm about the girl. Turning about the officer crowded the car but to his amazement found two fellows riding in the front seat and two girls in the rear. B. G. Donnan, K.C. stated the charge be pressed saying "unless you make a limit the girl will be sitting on the boy's knee." As there was no accident involved the Magistrate issued a remand.

Lorne Wilder of Redeswalle was found guilty of driving in a manner dangerous to the public and paid a fine of $12.25. His permit was suspended for three days. Wilder's auto smashed into a tree after leaving the road. Wilder was following a car and when the car in front slackened up for an auto backing out of a lane he applied the brakes which forced him into the ditch.

Richard Kerns who last week was found guilty on a charge of being drunk and fighting with police on Murray St., appeared today for his sentence. Magistrate R. J. Butler imposed a sentence of 15 days upon Kerns. The sentence will date from July 15th. He has five more days to spend in jail.

York, the complainant, told the court that on the night of July 7th he was sitting on a verandah on McCann St., near a car pull up near his parked auto, two men got out, one carrying a pail in the lead. Just as the leader removed the gas cap he jumped over the railing of the verandah and gave chase to the fellow carrying the pail which was all. The Trenton men he returned he saw, that the car which the men had come in moving away. He jumped on the side of the auto and when he did, he recognized the fellow as Hutton. He notified Trenton Police who picked Hutton up. York and the police went to the Hutton home but did not find the car there. Later police returned and questioned the boy's father as to his son's whereabouts. His father told police that the boy was in bed. Police told the father about the previous happenings and asked if they could question him. Hutton's father who pays a license number with the number on the car which was there at that time in the garage. The father consented and on investigation the police found the radiator steaming hot. The hub cap was also missing. Hutton's father told police that the told the court, that he was not out with his car on the night of July 7th. He said that he was in the house at 11.00 o'clock on the night of the happenings, and could produce two witnesses to verify his statement. "Who are your witnesses," asked the Crown, My father and Mr. Baldini, a neighbor, replied the magistrate. They were carrying on a conversation when I came home at 11.00 o'clock and I had to pass them when I went to my bedroom, Hutton added. "I couldn't have left the home after that time without them noticing me, was the answer of Constable. The Crown intimated guilt to His Worship the Magistrate R. J. Butler wished the boy would have a chance. The Magistrate told Hutton to produce his two witnesses. The case was remanded till July 22nd.

Heaps of Balls Lost to Wooler

In what was one of the best softball games of the year Wooler defeated the House of Bell by 10 to 1 at Bayshore diamond last night. The game was filled with every sort of thrill from the pitching of Bell catcher having a fast ball bounce off his forehead to the Wooler team manager Dr. Tinling diving for a ball at fielding. There were three home runs to add more interest, all by Wooler. Wooler catcher, first man up to bat clouted the first pitched ball for a circuit blow. C. A. Station drove out a four base hit with two on and Wooler team made on in the first of the fifth inning. Davis knocked out the third home run of the game for the House of Bell base saving them from being shut out and emphasizing that although not in the oldest player on the team he can still hit. Free pitched for the winners hurling nice ball with airtight backing. Burtt for the losers delivered winning ball but his team mates made several errors, and home runs proved costly. Teams: Wooler—C. Traffic Heavier This Year

During the past ten years it has deteriorated badly and was becoming an eyesore in Division St. The lumber will be used for construction purposes.

From Belleville To California

Lompon, California.

(From Sam Y. Ray)

After living in California for the past thirteen years, Mrs. Ray and myself with our three boys, made a trip by Ford to Belleville, which was our former home. After visiting in and around Belleville from May 23rd until June 22nd. We started on the return trip to California, after making a call on relatives in Colborne we proceeded to Toronto and made a couple of calls there. At Niagara Falls we gave ourselves into the care of a man who took us on a sight-seeing tour of the city, the Falls, the power plants and other things of interest to visitors. We were persuaded to stay to see the Falls at night, The different colored lights which are directed on the Falls at night make a sight well worth seeing, one which we shall not easily forget.

On leaving the city the following morning we took the shortest route to Detroit. On arriving there we headed for Dearborn where we visited a party at Mr. Ford and were conducted through the Ford factory. This was very interesting particularly to me since I was using a Ford V8 car on the trip and also conducted with a Ford dealer here in California. We found it intensely interesting watching the making of steel of different kinds and it less than a minute see a motor car of steel is made into a part for a car. The plant covers over 900 acres and at the present time is employing 75,000 people and a day besides manufacturing the parts for their own cars which are being assembled in different parts of the United States and Canada. Ford has assembly plants located in the direction of Chicago and Buffalo, Ohio, Indiana in the States or Michigan. Indiana and Ohio are very good but further along in Nevada, Wyoming and Nevada they were not so good. The next place we stayed over for sightseeing and recreation was Salt Lake City, Utah, where we took in the sights and had a swim in the lake, which is so salty a person cannot sink. At the Beach part of the lake we saw the largest dance hall in the country where all the famous orchestras play and people from from a great many of the other States to dance and enjoy themselves in this historic spot.

After leaving Salt Lake we came on toward Reno, Nevada, the great divorce centre. I heard a minister say he could make more than his salary as a preacher by marrying couples in or near Reno. The drive from Reno to San Francisco, California, was most beautiful part of the trip. The tall timber and blue lakes, the snow still on the mountains in patches at an elevation of 7,138 feet, make a scene which all but takes one's breath. How we loathed to leave this paradise you who have not been there can only guess. Well, we finally arrived in San Francisco, where we stayed the night and visited relatives. Then in the morning the final lap of the journey brought us to Lompon, "The Valley of Flowers", as it is called here. After all there is no place like home.

MONGREL PUP ON TRIAL FOR LIFE

Bizarre Case Divides Village Into Two Hostile Camps

Brockport, N.Y., July 21.—(AP)—Idaho, a mongrel pup, went on trial for his life today charged with causing the death of a high school student, who was bathing in the barge canal near here last week.

The bizarre case divided this village of 3,000.

Scores of letters have come to the pup's master, 22-year-old Victor Fortune, and Justice of the Peace Homer B. Benedict, some demanding that the animal be put to death and others that his life be spared.

Idaho was tentatively identified as a bearing at the dog who caused the drowning of Cassell Breese. Witnesses said that while Breese was in the water a dog plunged into the canal and climbed on his back, hampering his effort to swim and interfering with the attempts of his companions to rescue him.

Fortune was summoned to show cause why Idaho should not be destroyed as a dangerous animal. He says he will defend the dog as just a playful pup, whose actions were in keeping with the spirit of the swimming party.

COURTEOUS MOTORIST

The motorist at the wheel of his car seems to forget that he is riding a potential engine of death, and that every pedestrian as well as every other car driver in the vicinity is his potential victim, J. P. Bickell, registrar of motor vehicles for Ontario, declared when he released the accident statistics compiled by his department for the first five months of 1936.

"Judging by the period from January 1 to May 31 this year bids fair to set a record for auto mishaps," Mr. Bickell declared. "Although there has been an appreciable improvement in relation to the volume of traffic, there are more cars in operation, and people are using them more, resulting in more accidents," he explained. "The fatal accident rate for each 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline consumed, which is an excellent basis of comparison, shows a pronounced drop to 14.1 this year from 19.1 last year, and is the lowest in recent years, yet there were three more fatalities in May, 1936, than in May, 1935," he went on.

"The lesson we have to learn from these figures is unmistakably that as the density of traffic increases, there is need for more and more thoughtful care and courtesy on the part of motorists. The fact that city accidents are increasing faster than country accidents supports this conclusion."

Mr. Bikell remarked that the period covered by his figures ended before the beginning of the current campaign to persuade motorists to "try courtesy" being waged by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways. The man who avoids infringing on others' rights will be a safe driver.

Statistics for the next four or five months will reveal to what extent the people of Ontario have heeded the plea of the minister.

Mr. Bickell predicted:

"We in the department know that the courteous motorist is the safe motorist. If Ontario's drivers will only 'try courtesy' —for a change, we are compelled to add—they will find that safety and security on the roads will automatically follow."

	1935	1936
Accidents cost $50 and up	3,187	3436
Deaths	138	140
Persons injured	2600	2,932
Property damage	$293,628	343,476

For the month of May there were increases under eye wheeling. Accidents increased 10 per cent, deaths increased 10 per cent., injuries increased 16 per cent. and property damage increased 10 per cent. One quarter of all injured persons were children under 15 years.

"A ton of steel, hurtling through space at 35 or 45 miles an hour, has a terrific capacity for damage, destruction and death." Mr. Bickell summed up, "Motorists must remember that it is just such a weapon they have in their hands when they are driving their car. Let every driver 'Try Courtesy' until courtesy becomes a fixed habit. Then there will be very few accidents indeed."

BREWERS REPORT LESS DRINKING

Americans are drinking one third of the liquor they did in 1917, is stated by the Brewers Association. New York Times says this is news to most people, as "everyday observation would lead one to say that the drinking habit is more widespread than it ever has been." For one thing the cocktail habit has won recruits among women and has made heavy inroads on the afternoon tea, yet the Times says the habit is thinner than it used to be. "Women toying with liquor have not shown the same statistical results as women with cigarettes. For the enormous increase in consumption of cigarettes they are held largely responsible."

Chief credit for the decline in drinking is due to the tax collector, says the Times. He has made liquor several times as expensive as it was before the war. But he has been assisted by Hollywood and by the outdoors life. Men spend hours in movie theatres that once were spent in the saloons. If they are younger men, they spend much more time in sports and the open air generally."

NEWSPAPER 90 YEARS OLD

Last week the Hamilton Spectator celebrated its ninetieth birthday with an edition worthy of the great and growing centre which it serves and where it thrives. The edition is a veritable library of information about the city from its earliest days and its associations with the Spectator. The city was incorporated in the same year as the Spectator was established and hence this newspaper institution has grown up as the city grew up and there has been a constant association for the good of both. In a city of the importance of Hamilton, such a newspaper has an enviable position of recording the life day by day of the people; interpreting to them local and foreign happenings and keeping a constant record and making a continuous commentary on the life of the past nine decades as they went by.

The issue contains a number of reminiscent articles which give a close insight into a past age.

In such an issue as the record given of the past, one understands how the individual and the public both together go to make the community and the newspaper.

Swinging along to the lilt of a song,
Never a thought of the miles!
Rough road and smooth,
Up hill and down,
No road at all—whiles!

Come where the purple heather-bell grows
Amid bracken golden brown;
Over the moors
Far from the lures
Of the hectic life of a town.

Let us forget the worry and fret
Of our daily toil for bread;
Come then, and pack
Your haversack,
A carefree road we will tread.

There, where the lofty fir trees grow,
Where the clean winds blow so free;
Through Highland glen,
Round loch and ben,
Come take the road with me!

MOTOR MADNESS IS A SERIOUS DISEASE and one can see manifestations of the disease any day, any time, at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets, Belleville.

The four corners is an ideal place to test the coolness or otherwise of drivers as the lights govern the movement of traffic (theoretically).

The sign below the lights which states that there must be no movement against the red is frequently violated and drivers make their own rules if no cops are in sight.

One morning recently a motor car came rushing across the lower bridge, turned on two wheels at Front and Bridge Streets and started north on Front Street at a fast pace. Two cars crossing the street at Campbell had to jump for their lives, one going one way and one the other, while the speeding car rushed away gathering more speed every moment. The license number 'CD' showed that the car was not a local one, but it was just too bad that no policeman was available to give the driver a lesson in careful driving.

Cars will honk while being parked against the curb, to draw someone's attention across the street, or just for noise with children left to play in the car while the parents go shopping or visiting.

Seems as if the horns could be locked while not in use, for no one appreciates a loud shriek or other blasting noise in the car while walking along the street.

Other drivers ignore the silent policeman and give pedestrians a bad scare by suddenly cutting corners and making people jump out of the way.

Cars held up by the red light reveal impatient drivers at times, honk-honking for the line to move oblivious of the fact that the first car must wait for the light to change.

All this adds to the bedlam of noise which is making us a nation of nervous wrecks and making that grand old mechanism we call Heart a jumpy, erratic piece of junk—almost.

It is not so much more legislation that is needed, just a bit more considerationextending our world outlook from our own comfort and convenience to encompass in a measure at least the feelings of others.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, ANDREW JACKSON, ABRAHAM LINCOLN and various other political spirits of the long ago were resurrected to play parts at the Democratic convention at Philadelphia called for the purpose of nominating Franklyn Delano Roosevelt for a second term as President of the United States. Abe Lincoln's ghost has become so versatile that orators of both parties hold him up as an example of great statesmanship. The Republicans had their innings recently and selected Governor Landon, of Texas as their standard bearer, with Col. Frank Knox, a newspaperman, as candidate for the vice-presidency. Herbert Hoover, expresident, got a great reception at the Republican convention, but no mention of renomination. Perhaps, like Calvin Coolidge, he "does not choose to run." At any rate he was not chosen as his former platform can stay in storage with its "two chickens for every pot," two automobiles for every family and a home of their own under a beneficent Republican administration. Republicans will march under the battle cry of "Three Long Years" of reckless administration. The Democrats will accept that war cry and add to it three long years since the bread lines started under a Republican administration were broken up by the Democrats. The keynote speeches of both parties indicate that the campaign will be a hot one and when it ends next November both parties will know there has been a war.

A hearty welcome was accorded the old Belleville Boys and Girls of Toronto upon their arrival shortly before noon to-day. They came by special train, every coach was filled. At the G.T.R. station a number of prominent citizens were present to welcome the visitors and as the train reached the market square Mayor Charles N. Sulman and the aldermen were present to extend to them the city's welcome. There was a large crowd present at the market square. There were 550 people on the excursion train and several hundred more old boys and girls are expected to arrive on later trains this evening and in the morning. THE HOSPITAL OPENED. The dream of a few ladies who "put their heads together". In the year 1877 as the Women's Christian Association, was realized yesterday afternoon when the handsome hospital on Dundas Street, which has been erected through the efforts of and under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Association, was formally dedicated in the presence of the public, to the purposes to which it was erected. As is generally known the hospital is not as yet fully equipped with furniture, beds and other requirements, but it opens with twelve beds ready for the reception of patients. There is room for 20 beds. The rooms are light, airy and cheerful and the whole interior is pleasant, commodious and handsome. An experienced matron has been secured in the person of Miss Lincke, who occupies a similar position in the St. Catharines Hospital and who was recommended for the position here by the Ontario Government. The management will be in the hands of the Woman's Christian Association and medical attendance will be given by the local physicians, who will each serve a month in turn, the first to act being Dr. D. E. Burdett. Among those who assembled for the ceremony were all the workers of the W. C. A. whose names we will not attempt to give. Among the gentlemen present were A. Robertson, M. P.; W. P. Hudson, M. P. P.; E. G. Sills, M. P. P.; Mayor Henry McIntosh, J. J. Kelly, Crown Attorney Carnew, Chairman Frost, R. Richardson, Nathan Jones, Geo. D. Threll, H. W. Brancombe, W. J. Narraway, M. Little Benny's Note Book

After supper my sister Gladdis and Harvey came around and ma and Gladdis started to talk about the movies, ma saying, Pierre Bandrew opens Castle in the Schwoolum in his first starring picture Lost Love. Isn't it exciting, they say he's the most popular actor in France, she said.

I can believe it, Gladdis said. Such poise, such an air, such a man, she said and she said, Actually, they say he's broken more hearts than the whole World War. Such a profile, my dear you've never see anything like it? He's marvellous, she said.

He's divine, Gladdis said. He reminds me of a combination of a Greek god and a faun, she said, and pop said, What does he remind you of, Harvey?

That's a difficult question to answer, Harvey said. At times he reminds me of a window shade that starts to flap like mad when I'm going peacefully off to sleep, and at other times he reminds me of a man chewing gum that gets stuck on the bottom of my shoe, he said. What does he remind you of he said, and pop said. Well as you say, that's hard to answer offhand without doing him an injustice. I mean sometimes he reminds me of a man about to enjoy a spoonful of piping hot soup and then again his image rises to my mind when I step into an apple and find a worm laffing at me.

And yet I dont know, Harvey said. To be perfecly fair to him, sometimes he makes me think of the sound of somebody scraping a slice of cold toast, he said, and pop said, Well yes, to give the devil his due he's not so much like a screen toothake as he is like a dull persistent headache.

Well at that time ma and Gladdis was so mad they made pop and Harvey take them to the Mawsoleum to see the picture.

CROPS ARE GOOD IN MARITIMES

Letter From Mr. Henry Ross Tells of Bumper Harvests

While Ontario and other provinces of the Dominion are experiencing the present hot, dry conditions this summer, crops in the Maritime Provinces at present are an harmonious and heavy they are "pushing the broom hard" on some farms. It was learned today in a communication received by Mr. J. C. Herity, secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce from a former well known Belleville resident, Mr. Henry R. Ross, manager of the New Brunswick Coal Storage Company, Ltd., Saint John, New Brunswick, for the past several years.

In the letter received Mr. Ross points out that extreme temperatures have not been recorded in the Maritimes this summer. "We did have as high as 88 degrees one day, but this temperature was for that an hour or so", stated Mr. Ross.

"Never, in my experience, have I seen such heavy crops in Kings County and Thurlow Township as are now daily with current events through the medium of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer, being for by its oldest regular subscribers.

SOME MEN FIND JOB ON HIGHWAY

Six Men Placed Through Employment Agency Today

With a look of hope lighting up her face, a woman entered the Employment Bureau this morning. "Any work this morning?" she asked.

Being informed in the negative, her shoulders drooped and she walked slowly from the office. "I don't know what will happen if I don't get some work soon," she said. "Jobs are very scarce and it is very hard trying to make ends meet."

With the beginning of operations by a construction company on a part or a highway near the city, applications for employment for a number of men took very bright. Six men were placed this morning and as the work progresses more will be required and men will be taken on from time to time.

Vacation time and its accompanying problems from the city of a number of families releases a number of domestic servants, but trained cooks are at a premium, said an official of the bureau.

Dirt in Air Nuisance to Face Pores

Joan Bennett

Essential to beauty, she knows, is keeping the face clean.

By HELEN FOLLETT

UNTIL THE city fathers all over the land get busy and do away with the smoke nuisance, women will be obliged to wash and powder. The best face scrubbers have been and it is a discouraging situation. Also there is the smoke shed. Fill the pores with atmospheric filth and it isn't long before infection starts up and pimples develop.

Soap and water are a necessary part of the treatment because soap is a fairly good antiseptic. But soap isn't enough. After a thorough bath at tubbing, a cloth which has been dipped in alcohol will show the results aren't satisfactory. Dry cleaning the face twice a week is a good idea. But alcohol is drying, so don't forget to use a light cream afterward.

Oily skins are more inclined to take on black spots than the normal ones. Wallis plugs in the pores attract dirt and cause it to fix. It is therefore necessary to urge the astringent action still more by heat. This can be accomplished by cutting down on fats. The average person being prone to eat more than two teaspoons of butter every day. Many people eat more than that, thus putting a strain on the glands that things the film of oil to protect the epidermis.

Local treatment for small boils consists of hot, moist dressings. Internal treatment calls for less sugar and starch in the diet and careful regard for cleanliness. Vaccine are sometimes used. It is a mistake to hamper with a boil. Only a medical man should attempt to lance. Applications will bring it to a head, after which will break and evacuation will take place.

During summer months every woman should guard against desiccation order. The armpits should be bathed thoroughly twice a day. It is the deposit of dried chemicals or the skin that is offensive.

Many deodorizers display preparations of powerful deodorants that will cause the pores to contract. Sometimes it is necessary to use them every day or every few days. All must be applied according to directions, since some sensitive skins will rebel against strong products. In mild cases a dusting powder will bring satisfactory results.

LATE JOHN REEVES

The funeral of John Reeves, who lived in Sidney, at the age of 92 years, took place from his late residence, 173 Mary Street, Monday afternoon and was very largely attended. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. L. S. Wight. The bearers were Messrs. James Hunter, J. Canning, H. Symons, R. B. Cross, W. C. Clarke and Dr. H. F. Wallbank.

The floral tributes were beautiful and many in number.

Williamsburg, Pa., July 21 (CP)—Sergeant Jack Leslie opened a letter, A note and two $1 bills fell to his desk.

One of the MPs, the note said, paid a traffic violation fine. The other was a "tip" for Fairchman Peter Yanevitch's "extending courtesy" in making the arrest.

HOW SHE DUCKLING GIRL OF FORMER TIMES GOT HER MAN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Why was it, when women who were downright ugly fell obliged to remain in the stale "Providence had been pleased to create them," as the prim platitude went, nearly always got their man? The old-fashioned boarding house, that almost completely extinguished, was a valiant first aid to Cupid. Born of this later.

But to return to the homely girls who got their men — these belles were stand-patters as to looks. Stringy hair, poor complexions, dowdy figures were accepted, even as death and taxes.

Even Mamie, if she has touched 30, may be able to recall those days when there were no beauty parlors. And it was considered quite nice for a girl to reveal her ankles, or quite sensible to show she had brains. Her attitude toward life and if she had intelligence, she hid it more carefully than she did her ankles.

Men didn't like clever women — poor dears! They never realized how the girls used cleverness to conceal their natural inferiority to them as if they were prophets. And the Ugly Duckling got her man with far greater ease than her more glamorous daughter or granddaughter.

She kept him, too, which is where the point. There was no con-test, six divorce ratio in those bygone days when father had recovered back so lightly that it might have been called a monkey wrench.

And the old-fashioned boarding-house, too, away with much of the match-making.

More in sorrow than in anger, college presidents, writers, lecturers and sociologists, who follow the course of human lives and tell us why we behave like human creatures, have lamented the fall of marriage in the present generation.

They mention wars, economics, the depression, selfishness—which makes present-day youngsters more in love with luxuries than with love in a cottage, and the high standard of the sexes, and lots and lots of other things.

But these worthies have completely overlooked one great ally of Cupid—the old-fashioned boarding-house. There were even "fashionable boarding houses" for those who rented suites, dressed for dinner, and assumed the part of paying guests before they signed up. One smile did business. Nice-appearing found his wife in one of these.

"Listen to the sweet prattle of that bird", or she battled her way through the crowded dining room and the surprised gentlemen boarders, who had no chance of hearing grand opera stars over the radio, fell and fell hard for these delightful parlor tricks.

Even today, at the dude ranches and summer hotels which are the lineal descendents of the old-fashioned boarding-house, romance is not unknown. Propinquity, or the advantage of being on the spot, then as now, was, is and always will be all powerful.

Responsibility Often Aids A Child

Expressing Necessity of His Help Changes His Whole Attitude

ROBERT WAS being difficult again. Since he was ten, nearly eleven, and carrying on as if he were six.

Sister Alice tried to shame him into being his age. "Baby, baby — just five yesterday," she taunted, but it didn't help. It made things worse. From being merely noisy and obstreperous, Robert became furious. He shouted, stamped about, threw things and generated appropriate insults at his sister.

You know how children get sometimes—you can't reason with them. Sharp scoldings and threats deepen their sullen scowls, but in no way arrest the action. As for promises of reward for improved behavior, they never seem sufficiently tempted during these moments, no matter how extravagant. Of course, you can try laughing it off. But that usually is taken as an insult, and Robert's ability sense of humor isn't functioning at that time and he is in no mood for ridicule. You might ignore the whole business, but that is difficult when the whole house is ringing with shouts and cries.

A Good Weapon

Indifference is a pretty good weapon but it works slowly, and if you have to get the child off to school in a presentable frame of mind, you have to try something that gets results quickly.

Mother was pressed for time, so she played her last card. "Robbie," she said quietly, "I know as well as I do my own nose, the noise, his scowl and the wild disorder of the room. I'm not fussy over going to school and have a lot to do. I wonder if you could take my watch down to have it mended?"

Robert's expression changed at once, and the scowl disappeared. He looked ages glad to be asked to do something. Then he grew a bit down town only once before alone, never as far as the jeweler's.

Very business like and grown-up, Robert asked what was to be done.

Improves With Trust

Mother told him and thanked him as she would father. "I'll leave the watch and keys on desk—tell them to have it back by Wednesday."

"I'll go right after lunch, mother," he said, and started tidying up and repairing the damage.

For the rest of the day, and for a week or more, Robert was his age when there were—amiable, responsible, obliging, very pleasant and a little important.

There are some children who don't need to be made to feel important, they are that way already. Some children would not react as Robert did. They want a show of trust is but an empty and irksome bond. But all are like Robert in one respect. The average child blooms under exhibitions of trust. They live up to your confidence in them, grow bigger and straighter and happier if you depend on them a little.

BRITAIN'S HEROINE

The grains of a grateful empire goes out to a small woman dressed in grey, whose name remains a secret. Spectators cheered her by beating down a gun held in the hand of a man who pointed it at King Edward VIII. She is shown in this radiocel picture as she left the scene.

Good Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"At Home" Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When a girl is about to be married for the second time.

2. When sends out the announcements?

3. How soon before or after the ceremony should announcements be sent out?

4. Are the "At Home" cards enclosed with the announcement, or sent separately?

5. Is there a limited time for the acknowledgment of gifts?

J.

1. The marriage announcements of the bride-for-a-second time are sent out by the bride's mother and father, if both are living, or by the mother or the father if not living. The only change in the form of the announcement is that second marriages is in the form of the bride's name.

2. Wedding invitations are sent out before the wedding. Marriage announcements are sent out after the ceremony has been performed. Invitations are sent out in full ready (engraved, addressed, stamped) to be mailed directly after the ceremony has taken place.

3. "At Home" cards may be enclosed under with the invitation or with the announcement. It is, however, not necessary to send "At Home" cards. The form of this card differs according to whether it is enclosed with the invitation or with the announcement. If it is enclosed with the invitation it reads:

At Home
after the first of August
Two Home Place
New York

If it is to be enclosed with the announcement, then of course the married name may be omitted, as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. George Wells
At Home
after the first of August
Two Home Place
New York

4. The bride-to-be who "does things correctly" writes each day before the wedding a thank-you note for each gift that has been received that day. Then, when she leaves on her honeymoon, she will have written all of her thank-you notes and the gifts which have arrived too late for this prompt acknowledgement. After words, she should not allow these wedding gifts to accumulate unacknowledged, unthanked for. Her thank-you notes should be written and sent as soon as humanly possible after the gifts have arrived. And definitely she should not wait until after the wedding to thank for her gifts.

GRADUATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Should a father give a son his graduation gift at the High School graduating exercises or at his home?

2. When one receives an announcement of a girl's or boy's graduation, is it necessary to call or will a card of congratulation be enough?

3. Is it necessary to send graduation cards to your friends and relatives?

Daily Reader.

1. It's better taste for the parents to give their gifts to their son or daughter at home. Friends often bring their gifts to the graduation exercises but there isn't any point to a parent's doing this.

2. There is nothing to say "should" about the giving of a graduation gift. We give a gift if we wish to, if it is appropriate, and otherwise we send a little note of congratulation and "best wishes for the future." The printed card of congratulation is a good form in good taste.....our written words in a note are personal, appropriate, welcome.

3. If, as is usually the case, each graduate is assigned a certain number of graduation announcements, we make out our list of those to whom we wish to send them. Naturally, the parents are concerned in this graduation-news are relatives and close friends.

Groom's Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be married soon in the rectory of our church. I intend to wear a long white lace dress, very plain, also a large picture hat. I am not having dance to wear a blue serge suit, and I would like to know if a pair of white shoes would be appropriate for him? What color tie would be the best selection, a white or dark blue?

C.

With a blue serge suit the groom should wear black shoes. White shoes would be entirely inappropriate. A dark blue tie would be better than a light one.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Which is correct —to serve cucumber in a piece of bread with the fingers, or use a fork? Is a fork ever correct?

A.

When you serve yourself a piece of bread from the bread plate of the bread tray, use your fingers, not your fork. No.

BRITISH MINERS' PLIGHT IS TOLD

London, July 21 (CP)—Shadows of distress still hang heavily over the mining areas of England and Wales. Growing employment which brought new hope to many thousands has passed them by.

Rev. P. S. Cardin, who has had 20 years' experience in the mine fields, painted a sombre picture of the situation at a Methodist conference in Newcastle-on-Tyne.

"The servitude of the miners is fast becoming unendurable," he said. "Thousands are living on a mere starvation diet. Children see their mothers growing thinner, shabbier and shabbier, old before their eyes.

"Four thousand royalty owners are receiving 8,000,000 pounds ($39,000,000) annually — 30 pounds weekly goes to the royalty owner and 2 shillings to the miner who risked his life and did the work."

A cleanliness of riotous reasonable fun is revealed in "One Rainy Afternoon", co-starring Francis Lederer and Ida Lupino, now at the Bells, with the thrills drama, "Speed".

HOUSE FLIES BREED IN GARBAGE

Dangerous Disease Carriers Menace To Public Health

For many years public health officials have reckoned the scourge of typhoid fever and many other contagerous, contagious diseases by government enforced legislation in respect to the inspection of cattle, milk-pasteurization, the chemical purification of suspected water supplies, and the elimination of many other known breeding sources of disease. But little has been done officially about the common housefly. Each summer it infests the land wherever mankind exists. It is borne and bred in rotten animal or vegetable matter, lives on filth and refuse. It carries germs of infectious diseases into the home endangering the health of everyone, from the defenceless baby in its crib to the elders of the house who relish the tasty salad upon which a fly may have recently been feasting and spreading disease germs that have accumulated on its hairy legs.

Public spirited citizens should fully realize the seriousness of this menace and take measures to check it. Searching out hidden unsanitary fly breeding places, keeping horses well screened and foods covered at all times are important. But the quickest and simplest method of killing all flies is to place a few saucers containing milk and around the house. They will attract the flies and kill them all in a few hours.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"One Rainy Afternoon"

"One Rainy Afternoon" and "Secret Rendezvous", two unsold new story lines from the Spring great popularity on the air are featured in "One Rainy Afternoon" Pickford-Lasky's gay romantic comedy starring Francis Lederer, which begins a two day engagement at the Belle Theatre today.

Film fans will have their first chance to hear the romantic Lederer song in this film, which marks the first offering of the newly organized producing company headed by Mary Pickford and Jesse L. Lasky. He sings "One Rainy Afternoon" while the other song is sung by Segar Ellis and Margaret Warner.

Two Famous Comedians

Ida Lupino plays the romantic Czech's leading lady in this sparkling comedy depicting the amazing developments that come when a handsome young man kisses a strange beauty in a dark" movie theatre, while fine supporting comedians play important supporting roles Basil Herbert, Roland Young, Eric Rhodes, Joseph Cawthorn and Donald Meek.

The moods of both songs was written by Ralph Erwin. Jack Stern and Harry Revel collaborated on the lyrics of "One Rainy Afternoon" while those of "Secret Rendezvous" are from the pen of Tom Pepper.

"Speed" Thrilling Drama

"Speed" is the thrilling, breathtaking story of the adventures and daring men who risked their own lives to report the news and thrills the hundreds, of other lives in the world's most dreary. The new picture is announced as the second feature attraction on the same program.

The picture goes behind the scenes of the vast, interesting and intricate automobile industry, bringing to the screen for the first time the actual methods that are being performed in one of the world's greatest industries.

It takes the audience to ringside seats as the famed Indianapolis speedway with its crashes and thrills is staged in the camera as it make automobiles safer to maintain and to the noted testing ground of Monroe county where Sir Malcolm Campbell broke the world's automobile speed record and where the audience virtually rides over the course at lightning speed in the seat with the intrepid test driver.

In producing "Speed" Lucien Hubbard, producer of several of the S. S. Van Dine mysteries "Open Door" "Private Party for Sale" "Death on the Diamond", "Murder in the Fleet" "Times Square Lady" and many other hits, has given it a cast of many of the younger players who hold promise of brilliant future in pictures.

Among these are James Stewart whose rise in screen popularity in the past few months has been phenomenal, Wendy Barrie, Weldon Heybourn, Patricia Wilder to them have been added such popular players as Una Merkel, Ted Healy, Ralph Morgan and Robert Livingstone. The Belle Late World News will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Bullets or Ballots"

Edward G. Robinson returns to the screen in "Bullets or Ballots", a First National production which Robinson's new role affords him all the opportunities for characterization that "Little Caesar," the picture that made him famous, gave him. In this picture he is not a gangster. He is a hard-boiled detective determined to put the boldest and best organized band of criminals known to history, out of business.

To do this he renounces both love and honor, at least temporarily, for he breaks with the police and ostensibly becomes a criminal himself, in order to gather the evidence to break up a band of crooks so powerful that no one has ever been able to put the finger on them.

The picture is the story of racketeers who are supposed to be respectable business leaders, business men of wealth, politicians of high position and honor, but who are known that no one suspects them. They never are seen with any of the crooks who carry out their orders, but contact just one man in the working organization, who carries out their orders and delivers the proceeds of their illegitimate gains.

The story is by Martin Mooney, the "Chicago Tribune" newspaperman who exposed racketeering in the newspaper world and went to jail for thirty days for contempt of court because he refused to reveal the source of his information. He claimed it was his moral right not to reveal the names of persons who gave him information confidentially. Seton I. Miller collaborated with Mooney on the story and also wrote the screen play.

Robinson has assembled a cast of unusually talented cast in the picture, with Joan Blondell playing the leading female opposite Robinson.

Barton MacLane has the role of the chief of the gangsters, the only contact with the "higher-ups," but who still has a terrific struggle in keeping his gang of killers in line. Frank Mc Hugh is seen as Robinson's chief crooks him and shoots him down in cold blood.

The latter part, the toughest of all the tough men, is played by Humphrey Bogart, the killer of "The Petrified Forest."

Frank Mc Hugh furnishes the comedy element as the personal agent of Miss Blondell, who runs a Harlem Numbers racket. Joseph King is the commissioner who breaks Robinson.

Others in the cast include Richard Purcell, George E. Stone, Joseph Crehan, Henry O'Neill, Henry Kolker, William Pawley, as well as hundreds who appear in smaller parts and extra roles.

"Ends Today"

"The King of Musical Comedy," Jack Buchanan in "Come Out of the Pantry" with Fay Wray, also an added feature short, Charlie Chase in a two reel comedy, "The Count Takes the Count."

Treasure for Two
by
FLORENCE B. JACOBS

Under some scrub pines, the cowboy and the sheriff sat. Quietly. Companionably.

The cowboy fanned himself with his sombrero, then finally wiped his face with a bandana whose color seemed to give the mercury fresh impetus. "Gosh, ain't it hot!"

The sheriff grunted.

"Say, you're go seriously."

"Later, maybe....Afterwards."

"Afterwards?" The sheriff seemed a bit slow on the uptake, the cowhaps to the heat, perhaps to a recent surfeit of blueberry pie. The sheriff knew good things to eat, and he considered his shining badge rode on the topmost curve of a series which made his stomach.

"Sure. Afterwards. You know after we check up on the map and decide about things."

"Oh, yeah." the sheriff knew now; and knowing, forgot about the second helping of pie, forgot the fact that a few months of July August heat. "Gee, ye....You got the map?"

"I should say so. Right here, boy," slapping at a great pocket then, with a careful glance up at the overhanging branches and down the railroad tracks to the far horizon, bringing from the same pocket a heavy envelope of paper.

They hunched poring over it, eyes bright, and the cowboy's finger pointed.

"You see the mark—kind of a dagger, like? That's where the stuff's buried. You follow this trail—a big overhanging rock—all the way, 'through Devil Man's Hollow, past the Devil's Head till you come to a pine 'thout branches, shaped like a cross. They hung a ranger there once...."

A cold wind blew through the August heat. "Gee," said the sheriff, "what'd he do?"

"He was after the gold, too. That's why they hung him. But they did other things to him first. The long lock which passed between them was for Indian with terror in the comfort of words. "So you can see how careful we got to be."

"Sure. Sure. Now, after us!"

A sheriff's badge is evidently no guarantee of the kindness of the heart beneath it.

"Let 'em!" The cowboy patted both pockets suggestively. "They don't call me Two-Gun Riley for nothin'!"

"We'll meet here tomorrow night." the sheriff went on—"It's the dark of the moon now—and start out. And when we come back with the doubloons and the gold caskets an' them things made o' pearls big as tomatoes....how!"

"Boy!" echoed the sheriff, who saw no sense in straining after originality.

The cowboy's face became gravely calculating. "Now we're goin' to get the money for this. There's two things to be bought—grub an' tools and gosh, I'm hungry right now. I don't better take charge of it. You know what happened last time. When you had the money."

The sheriff looked doubtful; but with no sense of humor and with the other's keen gray eyes. Besides, the afternoon sunshine had brought his cheeks almost to the boiling point. He turned his pockets inside out and put their spoils yield into the cowboy's hand.

"Okay.....And it's settled that when we get to Spaniard's Rest, we go right to the store. And when he finds the chest first, keeps it! The sheriff is going to help him bring it back, but he can't claim anything."

"What is it?" asked Bill, in a carefully tonsless voice which betrayed nothing.

"Why, about Milly. You know that the guy who gets the gold that's the girl. It'd be just like Milly to stick by the man that found—that's that. But you and me know that wimmin needs clothes and jewelry and things. So I think we ought to protect Milly from herself; and I'll see that she gets what her treasure gets Milly, and the sheriff gets the gold, and Spaniard's other one fades outta sight."

"Sure," said the sheriff. "But suppose I get it?"

Would you be Milly?"

"Sure!" the other assured him. "I'll be a large, fine figure which I decided how far he was prepared to go. "You bet I will. Why, Bill, I won't even tell Milly again if you get the treasure."

The sheriff knew which he put on the last words overreached itself. "Now, look here, Riley, that's impossible."

"Yeah," he sneered, "if I get the treasure. And probly you got it fixed some way so there's no chance for my getnin' it. I know you, Jim Riley. You're too darned smart. I know, and I seem dumb nothin'."

"All right," said the cowboy, "all right for you, Billy Thomas. The expedition's off. I was lettin' you in on this because you was a friend, but now you're any more. I'll just go alone and have all the treasure for myself."

In a smugly decisive move the cowboy returned the map to his pocket and fastened the flap. Then he took a number from another pocket and applied his tongue to its gummy brown surface.

The sheriff began to cry. "I'm sick of this game," he wailed, "I want my penny back and my head aches and—"

"Aw, be your age," the other sneered at him. "Ain't you most sixty? Well, here's your penny and crybaby! Now, scramble!

Clutching his penny, the sheriff scrambled, and they have stayed to about it out with Two-Gun-Riley (cowboy clever) and known as a desperate hombre.

THE KING AND HIS BROTHER GO FLYING

Here is an excellent informal snapshot of King Edward and his brother, the Duke of York, heir apparent, as they reviewed the Royal Air Force. Wearing sun glasses and attired in R.A.F. uniforms, both flew in the same aeroplane during the review. It was remarked at the time that a disastrous aeroplane crash might have made 10-year-old Princess Elizabeth a queen.

In the top picture are two swimmers, Irene Pirie Milton of Toronto and Mary McCormick of Edmonton. Cards Have a Slight Edge On Chicago Cubs in Matter Of Games on Foreign Fields

Both Teams on Road Until They Meet on Aug. 4

YANKS IN WEST

Cleveland Looks to be The Team For New York to Beat

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

It may not be very encouraging to fans of the pace setting Chicago Cubs but the facts are, St. Louis Cardinals have a slight edge on the National League champions so far this year in their games on foreign fields.

As the two clubs, separated by only one game on the battle side, invaded the east today the Cardinals not only have played more games away from home but have a higher percentage. They pointed to a record of 39 games away against 18 defeats for a percentage of .583 while the Cubs have compiled for 18 of their 39 games away from Wrigley Field for an average of .538.

The schedule calls for the Cubs and the Gas House Gang to make a trip around the eastern half of the circuit before returning to Chicago Aug. 4 to open a four-game series that may go a long way toward settling the National League pennant. This schedule also places Chicago in Brooklyn and the Cards in the Polo Grounds to meet the Giants.

The home-stand, which ended Sunday, saw the Cubs pick up only two games on the Cards, despite the injury to Dizzy Dean, and the close-to-cool pitching of the remainder of the second staff. The Redbird champions entered their home grounds July 9 in second place, trailing by a game. They proceeded to win 19 of their 14 contests ,while Frankie Frisch's men were accounting for only seven of their 12 games.

N. Y. Yankees Go West

While the National League clubs continued their warfare in the eastern front, New York Yankees marched into the west, the largest for three first division clubs, two of them redhot, and St. Louis Browns.

The Yanks, after breaking even in 14 games at the stadium, opened their western invasion against the Browns with a nine game lead over the fast stepping Indians.

If the Yanks played in the east is any criterion, then Cleveland is the team. Joe Cronin's club and company must beat. The Indians, with Chicago White Sox as their only drawing card, played 22 games in 13 contests to climb from fifth place to the runner-up berth. The White Sox did even better, Burleigh Grimes' combination hitting with good pitching and when they arrived at Comiskey park today looked back on a record that numbered 11 victories, eight in a row, as compared to only a pair of setbacks.

Against such power, the Red Sox and Tigers, fighting to keep in first division, have been given brush even. The Red Sox won only six out of 13 while the world champions, fighting three games to the Yanks, accounted for five victories as against seven defeats.

C. AUBREY SMITH EN-JOYS CRICKET VISIT TO VANCOUVER

Several well known Hollywood stars were members of the Hollywood Cricket club which went down to defeat, 127 runs to 113, in an interesting match against Vancouver recently.

Probably the biggest thrill for the spectators was to watch septuagenarian C. Aubrey Smith knock up nineteen runs against expert Vancouver bowlers. Genial Nigel Bruce led the visiting batmen with a creditable 39 while handsome Errol Flynn collected 14. Frank Lawton was retired for three.

BUFFALO BISONS DROP 2 IN ROW AS WINGS WIN 2

Both Teams Do Right About Face in Last Week

LEAFS DOWN ORIOLES

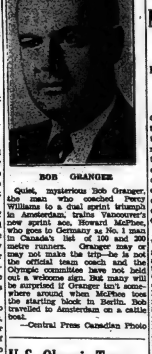
Leroy Herrmann Fans Eight And Team Makes 14 Hits

By The Associated Press

The Rochester Red Wings and Buffalo Bisons, separated by only three games in the battle for the International League pennant, sure do believe in doing a right-about face.

After just managing to stave off the upward rush of the Bisons and dropping three straight games, the pace setting Red Wings suddenly righted themselves and won their last two contests, defeating the Albany Senators 11 to 5 in one of the three games played under the lights last night.

In contrast, the Bisons piled up a string of nine successive victories, then dropped two in a row. Their second defeat came at the hands of the lowly Syracuse Chiefs, who pounded out a 6 to 1 decision last night.



Al Ciucciello, Rochester second baseman, was largely responsible for the Wings' victory. He connected with a home run, two triples and a pair of doubles for a perfect night at bat and drove in six of his team's runs. Backed by Ciucciello's hitting, Doyle and Bob Klinger had little trouble, the latter hurling the last six and two-thirds innings to receive credit for the victory.

Paced by Nick Dallesandro and Babe Dahlgren, the Chiefs finally managed to beat Johnny Wilson, the Bisons' ace hurler. Previously Wilson had beaten Syracuse three times this season without being defeated. Last night, however, he was driven to cover in three innings as Dallesandro poked out a triple and a double and Dahlgren added a three-bagger. The victory, aided with Fred Fussell pitching four-hit ball, also snapped Syracuse's losing streak at nine games.

In the circuit's only other game, Leroy Herrmann, former Cincinnati hurler, hurled four-hit ball as the Jersey City Giants turned back the Baltimore Orioles 6 to 1. While Herrmann was fanning eight, his teammates banged out 14 hits. George McQuinn and Jim Oliver were the big guns of the attack, the former getting a homer, triple and single and the latter a pair of doubles and a single.

An exhibition game played before the Rochester-Albany game saw the Cincinnati Reds defeat the Senators 10 to 2.

U. S. Olympic Team Arrives in Berlin Some Time Friday

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

Aboard S.S. Manhattan, enroute to Berlin, July 21 (AP)—After touching Oslo this morning and skirting the Emerald Isle, recalling memories of the summer through the stalwarts of by-gone Olympic days, the United States athletic Argosy was impatient to complete the 3,000-mile voyage and exchange oceans for a brief workout on the Firma.

Only the enforcement of the strict regulations prevented Joe McCluskey, steeplechase star from the New York A.C., and a handful of Irish ancestored mates from indulging the calls and cheering the Emerald Isle.

Finnish and Havre are scheduled for port of calls prior to Hamburg where the team is slated to arrive Thursday. The current plans, according to Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, calls for the athletes to remain aboard Thursday night, debarking early Friday, thus assisting daylight for the full program including a four hour train ride to Berlin, a reception, quartering in Olympic Village and a brief period for exercise before supper.

The officials are keeping their fingers crossed after an eventful ocean crossing featured by the wielding of the disciplinary big stick, and mild epidemic of sore throats. The managers of the various sports and divers reported a conscientious return to training, satisfying Brundage that there unlikely will be any further difficulty in maintaining order.

"All things considered thus far I believe the team is in better shape than the last Olympic voyage in 1928," Brundage said, "also think certain, the athletes are not selling themselves out of championship chances despite the lifting of the mess restrictions."

McIVOR TO HURL AGAINST PETES

Manager Weir Hopes to Win Second Game of Season

Having enjoyed every rung of the C.O.B.L. ladder, except first place, the Peterboro seniors are scheduled to meet the Belleville squad in a league twilight C.O.B.L. fixture at the Fair Grounds on Wednesday evening. The Petes, having won nine of their last 11 league games, move into second place over the week-end and are trailing upon the heels of the league leading Oshawa Chevies.

Although the Belleville team had won but a single contest in the league this season, that one game came at a most opportune time for the then league leading Chevies, the Belleville lads dumping one of the locals knocking them from the league leadership at that time. On Wednesday Manager Jim Weir will start big Bill McIvor, Belleville's latest pitching sensation, against the Petes in hopes of tacking up the second local win of the season. McIvor will be opposed by Eddie Whitehill, the Petes ace mound-man and a brother of Earl Whitehill of the Washington Senators of the American League.

Both clubs will be at full strength for this particular struggle, as a win for the Petes will take the Weir-led outfit have been hitting enough to win their share of games, while the pitching that has been provided by Johnnie Bawden and Ed McIvor has been equal to that of any hurling staff in the league. For the past few games the local gang have run into one bad inning, when they would boost the ball for sufficient errors and present their opposition with gift runs, that eventually meant local defeat. Skipper Weir put his charges through a stiff workout versus the local Kiwanis junior team at the Fair Grounds last night in preparation for Wednesday's twilight fixture. "I'm going to shift the team around slightly in hopes of eliminating this error bug and will try to win a game for a change," Manager Weir announced today. Some moral support in the grandstand might materially assist the locals in turning this little trick.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

While lastly taking in Saturday's C.O.B.L. doubleheader we ran into no less a personage than Al Heckman, who for many years predominated the C.O.B.L. as one of the best right-handers seen to grace the pitching mounds of this part of the province. Heckman came to Peterboro, allegedly from the Cleveland Indians, being sent there at the request of Jake Soloman, and by Tris Speaker, when "Spoke" was manager of the Clevelanders. Rumor has it that Heckman came from and what his amateur status was prior to his arrival in Peterboro, his presence in the C.O.B.L. was most acceptable and he was an out-standing pitcher and a baseball student of the first school. Heckman pitched game and the rules from start to finish and was a decided asset to the Petes and the league in general.

While reminiscing with Al during Saturday's hauling bee, the big blonde opened up and lalled a little, for a change. As a rule "Heck" is a very quiet young man, but Saturday must have been an off day, as he became quite talkative. "Yes sir, I've been around baseball for a few years, and I've been in the C. O. B. L. for a couple of years, but this New leader there," pointed out Heckman as a fellow baseball player, "is a questionable pitch of Scriver's with the coast of two balls and no strikes against him. "I always found it was poor practice to swing at the first pitch. You see a batter is not set and has not got his eye accustomed to the flight of the ball," added Heck as another fast ball batter took a punch at the first pitch for no earthly use. "What if the pitchers lacking them days is control, Buck when Freddie Geyer, Jack Wilson, Dickie, Dalsky, Funch Berry and other good pitchers were in the old league, we pitchers used to work on the batters, not the batters on the pitchers. Do the pitchers do that today? No, sir, the whole style of today is throwing the ball right down the middle and trusting to luck," bewailed Heckman.

There is a terrible lot of truth in what Heckman says as we have continually watched C.O.B.L. pitchers try to ride the ball past batters and right through the middle and, fortunough some of the veteran hurlers of the C.O.B.L. did establish strikeout records, but it is much easier to permit a batter to hide a fly to the outfield in the air than it is to bear down on every pitch. Turning to fielding players of the past, Heckman picked Eddie Geary as left fielder of the old Petes, as one of the best fly chasers ever seen in the league. "We had a lot of good outfielders in the C.O.B.L. but Hall was a outstanding star making running catches of fly balls, with his back to the home plate and running with the ball. With the crack of the bat Hall would turn and race towards the fence. You could take a fly ball over either shoulder with equal ease. Of course we had other good outfielders in the loop those days," admitted Al.

Of today's crop of inter-garden-ers "Heck" likes his fellow-townsman Tommy Foley, who incidentally was an absentee from the old senior and youthful catcher of the Petes, Eddie Stelle Starr, snappy returned to the fold on Saturday after a week's absence. We understand Starr was called home suddenly in the inner works of the Petes that resulted in Starr and every other member of the squad backing over the traces. Doubtlessly however, this trouble was quickly settled before the Petes take on the locals at the Fair Grounds here on Wednesday evening.

Last evening the local seniors participated in a practice game with the Rivoan Juniors in preparation for their league game versus the Petes on Wednesday. If the locals could forsake their practice of committing errors in bunches, like yesterday, they might start and win a few games before the league closes. Right now the Petes are travelling along at top speed, having won nine of their last eleven league outings. Of course the Petes are not fussy about lefthand batting and may run Jake a snag Wednesday twilight, when they face Ed McvIor, the lefthanded hurler that the locals have let Belleville's lease league victory in 13 starts. Manager Weir knows his charges will have to face Eddie Whitehill of the Petes as right-hander, who has been south of the Mason-Dixon line many times, and we know that Eddie has a brother of Earl Whitehill of the Washington Senators and who came from Baltimore, but to play baseball they tell us, but merely to enjoy the restful breeze of Rice Lake in some other holidaying point, but it had to be cooler than Dixie, so tells us. The Littack City scribe is working himself into a heated state of excitement regarding the duties of Ed McIvor and bothers his many (?) readers by continually asking "where and why was Mclvor in Belleville pitching ball. The answer is quite obvious. To beat Peterboro, my fran."

In their game last night the local seniors tallied with the Kiwanis Juniors for seven innings and downed them 4 to 1 Utronki pitched for the senior club, while Jack Kelleher laboured on the junior hilltop. Incidentally Dean Ford was out with his old time mates last night and caverted about at second base in grand style. Ford informs us he was in Belleville in time to play this year, arriving here on the midnight train last Wednesday. "Also how I'm still a resident of Belleville. All of the time I was away I was in the Naval Air Service under the Canadian Government and I'm still a member of the Belleville Naval Reserve, there," pointed out Heckman as a fellow baseball player. "It is a questionable pitch of Scriver's with the coast of two balls and no strikes against him. "I always found it was poor practice to swing at the first pitch. You see a batter is not set and has not got his eye accustomed to the flight of the ball," added Heck as another fast ball batter took a punch at the first pitch for no earthly use. If the locals could forsake their practice of committing errors in bunches, like yesterday, they might start and win a few games before the league closes. Right now the Petes are travelling along at top speed, having won nine of their last eleven league outings. Of course the Petes are not fussy about lefthand batting and may run Jake a snag Wednesday twilight, when they face Ed McvIor, the lefthanded hurler that the locals have let Belleville's lease league victory in 13 starts. Manager Weir knows his charges will have to face Eddie Whitehill of the Petes ace right-hander, who has been south of the Mason-Dixon line many times, and we know that Eddie has a brother of Earl Whitehill of the Washington Senators and who came from Baltimore, but to play baseball they tell us, but merely to enjoy the restful breeze of Rice Lake in some other holidaying point, but it had to be cooler than Dixie, so tells us. The Littack City scribe is working himself into a heated state of excitement regarding the duties of Ed McIvor and bothers his many (?) readers by continually asking "where and why was Mclvor in Belleville pitching ball. The answer is quite obvious. To beat Peterboro, my fran."

NEW CHAMPION

Trailing one run and with two out Harold Reid, of the Corbins, was perched on first base with Barney Smith at bat. Barney swung at a thing strike that was high and it looked as though the fast ex-pirate ace of the Cisco. While the team and fans were cheering the ball, Reid raced from first to the plate for what proved the tying run and forced the game into overtime. Manager Barrage claimed Reid could only advance by third on an over-throw to the plate. The umpires were not a noddle and announced no ground rules had been made previous to the starting of the game and over-ruled. This will doubtlessly prove a lesson to other teams in the future. Always have ground rules and be sure you know them, is good practice.

CORBIN SOFTBALL TEAM IN PLAYOFF

Eleven Innings Necessary to Gain 8-6 Decision Over Ciscos

Les Jenkinson's home run, with one on base, gave the Corbin Flarevers nine hits and 8 to 6 verdict over the Cisco team in the final game of the season's play for the local Industrial Softball League at the Osborne Park field, evening. The win established a right-of-way terms for four extra frames, the Corbins tying the score in regulation time to battle their way into the playoffs of the league by eliminating the "Say Corby's" nine in one of the most thrilling softball games staged in the loop this season.

The game was marked by the superb pitching of Jack Royle for the winning Corbins and Wylie Moore of the Ciscos with the winning team supplying four lightning-fast innings of relief. Moore came on at opportune time to nip a belated rally of the Corbin batsmen and keep the Ciscos in the tenth. With games knotted at seven apiece, Jenkinson, the teams batsmen eleven full innings before Jenkinson belted out the grand-slam home run into the game and gave Corbins the edge and the right to enter the next circuit league play-offs.

Down in the second and with two out in the seventh, Reid, third sacker for the Corbins, raced from first base to the plate to knot the score when one of Elsie's high pitches got away from Catcher Jack Brewart. Considerable arguments emerged when Moore, to whether should score on the play or not, but owing to the fact no ground rules had been made prior to the game the officials in charge permitted the run to score. Both pitchers hurled splendid ball, walks and sacrifices at a premium, Corbins collected an even dozen hits, while the Cisco were credited with nine safe blows. Jenkinson with a homer and two singles led the hitters of the night, Royle on the mound for Corbins, opened the eleventh with a single to score ahead of Jenkinson on his circuit blow. Sharpe with a triple and a single led the Corby's gang with the hickory.

Following the game President Clem Bowler announced the winning team had been Corbins, Corbin would clash versus the winning club of tonight's Bellevile-Bengal-Dimont play-off for first place in what will be the first league playoff. The loser of tonight's game will meet the West End in the second league play-down later this week. Both teams turned in numerous fielding plays that were sensational.

FIRST ENGINE JOURNEY MADE 100 YEARS TODAY

Mr. Kenneth Dyson, C. N. R. Agent Addresses Rotary Club

One hundred years ago today Canada's first railway engine made its first trip over the sixteen-mile route from Laprairie to St. Johns, Quebec. Monday Belleville Rotary commemorated this event and the development of railways since in Canada, the guest speaker being Kenneth Dyson, Canadian National Railway City Ticket Agent in Belleville. One hundred years of transportation development in Canada was the subject chosen by the speaker and he gave a very interesting talk on the subject, comparing the little steam engine 'Dorchester' of one hundred years ago, the greatest thing of its day, which stirred many imaginations with visions of rapid transportation, far exceeding that of the stage coach and sailing vessels of the day, but never daring to vision such a miracle as the great streamlined locomotives of today with their speed of seventy miles an hour or more, and great hauling capacity. Mr. Dyson took his listeners on a trip across the continent showing how railway transportation had aided and hastened the development of Canada, since the days of the Red River ox carts, the romance of the laying of steel across the continent, of the conquering of the giant Rockies, the bridging of rivers and all the ingenuity of man brought to bear on surmounting natural obstacles so that trade and commerce could flow easily and quickly as the years passed from ocean to ocean. He told of the conquering of the thundering Niagara, with the first hydro-electric line, interesting fact that the first ropes were flown across with kites.

Many facts were revealed when over indifferent roads the stages bumped between Montreal and Toronto, when the fare from Belleville to Kingston was ten shillings, and Belleville to Cobourg ten shillings, six pence, while Toronto or Montreal constituted prohibitive mileage to be dreaded and given days of preparation.

One locomotive one hundred years ago has grown to five thousand locomotives, much larger and more powerful, on Canada's combined railroads with 42,000 miles of track-age, 7,500 passenger cars, over 300,000 freight cars, all typed by 130,000 employees, $150,000,000 in annual payroll disbursed, an annual purchases in Canada for the purposes of the railway.

The first sixteen miles of railway in Canada celebrating its centenary today, has grown to 42,000 miles comprising the Canadian National Railway System.

The development of the Canadian National Railway in Ontario from the day of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway were dwelt upon, with the early difficulties encountered and a final achievement of rapid railway service from Chicago to Portland, Maine. Then a review of the International as a result of Confederation and interesting highlights upon the whole romantic chapter of railway development in Canada. Interested an audience that was as entertaining.

Names of Belleville men who contributed materially to the development of Canada's industry, their connection with the Grand Trunk Railway and Canadian National were called by the chair, an imposing roster of brains and progressiveness.

Mr. Dyson was introduced by Morley Dutt and Rotary appreciation was tendered him by Oswald Scott.

Mackenzie Robertson, Past President, occupied the chair, and announced that capture of the rebel-lion in Spain, Herr Hitler's endeavor to upset the Polish Corridor, and dance the Fandg: determination to build a bigger and better Italy; France's trouble with Serbians and rightest, and Alf. Baird's war against the Arabs which threatens to destroy Canada's wealth of spruce trees—Past President Bert Sager presided.

Past President Dr. H. Deacon outlined the project under way of the bathing beach and its possibilities, it being thought desirable to construct the bathing beach by voluntary contributions, the amount needed not being large.

Sam Harris, "The Jewish Senator", as a humorist told stories in a very entertaining way. This gentleman will be remembered as having taken a prominent part in a Rotary minstrel show some years ago.

ROAD WIDENING WORK IS BEGUN

Road construction and the widening of Highway No. 2 east of Belleville commenced this afternoon. The portion of the highway to be repaired and widened to a width of 40 feet, is in the vicinity of Bell's Creek. Mackenzie Construction Company Ltd. of Belleville would be widened to a width of 40 feet.

MINISTER, BRIDE FETED BY CHURCH

Gala Occasion Welcomes Rev. Guy A. Stoner and Mrs. Stoner

It was a happy congregation of some one hundred members of the Albert Tabernacle that filled the city who extended their felicitations and gave the welcome to the bride of minister, the Rev. Guy A. Stoner and his bride of a few weeks, Miss Stoner (nee Elsie Bailey of Owen Sound) at a gala reception given in their honour at the church on Monday evening.

Everybody from the elderly Mr. H. W. Saragar, the genial chairman, who followed by Mr. Saragar, along with Mrs. Saragar had the privilege of celebrating fifty years of wedded bliss, down to the youngest generation present was interested in the air of good fellowship and joy that permeated the banquet room.

At the front of the room was the main banquet table at which were seated the bride and groom and the heads of the various departments and committees of the church. Gaily-decorated streamers of different hues formed an intriguing shape from the centre of the table and veiled the recent bride and groom.

After the banquet Mr. Charles Hyrns led in prayer to open the program, after which a short sing song of choruses led by Mr. Sapp, Sup't of the Sunday School was much enjoyed.

Mr. Saragar in his chairman's address welcomed the minister bride and also extended the hand of the church a most cordial welcome to Mrs. Stoner and said he felt sure that they would enjoy a long and happy life together.

The musical part of the program was highly entertaining and greatly appreciated, Mrs. Hyrns sang a vocal duet by little Misses Gross and Stanley Valey. A piano solo by Miss Dorothy Morgan and a vocal duet by Misses Dorothy and Gertie Crelman.

Addresses of welcome were rendered to the Rev. Stoner from the Mrs. Stoner by Mrs. Morgan on behalf of the Prayer Band; by Miss Gertie Crelman on behalf of the Young People's Society of which she is president and also an address of welcome by Mr. Smith on behalf of the Sunday School.

Rev. Mr. MacArthur, minister of the Alliance Tabernacle spoke to the present pastor and now in charge of a church at Peterborough, Ont., had the honour of pronouncing the marriage ceremony. Rev. Mr. Stoner and Mrs. Stoner with a beautiful address thanking on behalf of the congregation. Rev. Mr. MacArthur and Rev. Mr. Stoner are friends of long standing and it seemed very fitting that the former should go the honor of performing the presentation. He hoped that their life richest blessing would be on them in their mission in life and that the same spirit of fellowship would exist between the congregation and the new pastor Mr. Stoner and Mrs. Stoner. He could reciprocate for this statement having been the means of leading them during his ministry in Belleville.

Rev. Mr. Stoner although evidently greatly moved thanked the congregation on behalf of himself and his wife for the beautiful gift and the kind words expressed present them.

"Blest be the tie that Binds" closed the delightful evening.

2 COMETS SEEN IN NIGHT SKY

The easiest way to locate Peltier's Comet in the northeast is to look for the "W" constellation. It is a little more than halfway down to the horizon and Cassiopeia is five stars forming the letter "W" with its open side pointed down toward the horizon.

The comet lies above Cassiopeia's right-hand line up toward the zenith. It should be about half-way between Double Cassiopeia is five bright star about 10 degrees above Cassiopeia. The comet's position about half-way between this star and Cassiopeia's right arm.

shape of a medium size, is slightly elongated, indicating the formation of its tail. In the rush toward the sun. Whether sufficient tail will be formed to make a good spectacle still is unknown. In the telescope its tail is distinct now, but very short.

It appears certain for the northern hemisphere the comet will dim slightly before August 4, because it will be so low in the south that the atmosphere will interfere with good observation.

Aquarius Coming

The Aquarius meteor has a tail visible only in the telescopes but fully one degree in length.

Under the telescope, spectroscopes is that a comet is a loose collection of tiny particles of gas and metals.

Stoner in a very sixty field fur-nish a good example of the density of such heavenly objects. Malleable, colorless gases that are separate stones can be a metre or more apart and still travel together, held by gravitation.

There are other known substances which, under the spectroscope show some light is emitted, not merely reflected like moonlight. The comet-tail light shows the presence of sodium, hydrocarbons and cyanogen compounds.

These substances, the spectroscope will show, are present in the comet with heat or because of high electrical disturbance.

There are no known facts, only theories, to account for the origin of these collections of stray bits of matter. Some believe that comets originate in parts of the interstellar space outside the gravitational influence of the sun and its planets.

RED RASPBERRIES QUITE PLENTIFUL

Closing Price is Around 15 Cents Box in Crate Lots

Red raspberries in boxes, crates and hampers with a fairly wide variation in the range of prices, relatively market here today.

The blue variety were plentiful and sold around 10 cents per box or fourteen by the crate with the exception of twelve and one half cents by the crate lot because of the quality.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

There is no abatement in the demand for mining stocks, with the Quebec boom the outstanding features under the leadership of O'Brien. This province is fortunate in taking its natural place in the Canadian mining industry and its promising properties are attracting the necessary financing to bring them to maturity. Ontario is the gold mining industry of the Dominion today is a sound one and has been most important in its history, the difficult conditions created by the depression. The aid of the Government is to double the country's mining output in the next five years, a very commendable objective.

Noranda is meeting with good demand, and Quebec Lithium Corporation, in their Market Letter, have the following to say on the situation:

Noranda, although a comparatively young mine, is also entitled to considerable attention. The ore reserves which are steadily being built up and which are now equal to about 2,150 per share gives with enough ore in sight for twenty years at the present production rate. A great deal of the property has still to be explored and part of the stock in future will undoubtedly continue its advance as reserves increase.

At 99 Noranda's yeld is about 4.16% on the present $2.50 annual dividend. Quebec Lithium abroad are again firming with the statistical position of the metal steadily improving. Certain it is in the position where there is little to put the stock down barring a decline in the whole list, while it could advance substantially should higher copper prices materialize. This issue should be a good alternative for anyone holding a stock on a profit or a paper loss which he would like to recoup elsewhere.

BARRON'S (The Trader)—The market still cannot be hurried for the good reason that BEEF regulations and other marginal requirements handcuff day-to-day operators. It also helps to move as a unit and sudden breaks occur that frequently outweigh in discouraging buying. To follow strength and activity is still unprofitable, since it is the natural course of speculative events, should not be seriously swiped until the forward movement has run rounded and dealings more excited.

Canada Dry Ginger Ale has not been getting its full share of the premium seriously reduced the demand for ginger ale and helped the growth of manufacturers of cheaper products. Now, however, the upward trend of output of the company's products started in 1934, the decline in earnings continued in 1935 and there is no evidence of any material reversal in the current year. In order to bolster up sales volume, Canada Dry has been forced to reduce drastically the price of ginger ale and has even entered the 5-cent market. Such drastic action is to capitalize upon the repeal of prohibition, but the results of its expenditure in this direction have been disappointing. Meanwhile the large loss was incurred on its investment in the Canada Corporation contract with, a New York brewery.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL

Nickel is in the midst of a period of dynamic expansion and new uses for the metal are constantly being found; there seems to be no let up in sight for the future. Numerous and non-ferrous, International Nickel specializes in a wide variety of steel of copper, while a number of by-products available are important to the company. Here are some of the reasons why the stock is being recommended for the 50 level very persistently.

Hard Riding Cowboys and Wall-Eyed Bronks Thrill at Calgary Stampede

The hardest riding and roping bunch of "Bronco" that ever threw leg over wall-eyed broke, gathered this year at the annual Calgary stampede. Champion riders thrilled the crowds by taming some of the wildest outlaw horses that ever came from the foothills. The scenes ABOVE indicate that there was plenty of action. At LEFT is Earl Thode, North American champion on Wild Boy. CENTRE, Jim Mooney leaving Red Eye as gracefully as a swan diver. RIGHT, Herman Linder, Canada's famous all-round cowboy, is shown mastering Wild Fire. BELOW, Frank McDonald is shown in the hazardous sport of "decorating" a steer.

The Missing Man

by

Mary R. P. Hatch

After a time I learned that my twin brother, and who was said to bear a striking likeness to myself, was endeavoring to find me; for what purpose I could not understand. I had no desire to meet him, but kept out of his way, and gave orders that no one should direct him to me. I had no fear of being recognized by him, as I anticipated; any way, never appeared in public without being disguised, our nefarious banking operations making this necessary for my safety. In one place I would be known as dark haired with long whiskers; in another, as smooth-faced with light, curly hair; in a third with close cropped, dark (dyed) hair and light mustache.

Sometimes I appeared to be rather stout, again quite thin. You perceive it was easy to vary these disguises to almost any extent. So, as I have said, I did not fear recognition. Once or twice I got into the clutches of the law officers but eluded them by clever devices of my own. I am a mind reader, having been naturally peculiarly gifted in this direction, and by study of hypnotic methods in time I succeeded, or at least equalled, the performances of Marks, Bishop, and other mind readers. I got clear on one occasion by hypnotizing the jailer and walking off before his eyes, he believing that I was the jailer and he the prisoner.

At last a peculiarly aggravated swindle of ours in Goodwill riveted the attention of the whole country. Marks and Soule succeeded in escaping to Canada, where I hoped to meet them. Lenora was instructed to proceed to Quebec, while I was to join her later. But I was hard pressed. There seemed little chance of escape. I was at Portland depot, well disguised, yet, I knew, in imminent danger of arrest. While there I saw Vane. But at first I could not fully realize that it was my twin brother. Sometimes in the seclusion of home, at Lenora's request, I would doff all disguise, and at such times I was the exact likeness of the man I saw that day.

It appeared for a moment as if I were observing my own reflection in a mirror. Our clothes were much alike, our bags exactly of the same pattern, our overcoats, which we carried on our arms, near enough alike to deceive the owners. I started at him. I could not help it, the resemblance was so complete. But recollecting myself I walked to a little distance and surveyed him less openly, and I now observed that he acted strangely, as if he hardly knew what he was doing, or where he was. He looked about in a vague, puzzled way that surprised me. But he had observed my looks in his direction, and after a time walked up to me and said:

"You appear to know me. What is my name?"

Like a flash came the idea of shifting my identity to this man until I could make my escape. I thought no further than this. No conception of the unhappy complications to follow occurred to me. I answered almost directly, "Your name is Henry Ashley. I know you well."

He did not appear satisfied, but we entered into conversation. He told me he had suddenly forgotten his name and home, and every event of his past life, "I know nothing, absolutely nothing, of the past," he said.

I wished him to be ignorant for a time, and as I feared his belongings might contain the name or some date to refresh his recollections, or be the means of information to the some person to whom he might apply, I determined to change travelling bags and to possess myself of his note-book, or any papers that he carried. I succeeded in doing so that very afternoon, but I restored the money and gave him my own overcoat and travelling-bag to take the place of his which I thought it prudent to confiscate, the better to throw the police off their guard.

He was arrested a week later and taken to Goodwill, where his strange manner was believed to be a ruse on his part until his examination before the authorities when he was pronounced mentally unsound and sent to the asylum.

Lenora, who saw it in the newspapers the statement that Henry Ashley was arrested, went to see the prisoner, but cried out in astonishment when admitted. He denied that she was his wife, and, thinking it best for my safety, declared that she was. She saw now that I was at large, and she knew that the prisoner was the man she had seen in Grovedale, and when she had for a time mistaken for myself. She was convinced that he could be no other than my twin brother who had been sending me, but she, of course, said nothing to any one except to me when we met in Canada a few weeks later.

Meanwhile, I had found the note-book and read it with interest. I saw that Vane was a bank cashier, and I judged him to be an honorable citizen. I read the commission he had noted down,—"gold ring for Clare." "a writing-book for Perley," and his wife's request to "bring himself and let it be soon."

There were a few allusions to his cronies at the bank and the mill. His partners were named Henderson and Carter, whom I saw in another place spoken of as "Uncle Carter." Tony Osborn was the bank clerk, I learned, and the president was R. H. Hastings. There was an account, deal besides that told much of his life, both private and public.

In the pocket of the note-book was a key, and a ring with the words "in token" engraved inside. I put on the ring and determined to use the key, for I needed it to be the key to the bank, and I believed I could obtain the safe from the picture which I found in another receptacle of the note-book. I judged by these figures noted down that he did not dare trust to his memory which, no doubt had been gradually failing him for some time.

I went to Grovedale, and to the bank, which I found without any trouble, the newspapers in their eagerness for the sensational having given full descriptions of it and the village generally in connection with the alleged mysterious disappearance of the bank cashier and his private, strange periodical trips, of which the reporter made the most he could without actually accusing the honesty of the cashier.

When I mounted the steps to the bank a young man hailed me. "Hullo!" he said. "Hullo!" I answered, and added, "You didn't expect me back so soon, did you?" And after the reply that he did not, he passed down the street. But I was afraid he might return and I waited after opening the vault and safe by the figures I had found and taking two notes of four and five hundred each, which I judged would be useful. But I took no money.

In Vane's bag I found a small box containing some gold shirt studs, and in his overcoat pocket a silk travelling-cap, all of which bore his initial. As I had been seen to enter the bank, I judged it best to make it appear that it was Vane in the rightful cashier, and I left one of the shirt-studs on the desk, and then it occurred to me that he would be expected to visit his own home, I walked to the river bank and tossed the cap carelessly into the water, and dropped the other shirt-stud on the gravelled bank; not without some qualms of conscience, for there arose in my mind the distress of his wife in thinking he might be drowned. But I rejected the thought in a moment. He would soon be released, and then it would be all right, I reasoned.

Meanwhile, it was well for me to have the affair wrapped in mystery for the present.

I altered the notes and presented them at the bank. There was no need of any hypnotic or unusual methods to deceive Simon Low, I looked exactly like the man he knew, and he recognized me as Vane Hamilton almost directly, paying over the money without comment or question. To the other bank I produced credentials and a letter purporting to have been written by R. H. Hastings, whose hand writing I imitated from a note I found among Vane's belongings. I afterwards wrote the letter found under the bank president's door. I placed it there myself when on my way to join Lenora in Canada. In the letter I wrote as if if the cashier wished to make it appear that he would soon return and exonerate Osborn from suspicion in a manner to make the affair still more dark and puzzling.

After this I stayed in Quebec for a time, receiving letters from the Skales, which I was too wise to notice, for I was sure they were mine; and I visited Bruce on the street, for he had been pointed out to me as a detective, by Grim into a cellar. When he entered, my whiskers had been stripped off, my hair cut cropped to a low one, my countenance was changed by facial contortions to the appearance of a full-faced man, and I was talking Dutch with great volubility as I stepped lager beer. All had been done in a few seconds of time, and though he looked at me suspiciously and questioned me sharply he evidently failed to connect me with the man of whom he was in pursuit.

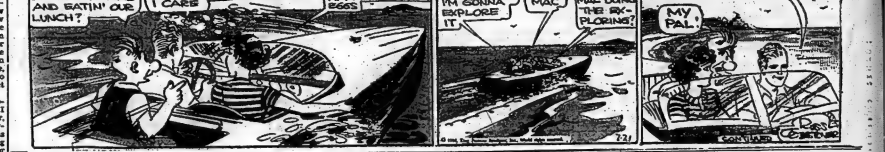
Finally, I read in the newspapers of the death, by drowning, of Henry Ashley, with an account of the whole affair, a summary of his life and dishonest course, which it stated had culminated in insanity and death.

I was sincerely sorry for all this, but I reasoned as best I could as I saw he probably failed to realize the horrors of his situation; I was not hard-hearted naturally, and my wicked life had failed to make me wholly bad. Though the declaration will, doubtless, be questioned, I will still venture to state—for it is true—that I actually grieved over his death, though I did not know him, and I felt regret for the sorrow of his wife and children, and tried to think it as well that they did not know of his death.

There were even times when I felt myself to be almost, if not quite, the means of his death; but Lenora proved to convince me that he was insane when I met him in Quebec, and his mysterious words have been arrested in my place, and as there was no means of actual identification about his person or belongings, his name appearing nowhere in full, that the probability was strong that he would never have found his way to his home. And I tried to believe her.

"Marks, my evil genius, was in Canada, and it was he who, after the death of the supposed Ashley, whom we knew to be Vane Hamilton, proposed that I return to Grovedale to take up the position of my dead twin brother. There would be no danger at all to me, he argued, with my peculiar gifts and talents. The affairs and personages connected with the bank matters had been laid bare by the investigators; pictures of many prominent citizens had been given, and I had his face and the ring, and some articles of clothing.

Besides, I possessed in an unusual degree the gift of mind-reading, the subtle magnetic or psychical chain which binds one individual to another, making them one through transmission of the vibrations of the mind. I cannot explain the phenomenon, but the impression in one mind doubtless produces an idea or emotion, the emotion an impulse to the imagination which constructs a vision, for I see, actually see, what passes in the minds of others. Upon this gift Marks declared I might depend, and he instructed me in the science to which he himself had introduced me until I really felt myself possessed of an almost irresistible power, and one that I ever used at times.



We made many experiments with Lenora's assistance. I would will that she should get up in the night at midnight to sweep the room, and she would arise and sweep it as well and carefully as though it were mid-day, evidently being able to see perfectly, without any light. I would pinch my arm, and when Marks was the subject he would suddenly cry out and clap his hand to the exact spot. But enough of this. It will be seen that my power over individuals was great.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Bending over the fallen black tribesman, Tarzan beheld these mysterious claw marks of which he had heard—bloody furrows at the throat of the mighty warrior—the sign of the Taloced Death! For a long time he gazed in deepest perplexity at the still, lifeless form.

True, the marks seemed the marks of a claw, though sharper than the claw of any beast he knew. He looked about him for the footprints of an animal. He saw many footprints—of the lion, the leopard and the panther, and of the lesser beasts of the jungle.

His nostrils dilated to catch some scent which might prove a clue. But the odor of many beasts and of men came to him, for the warrior had been slain on a game trail which tunneled the jungle like a highway for the dwellers of the forest, both men and beasts.

To Tarzan of the Apes, mighty Lord of the Jungle, death was no stranger. He had beheld its grim countenance in many forms. Also he had fathomed many mysteries of the primitive, forgotten wilderness, which had now in the face of the grace-less Taloced Death!

Blind Tourist 'Sees' Country, He Can Describe Landscape

Acuteness of Senses Shown by H. A. Velsey of Terra Haute, Ind.

ENJOYS TRAVEL

What can a blind man "see" on a cross-country motor tour of the Dominion?

Are the sights and sounds and odors of the highways, the cities, towns and villages, the songs of the birds and the smell of grass grass and newly mown hay as real to the blind as they are to his sighted friends and relatives?

"Yes" answers Mr. H. Artemus Velsey, of Terre Haute, Indiana, one of the city's latest visitors, who though blind (for the past fifteen years), is now enjoying one of his annual vacation trips by motor which this year will carry him through Ontario and some parts of the Maritime Provinces.

"Yes, they can and do see and feel and hear these things which their sighted brethren enjoy, in a measure, perhaps, which is keener and sharper, and time to be more appreciated than their sight-gifted friends," he adds.

Travelling in a large and expensive car, Mr. Velsey, his wife and one son and one daughter and a friendly neighbour from their home town who takes his turn at the wheel of the car during the lengthy tour, passed briefly at the city tourist camp yesterday afternoon for a late lunch before continuing on to the east. While lunch was being prepared Mr. Velsey holed in the comforting shade of the maples which fringe the camp.

Seldom Missing Year

"This isn't my first trip by motor, but by any means. It is very seldom that I miss a year", he declared to a representative of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer who sought him out. "And each year the thrill of preparation, the getting ready, and trip itself holds the same old appeal. . . I should not want to be in it if I have to stay home during the best part of the season."

Smartly dressed of the alert executive type, reading personality, and good fellowship, Mr. Velsey moved about the camp with the surety of one who had been here within its confines. Singularly interested in and versed by books and his conversation, he has manifestly refused to be an object of pity, or to with any aid in any matter that is not physically impossible for him to do himself.

"The last thing in the world any blind person wants is sympathy, or pity. He wants that same independence and that he is not pitied down just because he is sightless. And he would make his own way personally if people would only let him. But they won't. They hesitate in trying to help him for him. They continually impress upon him this one way that he should be helped. It is any wonder that some blind persons are grouchy and that he is not kindly acts that might be extended them? Thank goodness I have my family and the most of my friends trained differently".

How He Lost Sight

Fifteen years ago, Mr. Velsey, a prominent oil operator in the Oklahoma oil fields was one of a small party which attempted to cap a gusher that had accidently been fired, probably by a small stone blown with explosive force against the casing of the well, thousands of gallons of gasoline and oil were flaring to the skies in black smoke and red flame; the well owned by the small syndicate of which he was head had to be extinguished or they were faced with ruin. Desperate measures were in order. Disregarding the risks, Mr. Velsey, clad in a thin asbestos suit trundled a heavy dynamite bombe before him right into the inferno. A sudden flare back of the well ignited and him in its fiery embrace. There had been no time to secure an approved fire-proof helmet. And as the flames roared, companions rescued him writhing seared and blinded from the ground.

Today plastic surgery has removed most of the scars of that experience, but even the best specialists have failed to restore sight that has gone. Undaunted, however, he continues all operations working by remote control with such success that he is assured of an independent income. With a cannibose that has become proverbial he continues his trading in the stock market, buying and selling with the same success.

Terrier is Companion

As an animal lover, Mr. Velsey has as his constant companion a dog appearing to be-whiskered Scotch terrier who has been a member of the household for the past four or five years. Not until the dog was the owner of the owner make application to the Seeing Eye Institution" for a specially trained German Shepherd dog to assist him on his rambles, the only concession he will make toward his present affliction.

"Whiskey, here," he commented as he stroked the head of the wriggling Scotty who eyed the re-porter in doubtful manner, "I'm not like a Strange dog around the house, and I haven't the heart to do it he's been such a friend."

CONSTABLE, DICK

This photo, radioed from London, is a likeness of Constable Andrew Dick, who is reported to have interposed himself between a man, charged with murder, and a revolver in his possession, and King Edward who was passing by in a military parade.

As whirring tires spin over the concrete roads and highways, Mr. Velsey, comfortable in the front seat next the driver, and more keenly perceptive to conditions in the country through which they pass' overlooks fields en route, declare members of the family, and friends.

Feels Presence of City

"There's a hay field; the men must be cutting it. There's water down there. There's a city ahead by the time I count to ten of 'i'", he will point out as the car rolls along. Even the amount of traffic on the roads and in the cities and towns through which they pass is estimated almost correctly by the blind passenger.

"What is Hamilton like after all, but a state of mind?" he asks. "Perhaps it would be nice to have your sight back, but when one can't then there's no use worrying about it. If people would just forget to worry about half the things they do they'd be happier and live longer," he adds.

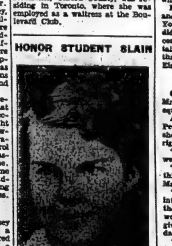
BODY SEVERED AS BOATS COLLIDE

Retel Anna Hamacher Lying in Bottom of Boat



Brockbridge, Ont., July 20—(CP) Hegarty Lake Muskoka was being dragged today for the body of Retel Anna Hamachar, 26, killed when the sharp prow of a motor boat cut through her rowboat and severed her body.

A. H. Hickmore, hotel proprietor, said he was driving his motor-boat, when it struck the row boat but he saw no signs of life as the boat sank. Half a mile further on, however, a human limb bobbed up in front of him momentarily.

Eye-witness from the shore said they had seen the girl sitting up in her row boat just before the crash but had not observed her, when the boats collided. It is believed she was lying in the bottom of the drifting boat, when Hickmore's craft accidentally struck it.

Miss Hamacher, whose home is at Plattsville, Oxford County, was residing in Toronto, where she was employed as a waitress at the Boulevard Club.

JAMES M. DEIR'S BODY RECOVERED

Mrs. John Beare of Belleville is Sister of Deceased

Rockville, July 21.— Late Saturday afternoon, the fully-clothed body of James M. Deir, aged 23 years, of New Dublin district, was recovered from the deep water of a quarry situated on the Perth road at Spring Valley, ending a search which was started that morning, after he had been missing from his home since the morning previous.

The young man, who had been working in a hay field Friday morning, left home on his bicycle and rode in the direction of the quarry which is a favorite swimming place for residents of the district. The quarry is about one and a half miles from the Deir residence, which is located on the New Dublin side road, six miles north of Brockville.

The bicycle was found at the quarry during Friday afternoon but little was thought of the matter until the young man failed to return home that night.

When he did not appear on Saturday morning Provincial Constable W. J. Chant was notified and a search was instituted. Grappling irons were carried out at the quarry where the water is said to be 70 feet deep in some places. About 3.30 p.m. Mr. Chant and Elgin Campbell, resident of the district, were in the act of grappling in the search, waded in the water and succeeded in the body which was immediately removed by Constable Carey and Lloyd Hall, undertaker, of this town here.

Dr. T. F. Robertson, chief coroner for Leeds county, was notified and left after Inquiring the circumstances decided that the deceased had fallen from the bicycle into the water and drowned, that he had gone to swim, or else accidentally into it, being stunned as he fell from the high bank. Dr. Robertson deemed an inquest unnecessary.

The late James M. Deir was born in Elizabethtown, near New Dublin, son of Edward Deir, and Sarah Ann Mc. Farlane. He spent all his life in that township and was engaged in farming pursuits. Besides a wide circle of friends, who regret his passing he is survived by two brothers.

Besides his father, he is survived by two brothers and four sisters. They are Jerome and Joseph Deir, on the home farm; Mrs. Ann Sargent Deir, at home; Mrs. John Beare, Belleville, and Mrs. Ethel-bert Wood, Hillcrest.

The funeral was held Monday morning at the late home with the family residence to St. Francis Xavier's church, where requiem mass was celebrated for the repose of his soul by Very Rev. Dean A. J. Stanley, assisted by clergy of the grave in St .Francis Xavier's cemetery.

A large number of sorrowing friends and acquaintances of the deceased and the bereaved relatives attended the several spiritual and floral tributes testifying to the esteem in which he was held rested on his sudden.

The pall-bearers were Phillip Deir, Bernard Deir, Leonard Deir, Lorne Barton, Hartley Orr, and Wilfred Ronan.

"If you want to argue yourself into equality with men," quoth the Judge, "I'll give you the same workhouse sentence that I would give a man for your case. Twenty days."

"You win, Judge," smiled Mrs. Beaumon as she departed for jail.

"Last year they were thick around here but we kept shooting and shooting, and now there's all moved up to John St. Mom's plank.

TWEED

Blankets Taken From Verandah Found at Park

Cushions And Blankets Are Recovered From Beaches

Tweed—A ten-minute shower, the first rain in Tweed district since June 27th., a period of twenty-two days fell on Saturday evening. It was too brief and light to do more than lay the dust of the roads and dampen the foliage or wilting plants.

Thieves made off with some blankets and cushions left on her verandah by Mrs. M. Dorlewicker who had been camping at Oak Lake with her daughters, Evelyn and Vera. The loss was discovered by Mrs. Dorlewicker on her return home on Friday afternoon. Constable J. C. Hayes was advised of the theft and was successful in recovering the missing articles at Tweed Memorial Park. Evidently a transient making his rounds of the homes near the Park had stolen the blankets and cushions and taken them to soften the park benches for the night. Included in the recovered articles were other cushions which according to Mrs. Dorlewicker, did not belong to her.

A number of Tweed Lodgefellows and Rebekahs attended Decoration and Church services at Thomasburg on Sunday afternoon. The service was held at the United Church with Rev. H. B. Herrington delivering a suitable message to the Oddfellows and Rebekahs.

Soloist at Tweed

Mr. Keith Henderson of Timmins formerly of Drayton, spent the week end at Sugar Island with Mr. and Mrs. R. B. McGee. Mr. Henderson possesses a baritone voice of fine quality and sang "Fear Not Ye, O Israel" (Tenor Solo) in Tweed United Church at the morning service.

Tweed Public pupils were successful in their recent literature and theory examinations. France Honors Official Party of Canadian Legion in Various Cities

Legion's Party Guests Of War City of Cambrai; Struggle Days Recalled

Brigadier General Ross Speaks at Luncheon Given by Mayor

SACRED PILGRIMAGE

Official Party Will Visit Mons—Fete Held in Paris

Cambrai, France, July 22 (CP)—The Canadian Legion's official party, here in advance of 6,000 pilgrims who will visit Vimy for dedication of Canada's memorial to her war-dead, came to Cambrai today to a cordial welcome and an exchange of memories.

War days were recalled by Brig.-Gen. Alex Ross, Canadian Legion president, at a luncheon given by the mayor and citizens.

General Ross said he had first seen Cambrai on Oct. 1, 1918, "from the ridge by Tilloy where I watched the battle being waged for its possession. A week later the Germans, and his own—the 6th Canadian Infantry Brigade—were launched in attack from the north, and surprised the enemy entered the city while other troops convoyed it from the south.

Cambrai In 1918.

"It was a sad sight. Firm hands fiercely have set it afire," said General Ross, "four beautiful buildings were shattered and ruined. Yet how death hardly with you."

He continued the story of the Canadians into Cambrai, and what their return here today. It would be impossible for all of the party pilgrims to visit Cambrai, consequently the schedule of the official party conveyed their greetings and expressed their pleasure at the wonderful recovery of the city.

"This is for us a sacred pilgrimage because we came hastily to visit the graves of those we left behind," he said. "Old comrades have not forgotten the friends of other years and would not come more at the resting place of those who lie in the soil of France."

Feted In Paris.

Marshal Henri Petain, the hero of Verdun, was present, and to him Mr. Justice Fabyan Taylor, former chairman of the Pensions Appeals Commission, voiced the thanks to the visiting party for their welcome in France.

BRITISH MINERS WAR ON FASCISM

Agree on Affiliation of Communist Party With Labor

London, July 22 (CP)—Inspired by left-wing successes in France, British Trades Unionists are moving towards a popular front against war, and Fascism.

The miners' conference, after a long and secret discussion, decided at Scarborough to invite the affiliation of the Communist with the Labor party—provided the Communist party accepts and abides by the constitution of the Labor party.

The Amalgamated Engineering Union already has supported the Communists' claim for affiliation. The National Union of Railwaymen, however, turned it down.

The miners' decision means that the full weight of their vote will be thrown on the side of the affiliation when the issue is raised at the Labor party conference at Edinburgh in October.

VALUABLE FURS TAKEN

"So have the idea. I was joking my head been drinking."

His explanation: He began an alligator in his automobile pool. The alligator bit him while he dressed a wound in its mouth. Mannix's head trauma was severely damaged in the struggle and the ocean-bath, it was the nearest thing handy.

LOWERED WATER IN TRENT RIVER SOLVES MYSTERY

Missing Car in Found Two Weeks After Theft

ON RIVER BED

Stop Logs And Insertion Causes Water to Lower South of Dam

Trenton, July 22.—Look in the most unexpected places and you will generally find that which you are seeking". At least so believes Benjamin Howard, lock-keeper at No. 2 dam on the Trent River.

Early this morning, Howard, while on a tour or inspection of the dam, noticed the top of a car sticking out of the water below the lock.

He immediately investigated and discovered to his amazement that the car was his own. It was stolen from in front of the power house on July 8th. How long the car had been submerged in ten feet of water is not known, but it probably would have remained there for an indefinite period had not logs been inserted last night which lowered the water to a five foot level.

No Milk Famine But Prices Might Rise

Toronto, July 22 (CP)—No milk famine for Ontario was in prospect but prices might rise in the Niagara Peninsula, E. H. Clarke, of the Ontario Milk Producers' Association, said today.

"We have 3,500 farmers now supplying milk for Toronto and we believe we will have an adequate supply," Mr. Clarke declared. "But if we have to drift new farmers into the number that supply Toronto, it may cost more."

An advance in price is likely only in the Niagara district, where the farmers' milk board hit by drought, said Mr. Clarke.

PEACE RIVER TO SEEK AUTONOMY

May Secede From Province of Alberta in Near Future

Peace River, Alta., July 22—(CP) Secession of the Peace River area famous grain-growing belt, from Alberta is advocated by a number of residents who desire better roads in the region and transportation outlet to the Pacific coast.

A five-man committee has been appointed to study the possibility of autonomy for the district. The members, all residents of this town, are: P. Rideout, K. W. Frederick, T. Adams, J. Phillips and H. Williams.

A. C. Fortescue, Grand Prairie businessman, told Edmonton newspapermen: "The people of the north have been fighting for a road and for decent roads inside the area. Even Ethiopia has better roads than we have and we have reached the limit of endurance."

Meetings have been held throughout the Peace River area with speakers advocating secession from Alberta. A form of government similar to that which prevailed in the north west territories prior to 1905, when the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were formed, is proposed.

A general council of five men, one to be elected each year, would supervise administration of the area, which includes a large part of the province.

COMET SIDESWIPE NOT DANGEROUS

Halley's Comet of 1910 Sideswept Earth With Its Tail

Boston, July 22 (AP)—The Peltier Comet, celestial wanderer newly discovered when it was visible to astronomer, was observed in the sky last night as a pinhead of light and as bright as the dimmest star in the big dipper.

The man on the street, remembering the brilliance of Haley's Comet in 1910, as it neared the earth, may assay the question: Would it be catastrophic if the "tail" of the Peltier Comet sideswiped the earth?

He received a likely answer in the performance of the Haley Comet in May, 1910.

C. C. Pelser, of Delphos, O., who discovered the more discernible of two new comets on the other was sighted by a Japanese scientist-astronomer, when it is closest to the earth it will still be 16,000,000 miles distant.

The chances that the tail of a comet—such as the two now visible—will sideswipe the earth are large, but astronomers have not yet seen a tail which might reach the earth in such a collision.

Earth balloons were sent up on the initial night, but 23 Trench students were permitted to pass into the tail, however, without effect. The Peltier was located, but 23 French students were permitted to pass into the tail, however, without effect. The Spanish popular finds delegates.

Airplanes played a large part in capturing the city, the communique declares.

London, Ontario, Woman's Letter Comes Back to City Clerk

London, Ont., July 22—(CP)—In a letter containing a note of tragedy a London woman has appealed to King Edward to help save the old homestead in which she was born on an outlying city street. She writes directly to the throne to explain her civic troubles and says she wishes the King could see the condition of her neighborhood.

The letter, posted here June 15, was received by the King's private secretary at Buckingham Palace July 2. Without acknowledging the woman's letter, the Royal secretary sent it to the secretary of State in Canada. From there it went to the Department of the Official affairs at Toronto and, finally, was sent back to city clerk K. Grant Crawford in Ottawa, arriving only a little more than a month after the date it started its travels.

City council will deal with the lengthy missive on Monday night.

BAND OF GYPSIES VISIT THE CITY

Colorfully dressed in the picturesque attire of Old Romany, a band of gypsies, travelling westward in a powerful car, passed through here in the city early last evening, but did not cause needed surprise. While his clan slumped a thing, George Lee, driver, drove steered comfortably in a low trailer attached to the car, between the jaws of a huge steel German shepherd dog.

Even the inveterate seekers who for years have made weekly trips in search of them are bothering this year. Even the pest hole, generally identified in large locations are unusually scarce, reported one district resident.

Ancient Post Cards Found in Chatham

Everything in Chatham, Ont. is up-to-date apparently, with the exception of the local stock of picture postcards. A Vimy pilgrim first brought up the matter when he wanted some postcards to take to Prince Edward Island, and found only a few and did not show Chatham to be still in the horse and buggy era. He found Toronto, Niagara Falls, Ottawa and twenty years ago—a boat which name of the pleasure resort section could remember being built—and a picture of the main street taken by the bandstand.

MALIGNED STARLING REDEEMING SELF

Long branded a bog-tailed, destructive orchard thief, a chattering pest, and once the despair of fruit growers in this section, the starling is starting to redeeming itself noticeably this season, according to reports from rural areas surrounding the city.

No longer does he descend with whirring wings on tempting cherry trees and berry bushes, only to be then beamed up with the red-winked blackbirds, declare observers, who are ordered to forage in the fields, with weed seeds and occasional raids on grain fields for a daily diet.

Though thousands of the birds may be seen flying in dark clouds on the south side of the city, winging in clumsy flight along with the blackbirds and robins, they are moving toward the marshes of the bay, few of the birds have been noticed within the city limits. The summer is not until the first snow flies will the grapevine birds flock to the shelter of tall buildings and turn to garbage dumps for their daily pickings.

AWNING DAMAGED BY FIRE TODAY

Fire squads narvered a second alarm late this morning when fire, believed to have started from a burning cigarette, ignited the awning of the Gem Drug Store on Front Street. A corner of the awning was destroyed, but the blaze was extinguished before it reached the building proper.

Achievement of Past Three Months Shows Club Quite Active

An achievement report of outstanding merit for the past three months' activity of the Kiwanis Club by Russ Sister, an interesting address by Neil Mackenzie of Brantford on park development and a report from the Chairman of Welfare, Dr. R. A. Flynn, respecting a case under advisement, were the highlights of a meeting of that club on Tuesday at the Queens Hotel. The speaker was introduced by Cliff Saragar, while Chairman Ian appreciation was expressed by Bill Cooke.

In all departments of the club have been active and great progress being made, the crowning achievement being the opening of the two playgrounds for the children of this city. Dr. Flynn reported the investigation of a case in Stirling where it was decided to purchase for a young boy, an artificial limb, the lad having been in a motorcycle accident nearly one year ago. The Aluadadoro attendance of 93.2 per cent and an attendance of 98.3 per cent has been maintained for the last three months, while a number of new members have been added to the roll.

Past presidents of the club will be in charge of a meeting a month from now till the end of the year with Cliff Saragar having the month of August, F. C. MacLaurin in September, Jos Smith for October, Jack McIntosh for November and Melba Shapiro for December. Dr. R. A. Fisher, C.C.F. candidate for the district will be the speaker at next week's meeting.

Mr. Mackenzie who is a graduate O.A.C. of Guelph, and resided in the Stratford Collegiate gave a most interesting account of the development of a park in Brantford, the Park Board of that city being the first in Canada on the one cent still supplied by the council each year. The speaker pointed out the work was slow and tedious but when completed the results would be well worth it. He stated to make a good job of the park it would take 10 years and at this time as the development was started in Stratford 30 years ago and not completed yet.

South African Youth Says Canadians Like His People

Alfred Mosman Travels 8000 Miles or More to Study Cheesemaking

ON 2-YEAR VISIT

Canadians are pretty much the same as residents of South Africa both in habits and manner of speech.

South Africa averages quite temperatures experienced range from 100 to 120 degrees in the shade.

Canada is a land of hospitable folk who make you feel at home the moment you meet them.

Canadian methods of making cheese and marketing it are about the same as those of South Africa, except for the fact that more modern machinery is available in this country. But in South Africa hired help is cheaper. There, dusky natives who work in the factories are paid at the rate of from 2 to 3 shillings per month, with board.

These are but a few impressions of Alfred Mosman, youthful native of the Province of East Griqualand, South Africa, who arrived in Belleville, this week, after his 8,000 mile journey from his native land to this country in order to study at first hand in cheese factories in this district methods of making the world famous Cheddar cheese for which this central district is known.

Two Years in Factories

At present Mr. Mosman is a protege of Mr. Robert Hall, well-known instructor of Foreman factory where he will stay for some months, making part in the actual daily work. His period of instruction in Canadian factories is expected to last for about two years.

Born in Griqualand, Cape Colony Province, reported by Rhodes and Naial, Mr. Mosman, who is of English parents, was the son of a cheese factory owner in his native country is financing the trip himself in order to learn more about the industry. Canadian methods, he admits, differ little in actual operation from those employed in South Africa, but Canadian cheesemakers, he has regarded as among the world's best, he believes, might be induced to pass on some of the secrets of an industry which has made them famous.

Made to feel at home the moment his boat touched the Port of Montreal, Mr. Mosman declared himself highly appreciative of the welcome that has been extended him since his arrival here but a few days ago.

Men of South Africans

"You Canadians, after all, are much like South Africans in the matter of hospitality, and in almost everything else, too," he remarked. "It really seems just like home to be here."

With shirt sleeves rolled to his elbows, Mr. Mosman was busy at his assigned job of actual cheese making in the Foxboro cheese factory under the tuitions of Mr. Hall, when sought out by the Ontario Intelligencer.

"Methods here are practically the same as those of our own country, but here you have more up-to-date equipment. There, however, we have plenty of help, which is cheap, too. We employ the natives for some of the less skilled work, but that's about all they are used to do—just jobs that are the same day after day. Our work doesn't require much brains or initiative. All they are for this is about 15 shillings per month and a little maize for their meals. That is about all they eat. The job of feeding them isn't such a problem.

Mr. Mosman's trip from Africa was a lengthy one, but a bit monotonous owing to the lack of incidents of the journey and ...ie lack of excitement en route. He was accompanied to Canada by his cousin, John Mosman who is at present in a farm in the Ottawa district, where he will learn modern and approved methods of Canadian farming on a larger scale than that carried on in his native Africa. Both boys are financing their own trips and expect to make a lengthy stay in Canada before returning to home soil.

Army Manoeuvres! Yes, But Peaceful

Recent war scares brought a real scare to a Point Traverse resident the other day when he was awakened to rise in the middle of the night, he was amazed to hear the distant booming of heavy guns and was the flash of gunfire and powerful searchlights sweeping across the sky.

His fears were dispelled however, when he realized he remembered that the annual American army manoeuvres were being held at Cayuga, N.Y., some forty miles across the lake.

On the other side, with the words "Success to Upper Canada" and two oberbilms clasping hands over a tablet encircled by an urn. MORRIS BECKWITH PAYS TWO FINES

In a special police court held at the Court House yesterday afternoon, Morris Beckwith, local motor transport operator, appeared on five charges arising out of the alleged illegal operation of his motor transports. Three of the cases were dismissed, the two charges of forgery, all laid by Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Hynes, were adjourned to the office of the latter to be heard before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C.

Beckwith pleaded guilty to operating or causing to be operated a motor vehicle without having thereon any P.C.V. licence there-in attaching to the windshield, and was fined $10.00 and costs.

On two other charges judgment was reserved until late this afternoon. B. C. Donnan, K.C., local Crown Attorney, prosecuted all cases presented.

RUN AT HAYLOAD FOR GREEN PEAS

Disillusionment and disappointment was registered in the faces of two small children, while horror and relief alternated on the countenances of passing motorists respectively early on West Bridge St. early this morning, when a tiny tot was attaking a passing load of hay for green peas, suddenly dashed from the sidewalk in front of a car across the highway directly in front of passing traffic.

A woman screamed. Tires shrieked as a protest as brakes were hurriedly applied. Both drivers swerved toward the curb as childish figures crouched across the street and chinked at the hay. Frantic parents stood horror-stricken on the sidewalk while cars whizzed by. A few minutes later a good old-fashioned spanking was in the process of administration, while the driver of the horses went serenely on his way unaware of the drama just enacted in the shadow of his wagon wheels.

Following continued complaints regarding teen aged boys repeated stealing apples on George St. local police investigated the trouble yesterday afternoon, but upon their arrival the lads had successfully made a hasty exit and were not to be seen. They have received numerous complaints from residents of that section of the city regarding small boys stealing garden and fruit produce and this practice must stop or some drastic measure must have to be taken," Chief Kidd announced in a warning note today.

Upon his return the bicycle was gone.

While patrolling his beat late yesterday afternoon P. C. Evans found a red coloured bicycle chain abandoned in the clump of bushes behind the premises of the local Canadian Department Store, adjacent to the footbridge gangway. The "bike" was taken to the police station for safe keeping and was still in the possession of the authorities at noon today, no reports of its being misplaced having been received.

HOTTER WEATHER FOR WEST CANADA

Medicine Hat Recorded Even 100 And Calgary New High of 94

Winnipeg, July 23—(CP)—Rain today brought relief to the Edmonton district of northern Alberta, and thought clear skies over the rest of the Canadian prairies presaged further hot weather and drought damage to crops, farmers hoped despairingly the precipitation would go further afield.

First signs of rust damage were reported in the west yesterday as temperatures rose generally with the century-mark reached again in Alberta. Medicine Hat recorded an even 100 and Calgary reported a new high for the year at 94.

Continued warm weather was forecast in all three prairie provinces and there was no promise of the general rains so badly needed in the drought-stricken areas extending across the entire southern area of the Canadian west. A few scattered and light thunder showers were held probable in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Even the northern districts which had enjoyed more moderate temperatures during the past 10 days of intense heat recorded high marks yesterday. In Edmonton the reading was 96, Battleford, Sask., 98, Saskatoon 96 and Prince Albert, Sask., 96.

Southern districts of Saskatchewan were slightly cooler than in Alberta but Swift Current reported a high mark of 98 and Moose Jaw 90. Although no rain fell in Manitoba temperatures there were lower with the mark at Brandon 86 and Winnipeg 86.

Rust was reported in practically every field. In the Moose Jaw district, hatching developed there since the latter part of last week. A heading crop expert said, however, he did not expect rust damage in the Moose Jaw district would be as extensive as that of last year.

Claims Danzig to be Base To Lord Baltic, N. E. Europe

Manchester Guardian Says German Plan is to Control East

INDIFFERENCE BLAMED

London, July 21 (CP)—The Manchester Guardian said today that German Nazis plan "to convert Danzig into a great military and air base, by which they hope to dominate the Baltic and eventually all eastern Europe."

The Guardian said suppression of the Free City's constitution amounted to the creation of a virtual dictatorship on the model of the third Reich.

It dismissed the idea that any immediate action was being considered by the League of Nations or the British government.

"There is a tendency here to underrate the importance of the Danzig Nazis' activities," it said. "They are taken very seriously in Paris."

Nothing could have been taken here until now is that if the Poles, who are interested, are not prepared to defend Danzig, then no one else can be expected to bother about it."

TENT SAVES LIFE

Caledonia, Ont., July 23—(CP)—Verna Chambers, 16 months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Chambers, Welland, probably owes her life to a tent pitched under the window of a room in which she was sleeping while visiting relatives here. She fell out of the first storey window and dropped 15 feet to the ground but appeared to suffer serious injury. Her parents believe she struck the roof of the tent and rolled to the ground at the side of the tent.

Billy Bell at Work, Not Out of a Job

Halifax, July 23—(CP)—Billy Bell operator of the diamond drill which "found" Alfred Bedding, Dr. D. E. Robertson and Herman Magill in the Moose River mine last April is still on the Provincial Government pay roll, Mines Minister Michael Dwyer said today.

Reports that Bell, one of the heroes of the mine rescue, was out of work were untrue, the Mines Minister stated. Billy Bell, along with a half dozen other diamond drill operators, was retained by the government for field work and had been asked to superintend a prospecting job in Dysboro County three weeks ago. He declined because he had another contract in view, Mr. Dwyer stated.

Hamilton, Ont., July 22—(CP)—John S. McArthur, Brockville, president of the Brockville Rotting Co., Ltd., is in hospital here with a broken back and in a grave condition, doctors reported today. He was the victim of an automobile accident when the car in which he was riding crashed into a ditch outside the farm of O. M. Brown Ancaster, last night.

MILITIA CHANGES ARE EXPECTED

Complete Reorganization on Modern Lines is Predicted

"Nothing official yet, although it is very probable that changes in the present system will be made all along the line" stated Lt. Col. R. Gow, Officer Commanding the Argyll Light Infantry today commenting upon recent reports from Ottawa of prospective radical changes in the Canadian Militia, which are said to contemplate a complete reorganization on modern lines. It is believed, that under the new changes the number of cavalry and infantry regiments will be reduced throughout the Dominion, and substantial expansion of machine gun units, artillery corps and tank corps will result, with greater attention being paid also to air equipment and personell.

It is reported, that the Durham and Northumberland Regiments may be amalgamated into one unit, and that the rumored changes will affect various other older regiments in Eastern Ontario, some of which may disappear from military service. Some of the counties in this area which are mentioned in the reorganization will include Hastings, Peterboro, Northumberland, Durham, Victoria, Frontenac and others.

It is possible that Peterborough's 57th Regiment and the Prince of Wales' Dragoons are likely to be disbanded and to be replaced by a machine gun battalion consisting of some 600 officers and men.

"It isn't likely that such an old Regiment as the local Argyll Light Infantry will be disbanded," stated Lt. Col. E. A. Geen today, "although we are not quite sure and have no official statement to make in the matter."

Although none of these reports from Ottawa is official, it is expected that any extensive changes will be announced this summer. Local officers have known for some time that the Department of National Defence has had under consideration an extensive development embracing many new ideas.

Bear-Hunter Believed to be Armed Madman

Brockville, Ont., July 23—(CP)—Charging a 22 calibre repeating rifle, a man believed to be identical with the apparent madman who terrorized farmers in the Lansdowne district last week, appeared early today at the Union Station and told a taxi-cab driver he had killed a bear. Five feet tall in some non-existent cherry trees near the station, John Donovan, the taxi-cab man, immediately proceeded to the police station and returned with officers who were unable to find the man.

NO MARRIAGE SAYS BARRYMORE

Will Put Stop to Delivery of Ring if Messenger Attempts

Hollywood, Calif., July 23—(AP)—Elaine Barrie's dream of an 8 1-3 carat diamond ring on her engagement finger was jarred today by a telegram from John Barrymore, 56, and Frank.

The actor had suggested her smooth the gray-haired Theatre of his 21-year-old protege.

"Don't send it," he said along with a dame like that. We're not going to Cuba."

Perhaps, he was thinking of the days, many months ago, when dark-haired Miss Barrie merrily threw the huge diamond at him in her New York apartment.

But in the Barrie home in Hollywood, a few miles from Barrymore's estate, Elaine had ideas of her own today and her brown eyes were alight.

"I'm just about the happiest person," said in dulcet tones. "The diamond ring and a golden Bermuda mandarin coat are to be my very own.

"Because it last week, and according to an agreement, we are being sent by a New York bank to Cuba at Jack Hilton, and then they'll be given to me."

Said Barrymore: "If any bank messenger tries to deliver that ring to her, I'll put a stop to it."

FUTILE NEUTRALITY.

"True tolerance rather than futile neutrality in human relationships was urged by Rev. Dr. Ralph Sockman in a sermon at Christ Church Methodist Episcopal Church, New York. "The ill-dispositions of the world, religious, social and political, are not to be reconciled by extremists and fanatics who lack the spirit of forbearance. Causes that are strong do not need to be showing their muscles and clenched fists. Reason that is sure of truth does not need to shout. Religion that is confident of its source can be fair enough to study both sides of the question." Dr. Sockman said there was nothing of the narrowness of fanaticism about the man of Nazareth, who dined with Pharisees and Publicans, who chose Samaritan foreigners as heroes and paid high compliments to Roman centurions. He did not display that single-track mentality which characterizes the man of one idea. The true Christian platform is one of broad tolerance.

Dr. Sockman declared that true moderation has many counterfeits. In trying to see all sides of a question, men sometimes do not focus on any course of action. Seeing the weaknesses and blunders and selfishness of all parties, they attach themselves devotedly to none. They remain disinterested religion, dabbling a little on the edges of various groups, but never wholeheartedly committing themselves to any.

"Vital, enduring religion is not nourished by the beliefs that drip off the eaves of other people's minds. The men who could exercise Christian moderation, must hear what other people think but he must also think for himself if he is to arrive at any definite goal. Too many of us think we are open minded and broad, while, in fact, we are simply unsettled and unclear.

"No man has risen above his fellows who has not something of the enthusiast in his nature. Enthusiasm is contagious. Enthusiasm makes men magnetic. Difficulties before which cleverness fails, disappear before earnestness. Men of enthusiasm have been the life of the church, reforming its abuses, planting its missions, founding its colleges."

Something of the family spirit must permeate the association of nations and until such time as this is manifest, there can be no lasting peace, said Rev. Robert Davis of Paris, France, preaching in Brick Presbyterian Church, New York. The double attitude of man, his friendliness towards members of his own family contrasted with the fierceness of his competitive spirit outside his own home, has been responsible for many ills. It was his lack of family spirit among the nations which made ineffective the grandiose schemes of the statesman for peace.

Rev. Matthew Golden preaching at high mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral declared the modern world like Ancient Babylon. "The spirit of paganism in our world today may be seen in our magazines, in the theatres and in the press. This worldly spirit is the same as that which permeated the city of Babylon when the Christians spent their days in idleness and their nights in revelry. Worldliness is increasing, our civilization fosters it and progress multiplies it, while the press introduces it into the humblest home.

Bishop Warren L. Rogers of Ohio, stressed the need of prayer in a confused world. "We live in an age of highly technical science. We know exactly what will happen if we do certain things. We can demonstrate these things without question. But because we cannot always demonstrate the efficacy of prayer, according to the rules of technical science, many conclude there is little to it. Our mood is not one of prayer but one of achievement, performance and action. In the midst of the dust and confusion of life, the whirl in which we live, we need these moments when we can gather the soul together with all its strength and power and prepare ourselves for the fray. We need vision and a sense of security, prayer gives us both."

A BARGE RESERVOIR

Those elements and conditions which make possible man's dwelling upon earth are so infinitely apportioned that it is only when something untoward happens that man sees what a good place the earth generally is. The question of water is not a very pressing problem in this part of the world and as a result Canadians know little of artesian wells. So when the announcement was made the other day that there is a virtual area of western Ontario from Lake Huron to Toronto which is a virtual series of artesian springs, Canadians are found to know very little about them.

The width is reported to be five or six miles. An underground river is said to exist. In the low are a large river cutting across from Wasaga to Toronto was covered up and remains underground.

With the change in the physical condition of Ontario from a forested area to a denude one there are results—lessened water-reservoirs, and dry springs. In the summer-time the farmers are sometimes pressed for water. Hence the interest of the Governments of Canada and Ontario in the investigation of this reservoir of springing water.

CANADA'S ENEMY NO. 1 IS NOW THE SPRUCE SAWFLY, an importation from Europe which is threatening the valuable spruce forests of Canada. Loss running into the billions of dollars feared if the sawfly invasion can not be checked and the invader held back and driven into the sea. Belleville is particularly interested in the European sawfly by reason of the government's action in calling upon the experts of the Entomological Laboratory here to investigate and if possible devise means of successfully combatting the sawfly army. Mr. Alf Baird, of the Entomological Laboratory, has just returned from a trip as far East as Gaspe studying the inroads already made by the sawfly in the spruce forests. Mr. Baird brought back specimens of the sawfly and these are being studied at the Laboratory with a view to developing parasites which will attack and destroy the sawfly. Unfortunately the sawfly has a long lead on the entomological experts having been quietly working for months before the danger was fully discovered. One peculiar feature of the life and works of the sawfly is the fact that for the most part the sawfly, nation, as far as workers, or destroyers, are concerned, are females. There are few males and the female sawfly apparently can get along very well without any male sawflies hanging around. That's just another vagary of Nature which arouses thought.

CANADA'S FIRST STEAM ENGINE pulled the first train in Canada one hundred years ago, July 21, 1936, sixteen miles, the beginning of the 24,000 miles of railway now operated by the Canadian National Railway system. The streamlined miracle of today does not excite as much interest as that puffing teakettle on wheels, "The Dorchester" did one hundred years ago. Crowds flocked to see it and many who gazed at the queer contraption were pessimistic of its ability to compete very successfully with the stage coach of the day or the boats driven by the wind. Later when the C.P.R. was being built across the continent there were men in high places in Canada who believed and bodily asserted that the railway would never earn the price of grease on the axle wheels. It was Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who rebuked critics of the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific with the words, "Oh, ye of little faith, can you not see Canada as I do, the greater Canada which will require all these existing railways and more to cope with its expansion and prosperity." Sir Wilfred never sold Canada short. One hundred years is not a great length of time in the life of a nation or a family, and if one could just envision the thoughts of those people who watched "The Dorchester" puff and blow and draw a couple of coaches at the rate of almost twenty miles per hour, while the fireman tossed great chunks of wood into the fire box, what a thrill that would be. The endless discussions in the stores and homes, speculations of the possibilities of the steam engine and railways in the development of Canada, then a nation of pioneers sprawled along the waterways, with the interior more or less a closed book and the great West just a treasure chest for the fur traders who discovered all attempts at colonizing. If any far-seeing citizen of that day had dared to prophesy the more than forty thousand miles of railway trackage which Canada possesses today, giving employment to 120,000 men and women, 6,000 locomotives, the latest being the streamlined miracles of today—his sanity would have been doubted. The thought that persists in the midst of the whole scene is that the folks of that day were more impressed with the demonstration of the "Dorchester" than we are today at the sight of a streamlined monster locomotive requiring more power to draw it in a whistle than the entire power required to run the "Dorchester" and its string of cars.

THE FEMALE BEING MORE DEADLY THAN THE MALE, according to some rhymer, the sawfly female does not depend upon the male sawfly to accomplish anything—in fact has learned to dispense with the male altogether. Here's a thought for the modern woman—but is the modern male would rather she didn't think about it.

MOST OF FIRES UNDER CONTROL

By the Canadian Press

Forest fires raged in both eastern and western Canada today, and while thousands of watchful rangers and volunteers still stayed on duty in Ontario in spite of a generally improved situation, hastily-recruited fire-fighters battled flames in the region of Alberta's Jasper National Park.

Most serious of Ontario's reported fires, majority of which forestry officials classified as "under control" roared over 40 acres of timberland at the headwaters of the Goulais River in the Sault Ste. Marie area.

Two fires burned fiercely in the Jasper Park region in Alberta. One menacing Maligne Lake area, the other only four miles from the town of Jasper, near Edmonton Lake.

FINDS BULLET IS FIRED BY STEPSON

Indian Youth Killed Step Father in Defence of His Mother, Claimed

Fort Francis, Ont., July 22.—(CP)—Glen Lesage, Indian youth committed for trial on a charge of murder by Magistrate H. L. Cruso here today, charged with the murder of his aged step-father, Frank Lesage, an Indian trapper of Sapawe Lake, 90 miles west of Fort William.

At the inquest last night the coroner's jury returned a verdict finding Lesage that death "between the hours of four and five o'clock in the morning of July 19 from a bullet wound inflicted from a rifle also fired from a .30-30 rifle in the hands of his step-son Glen Lesage in defense of his mother."

Officers of the Ontario Provincial police from here and Port William were sent to Sapawe Lake Sunday after authorities said they had received a telegram from the youngest Lesage telling of the shooting. The youth was brought here.

A minor was killed the Lesage cabin after the shooting told police Glen said he had shot the trapper to protect his mother and four other children in the family, when the step-father threatened to kill them all. The miner said Lesage related he had fired, when the older man began clubbing his wife with the butt end of a rifle.

Dominion Premiers to Have Say in Coronation

London, July 22—(CP Cable)—The Court of Claims in connection with the Coronation of the King, scheduled originally to meet next year, postponed its meeting to a later date owing to indispositions and prior engagements of certain members, it is announced.

Only those Dominion persons will submit their claims to serve His Majesty in different unusual capacities.

The King several weeks ago approved a committee of 43 persons at a privy council to take care of the arrangements for celebration of the Coronation in May, 1937.

Monday night the Prime Ministers and High Commissioners of the Dominions were appointed by the King to serve on a Special Coronation commission.

Since the Coronation of King George in 1911 the statute of Westminster has endowed the Dominions with new status and this is recognized as making it essential that the Dominion governments have some say in deciding general arrangements for the ceremony.

STEWART-WARNER HEAD SATISFIED WITH BUSINESS

Jos. E. Otis of Chicago Pays Visit to Plant at Belleville

FURTHER PROGRESS

Local Plant Praised by Corporation Head

Youthful, energetic Joseph E. Otis, Chicago, president of the Stewart-Warner Corporation and subsidiaries head of an industrial empire of 5,000 employees and plant and equipment estimated as many millions in the United States and Canada, seated in a swivel chair in the private office of Mr. W. E. Hammond, general manager of the Belleville plant, this morning in an interview sandwiched between long distance telephone calls from the Company's head office, Chicago, and telephoned quotations on sales in South America and other distant points, pointed to a bright spot of industrial recovery that even now is commencing to show well above the business horizon.

"In Belleville on a regular visit to the Company's Canadian plant, Mr. Otis declared himself well satisfied with the trend of business at the present time.

Satisfied With Business Trend

"Like other companies, we, too, had our own difficulties during the recent business depression, but we're fairly well out of the woods. We've been saying for some time now that recovery is here or almost here, but we've had to work hard at it and it isn't very hard to find.

"Take for example the manufacturers of trucks, for example. Many of them are rushed to work that is weeks and months behind schedule. That is an almost infallible sign of recovery. Motor companies commence to get busy again the first call is for tools and equipment with which to work. If, for example, we wanted a special machine, a punch press or some other equipment, we'd have to wait about four months before the order could be filled. That indicates the position many of the manufacturers are now in.

Sky Is Permanent Forecast

"We of the parent company look for very decided industrial development during the next few years," confidently predicted Mr. Otis.

A tendency to busy a office bossed imperiously. "There's another Chicago call," invited Mr. educational ground manager of the local plant. Quietly, efficiently, President Otis conferred briefly with head office, checking quotations that mean money in foreign lands. The swivel chair squealed to the front again.

$1,700,000 Profits Last Year

"As one instance of the effects of the business decline lately our company suffered a loss of some two millions seven hundred thousand dollars in 1931. But we pulled out of that all right. Just last year our books showed a profit of one million seven hundred thousand. That, in itself, indicates how recovery is coming about. The year now, we're running about twenty per cent. ahead of last year's orders."

Special tribute was paid by Mr. Otis to the tact and efficiency of the local plant. "Its record is more than satisfactory; we are all well pleased with the results shown.

Local Plant Praised

"This year we are granting all our employees of the main plant and subsidiary branches a full week's vacation with pay. It is the first time this has been tried in Canada, and already we have heard many favourable comments over this action. In this manner we can show a little of our appreciation to our workers, many of whom have been with us for many years.

"In your own plant here you have, for example, some employees who have been steady employees here since the plant was first started, back in 1910. You have also (checking over a list supplied by Mr. Bowerman) a total of 37 employees here who have been with us for, five to ten years. That is a good record, and one that we hope will continue. Steadiness workmen means better workmanship".

Just one more question, Mr. Otis," requested the representative of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer. "Can you detect any difference in the capabilities or efficiency between Canadian workmen and those of the United States?"

"From my own observation they're all pretty much alike. You could hardly draw a dividing line there. After all we are just about the same people, and we're all pretty much cast in the same mould."

Mr. Otis will spend the remainder of today here conferring with local officials and making his plant inspection and will return to head office tomorrow.

SUMMER CAMP AT OAK LAKE

Rev. King Gordon Speaks on Events of This Age

Stirling, July 22.—(Special)—The Summer Camp of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada began its activities on Monday, July 20th, with Rev. Prof. King Gordon outstanding student of world affairs to be the speaker at each of the evening Campfire Services.

Rev. Gordon, who is the son of "Ralph Gordon", famous author, was introduced formally to the gathering for the first time at the first Campfire Service which took place on the evening of the first day of camp. He was introduced by Rev. W. J. Smith of Port Perry, President of the camp. In an address which held the youthful audience spellbound Rev. Mr. Gordon revealed a facility of remembering even the most trivial things of life by giving a resume of the news, he had read in the daily press as he sat at supper. Not one article of importance which had appeared in the paper of that day had been missed by this keen, intimate man who reads and remembers. Then in a quiet impressive tone he took his audience away from the gay glow of the camp fire on an imaginary trip around the world, painting word pictures of events and circumstances which had been his during his travels. He paused at Geneva, where several years ago he had taken breakfast with Philip Baker, who was recently elected to the British House of Commons. And in Berlin where he had dined as a guest of the Youth movement on the Social Democratic Party. The present gravely of Europe, again treading the path way to conflict. "To brighten the shadow" he said in this part, he said, "where in a few days the athletes from the Soviet Union will take part in the games in their physical culture demonstration." He told of the mass military parade spectacle in the famous Red Square of Moscow, when nearly two hundred thousand youths of Russia paraded in shorts and gym shirts displaying their well developed bodies of a new order, marching in perfect rhythm, past the heads of the nation and the tomb of Lenin.

"Such is the activity of youth in various part of the world of which Canadian Youth forms a part. A camp such as this is a forcast where we strive to forget our world in the hadnips in quiet solitude. But we are part of it and must study its revolutionary changes because of their effect upon us."

This was a most impressive address by a broadminded man who has travelled to all parts of the world seeking knowledge of the various social systems and possessing a marvellous memory and being a gifted orator he is enabled to impart his impressions in a most interesting fashion. A real wealth of educational material will go out to the fortunate young people who will hear his evening addresses throughout the next seven days.

The camp which is sponsored by the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada and which embraces seven Presbyteries within its bounds, has as its aim inspiration, Bible study, Missionary Education and Method of Christian endeavor among the young people as well as teaching the Art of Wholesome Recreation. The carefully arranged program has been planned by a committee representative of the camp of the work and a capable staff of officers placed in charge of the daily activity. Special Bible study courses will be conducted under the leadership of Rev. J. E. McKee, Rev. C. D. McLellan, Rev. J. M. Patterson, Rev. J. F. Lane and Rev. D. M. Stewart. Rev. R. T. Richards, Dean of Studies, will direct the Bible Study assignments. Courses in Young People's Methods will be directed by Rev. R. H. Rickard and Mission Studies supervised by Mrs. (Rev.) R. M. McMullen of Ivens.

Swimming, hiking and many other means of helpful recreation will also have their place in the regular routine of camp life. A camp mother and camp nurse working in co-operation, will direct the girls and be on hand in any case of emergency. A special program is planned for Saturday afternoon with swimming races and water sports. A special communion service will be conducted at the morning service of the final day by the President.

Five camps is open to delegates from any church or any other young people over sixteen who are desirous of attending on their own initiative. The officers in charge are as follows:

Vice President—Rev. J. G. McKee, Wellington, Ont.

Secretary—Miss Susie VanCamp, Blackstock, Ont.

Business Manager—Rev. T. M. Patterson, Bloomfield, Ont.

Assistant Bus. Mgr.—Rev. H. A. Mallow, Gore's Landing, Ont.

Tuck, along with Rev. R. T. Richards; Miss Helen Clarke; Miss Ines Rhoads; Miss Marion Winter; Gordon Adams; Bill Weir; Reuben Sayrell; Miss Rita Palliser and Dorothy Cranston form the Executive Committee.

Holiday Innovation Is Given Workers

For the first time in the history of the local Stewart-Warner and Canada Corporation plant, factory employees of the plant are to be given this summer a full week's vacation with pay in recognition of an excellent record established during the past year, it was announced by Mr. Joseph E. Otis, Jr., Chicago, president of the Company, through Mr. W. E. Bowsome, vice-president of the Stewart-Warner and Alemite Corporation of Canada, and general manager of the local plant, today.

Mr. Otis, on his regular trip of inspection of the local plant today pointed out: "We have decided this year to give all our factory employees who have been with us for a year or more, a week's vacation with pay. The same plan is being installed in the Bendix Company at Bridgeport, and in the die casting plant at Chicago".

It was stated by Mr. Bowsome today that about 85 per cent. of the local staff would be affected by this vacation order.

REMANDED ON BREAKIN CHARGE

Transient Found in Creamery Plant by Police

James Doyle, transient, appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace today charged with breaking and entering the premises of the Maple Valley Dairy Company. Doyle was not asked to plea to the charge, but remanded to the custody of the County Jail until Friday for trial.

While patrolling local streets in the police car at 1.40 a.m. today Const. Arnold picked up a road broadcast message relayed from London CJE at the police station, instructing them to proceed to the creamery where a breakin had been reported. Sitting up Constable Taylor enroute the officers arrived at the scene to arrest a man giving his name as James Doyle inside the building. Doyle, police stated today was staggering about the boiler room in a very intoxicated condition, and was found in possession of a bottle of rubbing alcohol, police stated.

Doyle procured entrance to the Creamery by means of jimmying the front door of the premises and forcing his way into the building. No attempts had been made to rob the office upon the arrival of the officers, who were at the scene of the breakin only a few short minutes after it had been reported by residents of that district.

Later while re-checking the scene of the crime, P C Arnold found a window broken in the Greenleaf building, at the corner of Foundry and Station Sts. Doyle, police added today, admitted breaking this window, but did not attempt to make an entrance. Also found in Doyle's possession was a parcel containing a quantity of bacon ends.

When he appeared in court before the Justice of the Peace today, Doyle admitted he had been arrested on a charge of drunkenness in Belleville some 14 months ago. He also reiterated his statements of last night in stating he did not intend burgalizing the premises of the Creamery, but was intoxicated when he forced his way into the building. The charges of breaking and entering remained.

DIMMING LIGHTS URGED BY CHIEF

Chief of Police Kidd Endorses "Courtesy Driving Campaign"

"In reference to the new "TRY COURTESY" campaign being launched throughout the province by the Provincial Government, I would like to say a word in connection with this matter. Ask motorists to dim their lights when approaching oncoming motor traffic at night and also to drive more slowly and cautiously when proceeding around curves," Chief Kidd urged after receiving a letter from Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways for the Province of Ontario.

In his circular letter the Minister of Highways asked the assistance of the police authorities in the municipalities in endeavoring to achieve the maximum effectiveness possible in the new "TRY COURTESY" campaign. We realize the high degree of law enforcement so far as traffic rules and regulations are concerned that is being maintained throughout the province by the many police departments in the different cities, but we are going further. We are seeking the assistance of the police of each city as Belleville and other larger centres in an effort to develop the true spirit of courtesy on the road," wrote Mr. McQuesten.

In conclusion Mr. McQuesten asked the unified efforts of newspaper editors and police authorities in bring the campaign more forcibly before the individual driver throughout the province. Also on the other fellow and "TRY COURTESY" on the highways," is the campaign slogan.

CONSTIPATION" MAY BE MORE SERIOUS THAN YOU THINK

It Causes Discomfort, May Even Lead to Disease

Constipation" is not a condition to be treated lightly. Continued neglect of regular habits of elimination tend to lower your resistance. Then there is the actual discomfort. For constipation" is one cause of headaches, poor appetite, listlessness.

Common constipation usually develops when you eat meals that are deficient "bulk." Your system fails to get needed intestinal exercise. Fortunately, today, you have a generous source of effective "bulk" in Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

Within the body, the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass, which gently cleanses the system. This natural laxative food also supplies vitamin B and contains iron.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, etc. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company as an effective laxative food for constipation. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Exotic Type Of Eyebrow Not Stylish

JUNE LANG

Her pretty eyebrows have a normal and neat contour

By HELEN POLLETT

The exaggerated thin line of the eyebrows given to the face a rapid expressionless appearance and for that reason there should be replaced over the return of normal contour. The exotic type is no longer fashionable, and except for very lips, very little make-up is being used.

Almost all eyebrows require a certain amount of weeding. The outline must be clear and graceful and in harmony with the shape of the eyes. Before using tweezers apply hot water. There will be less discomfort; the little hairs will come out without much pressure.

Hot water is not good for an extremely dry skin, nor is soap unless it is bland. The best means of keeping clean a complexion that is inclined to fluff off in scales is to use a cleansing cream, then apply a wash cloth that has been dipped in sudsy water. The lubricant acts as a protective agent.

Rinse the face with tepid water, dry gently with a soft towel and tap in some more cream, letting it remain on for half an hour or longer.

The powder must be of light consistency and put on with little slaps, never rubbed in with the hand.

Remove the surplus powder with a camel's hair brush made for the purpose. Avoid astringents.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ravin' to Go

The liver should pour two pints of bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays in the bowels. It just doesn't digest. Gas blocks up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned, and you feel sick, sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Don't merely force a passageway with purgatives. Get at the cause of the trouble. Get your liver to pour out two pints of bile. It takes those two pints of bile to digest your food and make you feel right. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a famous doctor's prescription that starts the bile flowing freely. They do the work. Just see how much better you feel all over. And for Carter's Little Liver Pills for liver bile. Insist! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

HIGHLIGHTS of HOME COOKING HISTORY

1921-1926—

... IN THIS PERIOD, just before Canada celebrated her Golden Jubilee, electric cooking was introduced to the public. The "last word" in range elements was the "calrod" unit. This element was fairly easy to keep clean but, unfortunately, was much too slow and expensive for the average housewife. Yet even today you will find some ranges using the old-style "coil" elements that were popular ten years ago.

TODAY—

... THE PROBLEM OF SPEED is electric cookery was finally solved by Hotpoint engineers—after prospecting for years for "absolute" speed. They introduced the "Hi-Speed" element, and SPEED ELEMENTS.

See the newest Hotpoint Range models at your dealer's. Equipped with CALROD HI-SPEED ELEMENTS— widely used as fast as food will cook. HP-7B

AT THE BELLE

"Early to Bed"

Tenth of the Mary Boland-Charlie Ruggles combinations to the screen, "Early to Bed," latest of the pair's hilarious farces, is by all odds their most successful. The laugh-masterpiece, which comes to the Belle tomorrow and Friday matinee daily, gives Mary and Charlie a screamingly different plot as a background for their antics.

Ruggles is a moose-like clerk in a glass eye firm, who has been employed for twenty-six years and has been told he has a bright future. Mary is the Clinton girl to whom he has been engaged for precisely twenty of those years.

They marry as the picture opens and set out on their honeymoon. Mary has dreamed of Niagara Falls, Charlie, seeking to land a huge glass eye order, heads for a spot known as Oaka-wockabogee Lodge. It turns out to be a sanitarium.

Just after Charlie is revealed as a sleep-walker, suspected of "Tiger Man" prochivities during the somnambulistic strolls, the peace of Oaka-wockabogee Lodge is shattered by a jewel robbery and a murder. Charlie suspects himself. He is enthusiastically joined in his suspicions by Mary and other guests of the lodge.

From this point the plot swings into a completely cockeyed combination of mystery and hilarity. With laughs following each other at breakneck speed, we watch Charlie's sleep-walk, and discover what he really does on his trips. You watch the murder reach solution despite Mary's unconscious accomplishments in rolling things up, and you watch the world's biggest glass eye order being landed.

George Barbier and Gail Patrick head the list of players who make the Boland-Ruggles latest a top comedy. Others in the splendid supporting cast include Robert Middlemass, Lucien Littlefield and Colin Tapley.

Jean Hersholt, Starred

Jean Hersholt contributes another immortal characterization worthy to stand in it's screen's Hall of Fame beside his famous portrayal of "The Country Doctor", in "Sins of Man", his new starring triumph, announced at the Belle as another feature attraction on the same program. Vibrant with drama, the picture is a stirring story of a father's struggles and temptations, his sorrows and triumphs Building in an ever-swelling crescendo of emotion to its dynamic climax, Hans Amelo, sensational new screen "find" and Alan Jenkins head the supporting cast.

Two Grand Hits

Two grand hit features will be exhibited at the Belle tonight for the last time in "One Rainy Afternoon" an uproarious feature comedy co-starring Francis Lederer and lovely Ida Lupino. James Stewart, Wendy Barrie, Una Merkel, Weldon Heyburn, Ted Healy and Ralph Morgan are featured in "Speed" offering a mile a minute of fun and thrills.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Ladies or Ballots"

Edward G. Robinson's newest and most dynamic picture for First National, "Ladies or Ballots", comes to the Capitol Theatre today.

In this picture Robinson has a role as strong as that of "Little Caesar," although he is neither crook nor gangster, but one of the coldest and most hard boiled detectives of the New York police force.

Two other particularly good screen "bad men" appear with him in the picture, Barton MacLane and Humphrey Bogart.

Joan Blondell has the leading female role, playing opposite Robinson as his sweetheart, although their romance does not end at the church, Robinson being slain by a double crossing crook after he has tipped off the police commissioner to the real criminals in the case.

While dealing with gangsters and their political and financial associations, the picture is really a story of racketeering run on a scale never dreamed of before, the higher-ups in the game, who never come out from cover, being a banker, a big politician and a wealthy society man. They have the power to crush any opposition to their rackets, by which they mulct millions from their former business men, until Robinson, as "Detective Johnny Blake", becomes one of them and exposes the whole scheme.

The story was written by a man who knows all about racketeering, Martin Mooney, the New York police reporter who exposed it for the first and took a thirty day jail sentence for contempt of court rather than reveal his confidential sources of information. Seton I. Miller collaborated with him on the story and also wrote the screen play.

There is an unusually strong supporting cast which includes, besides those mentioned, Frank McHugh, Richard Purcell, George E. Stone, Joseph Crehan, Henry O'Neill, Henry Kolker and many others, besides several hundred in the extra roles.

Oasis in the Night

by

THAYER WALDO

At the intersection he stood starring dully before him at nothing in particular. It was three o'clock in the morning and a cold breeze whined down the long breadth of Hollywood boulevard. In the light of far-spaced street lamps, the cloud bank low overhead glowed with an opaque saffron hue.

He moved away from the curb corner, flipped his cigaret, and walked slowly, aimlessly southward. To the casual observer of worldly meaning is one thing; truly to feel that anguished void, as did Lloyd Roger Corrigan, is quite another.

One must be understood that Corrigan was no mooning adolescent. At thirty-four a man does not grieve for those who have departed for Zenith strides thought of him as Hollywood's town's highest hanging never saw him, and his cool, intellectual treatment of the wound in his coats had been the despair of more than one ambitious beauty.

Then Clarissa Brent came home and in a single instant, literally, the world was altered for him. Arm in arm with Neal Carothers she walked onto Lloyd's set one morning; he looked at her and at her smile and found at last a result for existence. Not love alone was born, but jealousy and hate and fear as well. The enemity of man for man where woman is concerned sprang up in him, and Roger Corrigan's thoughts turned upon Neal Carothers.....

With savage sharpness he recalled the weeks of doubt and inner turmoil. At Corrigan's age one's initial moves on amour are rarely faultless. Timidity and inept hesitations mar that perfect manhood which success demands. And so it had been with Lloyd. He saw that now, too late, and the perception was as salt upon an open wound.

Clarissa Brent had returned to pictures. Within ten days of their first meeting she was under Lloyd's direction, playing a small role in "Tonight Is Ended." Neal Carothers, through coincidences of his own cunning, was also cast.

She went to dinner with Lloyd on three consecutive evenings; they attended the opera and a party and the circus together. Bit by bit, confidence commenced to surge in Lloyd's breast; hesitancy was lost by Carother's obvious pique over the new familiarity.

At six last evening they had completed final retakes. Lloyd walked with Clarissa to her dressing room.

"Well, it's done," he said, "and that calls for a celebration. How about this evening?"

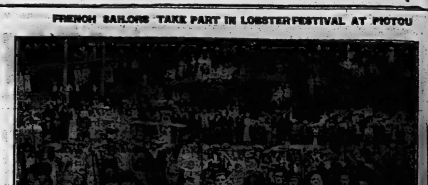
She threw him a sweet apologetic smile.

"I'm so sorry; I've promised Neal. He's asked me a question that needs answering right away. I'm sure you understand, Lloyd."

Suddenly out of that gloom, just as the darkness was deepest, there fell in a yellow square across the street. There sat Clarissa with Neal from the window of a small restaurant. Then, abreast the place, he recognized it. Everyone in the film capital knew that hole-in-the-wall cafe, known as Bernard the Epicure's.

Somehow this spot of brightness seemed a comforting relief from the dual blackness of the night, and of his mood. Corrigan turned down his coat collar and went in. Warmth and pleasant odors and gay music from a radio behind the counter, greeted him. He took a seat near the far end, ordered coffee and almond lunenbiary ave there.

In the first booth, not twelve feet away, they sat—Clarissa with her back to him. Carothers facing. But they were absorbed in conversation and each other; obviously neither had seen him.



All at once the radio had been turned down, and with a start, Lloyd found himself listening to their voices.

"....then you really agree with me," he heard Carothers say, "that this is the best solution?"

"Yes, my dear, I do," replied Clarissa quietly; "we've tried it long enough to see it won't work; so now's the time to call quits while we're still good friends. After all divorce needn't be a hate-word especially when you're so understanding about—well, joy over the terest in directors."

The waiter was waiting, encouragingly. Lloyd pushed his cup forward.

"Give me," he said a trifle hoarsely, "some more coffee. And listen—you can put a slug of brandy in it this time."

BELLE-SARGENTS IN FIRST PLACE

Defeat Belmonts Behind Fine Hurling of Hughes And Bateman

Behind the superlative pitching of Tommy Hughes and Bateman, touched up by a blasting array of bingles, which bounced seven safeties into the clearred arbes of Coleman Flats, Belleville Sargent's baseballers galloped into undisputed possession of first place in the Industrial Softball League last night, when they staged a four run seventh inning rally to take the decision from Belmonts by a 7-3 count.

Related to second position in the final league standing by virtue of their defeat last night, Belmonts will meet the West Riders in the first of the semi-final series in the Thursday evening with the Belleville Sargent taking on Corbetts on Friday night.

Hughes, Belleville sargent starting hurler, aided by some sparkling work afield by his team-mates breezed away nicely for his 9th win, letting the opposition down with three hits in seven innings before he suffered a split finger. Bateman, who relieved him was invincible, fanning the enemy batsmen for the remainder of the pastime. Cannon, Belmont pitcher was nicked for eleven safeties, three of them being clustered in the seventh to send four runners scampering across the plate.

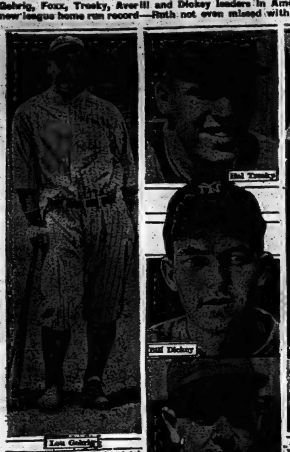
Belleville Sargent nets beat a steady tattoo on the Canadian shooter, scoring runs in the first, second and third innings and capping their efforts with the last inning four run splurge.

The "Restaurant" bludgeons were impotent against the Hughes-Bateman hurling, three hits being the best they could garner, with two of these being bunched in the fifth, when incidentally they scored all their runs with the aid of a walk and a brace of errors.

Every man on the winning squad collected safely, with Robinson and Bateman leading the parade with a brace each. Cy Barriage stole the hitting limelight from his mates getting two of the three hits made by them.

The teams:

Belleville-Sargent— Durrell, cf; Barriage, lb; McIntosh, cf; Reed, 1b; Robinson, c; Hughes, p, lf; Bateman, p, lf; Mcelroy, rf; Mc-Guire 2b.



Belmonts—Cooper, rf; Barriage, ss; St. Louis cf; O'Neil 1b; R. Sargent 3b; Townsend lf; Morgan 2b; Hawbolson c; Cannon p.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Belle-Sargent ..... 111 000 4—7 11 2
Belmonts ..... 000 030 0—3 7 1

No Babe Ruth! League Has Five

Gehrig, Foxx, Trosky, Averill and Dickey leaders in American circuit's drive for new league home run record—Ruth not even missed with that galaxy of clouters.

A new world record for total home runs in that circuit in one season looms for the American league, thanks largely to the efforts of the five free swingers. All five—Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey, New York Yankees; Hal Trosky and Ral't Averill, Cleveland Indians, and Jimmy Foxx, Boston Red Sox—have already hit 14 or more circuit clouts each this season.

By WILLIAM RITT
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York, July 22.—Five apple knockers with brawney backs and bulging biceps have been dominating the American league scene these recent weeks like a heat wave dominating a record-clicker area.

However, there is no drouth in the specialty of the five young men, which is the production and delivery in wholesale lots of home runs. Since mid-April the outer ramparts of American league ball yards have wreaked and waved under the shattering impact of the youngsters' efforts.

The artisans we refer to are the mesers. Louis Henry Gehrig, famous New York baseball architect; Trosky, William Dickey and Howard Earl Averill. Together they have accipted more than 100 home runs of grace-ful line and hearty punch to some of the masterpieces of that incomparable artist, George Herman Ruth of ashtabula memory.

That century and more of circuit smacks is approximately one-fourth of the American league's home-run kitty, as all associated total productions of homers to date which has passed the somewhat startling figure of 600.

With the 1936 campaign just a bit more than half gone the American league is apparently headed for a new high in homers in one season. The current league record is 959, achieved by the sluggers of 1932 who were largely aided and abetted by one and only Babe. The old mauling maestro that year contributed 41 circuit smashes to the cause.

At the rate they are hitting them at this time three of the five American league home run peers —Gehrig, Foxx and Trosky —have excellent chances of nearing 50 each before season ends. However, there is little ground for hope, that any of the three or their closest colleagues, Dickey and Averill, will this year approach the magnificent high water mark of 60 established by the Babe in 1927.

Baseball clients may find it a matter of interest that the five potential successors to the regal robes which Ruth wore so long as king of the American league's home-run affairs, are all associated with so-called pennant contenders. Only the Detroits are not reputed second and this is due to the regrettable absence of one Henry Greenberg, Tiger first baseman and concessionary of hammered homicide of wrist renown who has been on the shelf for many weeks due to injury.

Greenberg smote 26 home runs last season, approximately 10 per cent. of the circuit clouts (a total of 683) produced by his entire league. It can be seen from this that if Hank were in there with his usual good health he might be leading the pack this year.

American league pitching this year has been of such a stripe baseball fans are moved more to pity than pride. And deep is the disappointment of the followers of several clubs which have failed by a wide enough margin to live up to pre-season expectations. But a few fans really have no kick coming—the circuits home run hitters, led by the Fearless Five, are treating the customers to a heavy crop not equalled even in the days of Big Bambino himself.

Canada's Entry in Gold Cup Races at Lake George Ready

Gravenhurst, Ont., July 22—(CP) —With only three days intervening before the Gold Cup races in Bolton Bay, Lake George, New York, this town in Ontario's Muskoka district had a mild case of jitters today waiting for the launching of Miss Canada II, the Dominion's entry.

It was expected the boat would be placed in the water some time this afternoon. Then for the first time will the engine be tested and tomorrow Miss Canada II will be crated, put on a truck and started for Bolton Bay.

At midnight last night a sliding crane in Tom Gravesite's boat plant picked up Miss Canada's 18-cylinder, 1,000-horse-power engine off the blocks and lifted it into the new, sleek hull.

Throughout the night a group of skilled mechanics worked feverishly to complete connections and the job.

When they asked Joe Gould manager of Jimmy Braddock, of the Boxing Commission the other day if he could present a purse check cheque of $5,000, Joe answered "Sure I can find that. . . Then turning to sweepper men, he whispered: "If they had asked me if I could get $50 I would have had to ask them to reduce it to $2 or $3 . . . Gould has to do something to raise that" . . . This is just too bad: Bill Herman, star outfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics baseballers, broke a toe chasing a fly ball the other day and must wear bed room slippers to his summer school class for a week . . . If Madison Square Garden has to take the Jimmy Braddock-Max Baer fight over to the Garden it promises the fight will be a honey.

Coach George (Foley) Clark of the Detroit Football Lions, has ordered his Athletes to start going bargfoot pronto to toughen their dogs . . . The idea is to dodge blisters, when the boys begin drilling August 10 for the All-Star game . . . Also, Clark wants 'em to be able to run a mile in 100 degree heat, when they report . . . Most of the Lions are spending the summer toiling in auto roadsites at Detroit, Flint and Pontiac.

Dutch Swim Team Hard to Beat Says Coach of U.S. Squad

(By Alan Gould Associated Press Sports Editor)

Aboard S. S. Manhatian enroute to Berlin, July 22—(AP)—Swimmers, who have been working out daily in the ship's midget pool, while voyaging toward Berlin, face the keenest challenges from other nations of any United States Olympic teams.

This applies to both the men's and womens teams, whose coaches are planning an intensive two-weeks training period at Berlin to tune up their charges for great efforts.

Bob Kiphuth, coach of the men's team, told the Associated Press today, that the swimmers have "a 90-80 chance of regaining the men's team honors lost to Japan in 1932," while Ray Daughter of Seattle, coach of the women's team said:

"We have to beat the Dutch to keep the title."

Both the American and Japanese men's teams are stronger than they were four years ago, especially in the sprints. News of a record Japanese performance in the 100 metres alarmed the idea that there was an edge in favor of the Americans, who are placing their main reliance in Peter Fick of New York, whose best time is 57.2 seconds for the hundred.

Otherwise Japan is conceded an advantage in the 1,500 metres free style and the United States in the backstroke. The remaining events are toss-ups.

Cleveland And Tigers Have Chance to Catch Ramping Yanks

By SID FEDER

Associated Press Sports Writer

Just about once every year, Owi (sciverball) Hubbell and Dizzy (the great) Dean hook for a baseball masterpiece that usually turns out to be one of those irresistible forces vs. immovable object affairs until the breaks come along.

It was that way last year ago, when "the Hub" came out on top in a tight duel with the great one. And the thing was repeated almost to letter yesterday, with whatever breaks there were going against Dean to make their rivalry over the last three years all-even at two wins and two losses for each.

"Old Diz" undoubtedly pitched the better ball game yesterday.

He gave up only five hits to the Giants over 11 innings, while his mates were getting to Hubbel for nine. He struck out half a dozen batters and walked only two, Hubbell fanned but three and passed five.

But Dizzy made the mistake of serving one home run ball more than Hubbell—and that tells the story.

The Giants won, two home runs to one. Dick Bartell's round-tripper in the 10th broke up the game, after earlier four-baggers by Gus Mancuso and Pepper Martin had tied it all up. The batting here, however, wasn't either of the homer-hitters, but Ducky Medwick stole the show by tying the National League hitting record for consecutive hits. He made seven in a row Sunday, and added three more yesterday to deadlock the mark at 10. Then he rallied in after to be Tiffin Spooker's major league mark by grounding out his ninth time up.

Cardinals Five Games Down

The Cardinals' loss put them two full games back of the National league-leading Chicago Cubs, who barely burned back a late Brooklyn rally to nose out the Dodgers 5-3. The Pirates managed to remain in third place by clubbing the Phillies 17-4, after coming from behind a 5-4 defeat. Cincinnati Reds handed the Bees their third straight setback, as Benny Frey bested Ben Cantwell 3-2 in a seven-inning duel.

Cleveland Indians, meantime, cut the Yankees' American League lead to eight games by nosing out the Red Sox 6-5 while the Yanks were bowing to Al Thomas and Sq. Lou Browns 5-4. Johnny Broca blew a three-run lead to give the Browns the win, enabling them to come out of the American League cellar for the first time this season. The Red Sox, outclassed for eight innings by the Tribe, made a fight of it in the ninth with a three-run spree, which fell just short.

Chicago White Sox, opening at home after a highly successful road trip, had their eight-game winning streak snapped as the Senators came through 6-3. The Tigers moved back into third place and dropped the skidding Athletics into the cellar by taking a doubleheader decision. They won the opening 8-3 behind Tommy Bridges' seven-hit pitching, and gained a 9-8 edge in the nightcap with a two-run rally in the eighth.

Control! Control! This is the cry of every player. Few have mastered it. The great majority are still doing things that make it impossible.

One thing that makes control almost out of the question is too much length in wood clubs. Most wood clubs are 43 inches long in a set with such length for driver and brassie, the spoon may be a bit shorter, but even that doesn't help much. All of them should be at least an inch shorter.

One of the main reasons for the popularity of the new wood clubs on the market, the fancy spoons and cleeks is the shortness of the shafts. Any number of players have found that they can do pretty well with these clubs when they have trouble with the brassie. The answer is length of shaft.

You can demonstrate the advantages of a shorter club by gripping your driver and brassie two or three inches down from the top of the shaft. The shorter hold will give you just as much distance and much better direction because you have better control over the club.

EDDIE LEE TO ASSIST BOXING

Yacht Club Will Try And Bring This Sport Back in City

The Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club today announced they had recently acquired the service of Eddie Lee, a native son of Belleville, who has been away from this city after an absence of some time. Eddie has been boxing professional-ly in the United States for the past eight years, he informed the Yacht Club officials, fighting in New York City and other large American cities. He informed Secretary Charlie Jeffs he had a total of 187 professional fights to his credit and has the experience of a hard school. Eddie is willing to box in the elevation of the boxing game in Belleville and impart his knowledge as coach and manager for fights to later be arranged under the banner of the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club.

For the purpose of assisting on a common interest President Jack Callaghan and Secretary Charlie Jeffs of the Yacht Club, have arranged with Mr. Lee to meet at the Yacht Club rooms on Friday next day night along with any and all local boxers interested in the proceedings of the fight game in Belleville. The meeting will be quite informal, but important, and lastly Mr. Lee will be introduced to the local boxers who will be in attendance. With the boxing game at a low level in Belleville this should prove a splendid opportunity for lovers of the game to materially assist the sport by their attendance at the Yacht Club on Thursday evening.

STRATFORD LOSES APPEAL TO O.B.A.A.

Kovalski And Carrick Declared Ineligible to Play For "Nats."

Kitchener, Ont., July 22—(CP)—Carter Kovalski of Cromarty and Bob Carrick, of Strathroy, formerly of Clinton, were refused certificates to play with the Stratford Nationals in the senior inter-county baseball group by the O. B. A. A. sub committee meeting at Oakville last night.

Although the Stratford club failed to put in an appearance to press their claims to these two players, secretary Stan Shantz of the inter-county ruled certificates be granted both men and if that is impossible that leniency be shown Kovalska in particular.

The committee ruled otherwise, however, on the ground that precedent establishment in St. Thomas' appeal of McKillip was one which could not be broken by Stratford.

Carrick's case received only brief consideration before it was rejected again.

The time lost to the O. B. A. A. was made on the grounds that Kovalski qualified under the 25 mile rule, that all clubs had waived on his services, that granting a certificate to him would not in any way help Stratford, would boost the senior brand in all intercounty centres as his widely publicized case would attract fans in all places, that Stratford through injuries was sadly in the need of additional pitchers. The argument was also advanced that senior baseball which has slipped seriously in many centres in Ontario needed encouragement such as would be given by permitting Kovalski to play.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

We realize it is no fun following a losing baseball team, but the local O.B.J.C. club is playing its first home game since July 5th, how about giving the kids a break? True enough they have only won one game in 13 played, but perhaps a little moral support from the stands might work wonders against the Foxs in tonight's twilight fixture. If you have partaken of your evening meal, park the dirty dishes in the sink and take in this game. If you haven't eaten yet, wait until after the game, it wouldn't be the first time. Take an evening off and go up to the Fair Grounds and give your lungs a real good exercise. Imagine Jake Nyleen in back of the helm of the Foxs and let's all turn out and give the local kids the surprise of their young careers. After all the kids are trying their best and usually can be depended upon to turn in a fairly good game.

Here's what the Foxs-Kid's sport writer thinks of our O.B.J.C. kids: "Alec Wade is finding it a wonderful task pitching the losing Belleville. This last survivor—playing survivor—of the one time Belleville baseball clubs is sticking there doing his best with a bunch of rookies. And he deserves credit. He is playing great ball himself and bringing along green players who will be valuable assets to the O. B. J. C. in another year or two. After all, Belleville must expect to build up a team for the future rather than for immediate results. Perhaps the club has a chance to win a game later. We've all been there and may be back anytime."

The Kingston sport columnist became quite indignant when we inferred that Umpire Al Tyson was assaulted last Wednesday in his fair city. Just as if officials haven't been assaulted in Kingston.) At any rate the Limestone city scribe made no attempt to molest Tyson, was made at any time. If this is true, why were the police so quick in taking action in escorting Tyson from the park? We have been in Kingston when bedlam broke loose during ball games, and to find a "cop" would be like looking for a needle in a haystack. We well remember one hectic night when not only the official, but the Belleville team was assaulted and by two of the umpires of the O.B.J.L. residing in Kingston. As for Belleville we can truthfully say "such actions have yet to be seen in this city" and local baseball clubs have had just as many reasons to squawk over incompetent umpiring as any club in the league, and one sees occasions more so.

The Kingston scribe goes on to state that the home umpire, one of the best sport writers of the Belleville delegation voted to the O.B.J.L. all-star team last spring, but were firmly opposed by Kingston and Peterboro fans, who claim he is the worst umpire in the Belleville Ball Club this season. We call decidedly there by a degree of harmony in their views of Al Tyson's work as we find as a whole, two months conference and meetings, that Kingston delegates from the Limestone City are unanimously in favor of the system of home umpires, now in effect in the intermediate league. No man is infallible, and when the "knife-in-the-back" talkers against the home umpires will be done away with, the better will the game be for the highest brain-ers, while if he happens to call one in favour of the visiting team well right away he's trying to give his fellow-horsemen the edge. So what?

Insofar as Umpire Al Tyson, who once was a splendid catcher and a good ball player, we were not surprised to hear of his recent difficulty. But coming from Kingston it sounded comical, especially after the work of Buster Hartley, Reg. Middleditch Twigg and other capable umpires from Kingston. On the other hand, however, two high-class umpires have come out of Joe Dewitt's town, the veteran George Sullivan and today's official, Pat Connigan. Neither Corrigan or Sullivan could be bullied, but Pat informs us he leads a dog's life in Kingston and all because of this home umpiring system. Let's hope that in another year or two the O.B.J.L. return to the old neutral system of umpiring and more flourishing days. There is an outside possibility the annual Mikel Cup punt sailing race will be held off Victoria Park over the weekend. In the meantime however, the weekly Yacht Club races are being held this afternoon. The Mikel Cup race is an open affair for all craft under 24 foot.

The leading lady gave the Belleville-Sargent softballers first place in the local Industrial Softball league standings with a rally in the 6th inning. Now are the Belleville-Sargents first Belleville entry to ever gain undisputed first place in the local league. The schedule for the opening of the Industrial ball play-offs will be announced by President Claude Dewitt today and we find the Belleville and West End clashing at the Cobourn Flats on Thursday night with the two hardware manufacturing plants meeting on Friday night. Seth games will be played at Cobourn Flats with Harold Rowden and Albert Ribber have been named as umpires. The local Industrial league has supplied some great softball for the fans this season and more especially in the play-off games.

Eddie Lee, who has returned to Belleville after some years of ring experience across the line to the south, has lined up with the Belleville Athletic and Yacht Club in an effort to revive boxing in Belleville. The executive of the Yacht Club have decided that the world needs them as their club rooms on Thursday night, at which time all local boxers are invited to attend in an effort to endeavour bringing back the fight game in Belleville.

CHEVROLET MAPLE LEAF TRUCK

The Truck . . . A standard Chevrolet-Maple Leaf 3½-Ton Heavy Duty job, equipped with Truxmore Third Axle.

The Payload . . . A back-breaking 7-ton 14,000-pound block of solid concrete in front of truck and payload, 20,000 pounds—10 tons!

The Run . . . From Windsor, Ont., to Moncton, N.B.—1246 gruelling miles in all, over all kinds of Canadian roads, in typically hot Canadian summer weather.

The Cost . . . Only $27.68 TOTAL—for all gasoline and oil! No repairs — no adjustments—no service of any kind. Only one pint of oil was consumed over the entire trip . . . just a little over $2¢ worth of gasoline for 1246 miles . . . 12 miles to the gallon!

The Result . . . A new and literally astounding Canadian record for economy in long distance heavy hauling! New, striking proof that you don't have to pay a big price—or sacrifice rock-bottom operating cost—for dependability in a Heavy Duty Truck!

What It Means to You . . . Truck owners know that every dollar whittled off hauling costs is a dollar added to business profits. And what this record-breaking test run proves is simply that you can haul more—at lower cost—with a Chevrolet-Maple Leaf Truck that's priced right down with the lowest! The actual cost and operating record for the entire run is now in our hands . . . and the test-truck itself is going on display in our showrooms. Call in and look them both over. CT-36A

Only 1 gallon of Gas every 12 miles

Think of hauling 7 tons—14,000 pounds—PAY-LOAD at a gasoline cost of only ½ of a cent per ton mile! That gives you an idea of the proved economy of the Chevrolet valve-in-head engine.

Only 1 pint of Oil in 1246 miles

Here's ample proof that Chevrolet and Maple Leaf trucks are no oil burners. And remember, the Chevrolet six-cylinder, valve-in-head engine accomplished this feat under typical Canadian highway and weather conditions!

Only 1½ pts. of Water for entire trip

Efficient cooling is and always has been a basic reason for the efficiency of the Chevrolet truck engine. It results in smooth running always. It eliminates lost time through forced lay-off.

The Missing Man

-:- by -:-

Mary R. P. Hatch

At last I decided to go to Grovedale and pretend I was Vane Hamilton, who had had his name in the gazette, but recovered it. I had informed myself of one or two familiar cases when the mind had suddenly recovered its powers, and it would agree, I reasoned, with his character when he was on the train, which was said to have been unusual. Besides, such a statement, if skilfully carried out, would explain partially the altered mood, which I was to profess to know nothing about, but to make up if trouble seemed likely to grow out of the matter.

In short, I decided to do exactly as the real Vane Hamilton would have done after the shock of the hallucination had left his brain and memory. He would have nothing of the taste or what had occurred. I would know nothing. If the doubt remained, or about his coming to Grovedale and presenting the house, he would, from sense of his sense of honor, offer to repay them. I would do so, but I would say nothing about a twin brother, for he, it appeared, had never mentioned the matter to any one, not even to his wife, or as newspapers stated; and it would be far better for my plans not to have it known for that any such person existed.

It is known now the plan succeeded, but it is not known how it was regarded by myself.

When I stepped from the train and walked up the street I perceived looks of recognition from a few persons whom I encountered, and many addressed me. Of course I smiled they were not personal friends of my brother. As I neared the marble-shop the door was being opened, and I saw the monument and the name Vane Hamilton on it. A beautiful woman stood looking at it, and I conjectured it was his wife. For a time I was in doubt she cried out and fainted. I went to her and bent over her and I was not at her beauty. As I looked, a mighty love formed in my soul for her. I cannot understand it. I only know I loved her with an undying passion. I forgot Lenora, forgot everything, even the part I was to play, as I gazed on the beautiful submissive figure extended in all the pathos of lost animation before me.

But I recovered my composure sufficiently to play my part of the returned husband. I knelt at her side, but felt it to be almost impossible to go further than to take her hand and I was almost relieved to perceive that she shrank from my not half-hearted caresses. For how could I approach such a woman with familiar touch?

I played my part as best I could in the days that followed. It was not unsuccessfully done. The children clung to me from the first, but Carter was like a father in his kindness. Constance only was cold. But I did not wish to remove that barrier between us. I was not such a villain as that, and from the first my calculations had only extended to the position held by my brother in the bank and mill, not so that in his wife's affections. I was married, and Lenora loved me.

But my plans changed. I saw that it would not be politic to take the position of cashier, even if it could be obtained, and I decided to renounce it and, for the present, all designs of appropriating its funds for those of the future my own governing love for Constance increased day by day while I lived under the same roof.

And then the tempter came in the person of Marks. "Marry her!" he said, "for I see you love her. She is rich, and you can help the rest of us. Rumford does not prosper as it used to; our operations are too well known."

"Marry her!" I echoed; "how can I, when Lenora lives?"

An evil smile lit up his face, but he only said, "Lenora may die, she is far from well, but I thought of nothing of all this for I did not think he was bad enough to attempt her life. Now I know that he was. I know that it was he who sent the poisoned ring in my name to her.

I saw a notice of her death in a newspaper which, no doubt, he sent to me. But there was nothing concerning the suspicions regarding the cause, and, indeed, I do not think they awoke until Benson began his investigations in the claimant case.

Marks came to me soon afterwards and asked me about her for he knew that I wrote to her at long intervals, and I told him she was dead, and showed him the notice he then told me he knew it. But thought I might not, and came to tell me of it.

I had long ceased to love Lenora though I appreciated her stupendous heart-devotion to me. But now that she was dead, I said to myself, sardonically, I would press my professed claims upon Constance as I never had done. But I said nothing about it to Marks, with whom and all my evil associates I determined to break; for, things as it would appear, I had fully decided to begin a new career in life, to be in reality what Vane had been. I would persuade Constance to marry me on the plea of beginning a new life together, and then I decided to be so kind, so good and true, that she would never mistrust that I was not the real Vane Hamilton. Build my reformation on a lie! How I see the futility of such an effort. Then I did not. I actually thought it could be done.

The good, pure, moral atmosphere of Grovedale seemed to have uplifted my soul to better things than I had ever known. I began to think that honor really existed, that there were true hearts in the world, people who strove to do right, who were full of charity and gentleness; that such a thing as religion existed, not a sham, not a cheat, not a cloak but a real and heart-felt belief, and—will you believe it?—I fancied I could feel it stealing into my own nature. Who was basing my reformation on a lie! Little Claire would kneel beside me when she prayed, and sometimes I prayed with her, in my heart, and fancied I was sincere. I know now my soul was struggling to free itself of the terrible lofts of sin; but how could I think that forgiveness was mine, or that it could come to me in the midst of the wicked deceit of my daily life? Constance was always gracious at times, and I thought the day would come when she would receive me as her husband, when we would be married.

About this time I began to feel conscious of an uneasiness regarding Primus Rose. Not that I mistrusted Constance of any wrong. Far from it. But I feared that she might have a romantic attachment for him, as he was said to resemble her husband in some degree. I disliked him to the effect and talked with him. The resemblance existed, but to an unusual degree. I had not the slightest idea he was Vane Hamilton—not the slightest. For Vane, I was convinced, had been drowned. When he left the office after rejecting my proposal to give him a better job in another mill I watched him to keep off my premises. My premises, and to the true owner!

Marks was keener than I, and I think, mistrusted him from the first. But he said nothing to me about it. It was his hand that fired the shot at Primus Rose, as he was then. Of that I am sure, though convinced, though I did not see him shoot Grovedale. Indeed, I supposed him to be in another State. Marks' position was desperate. Affairs had not prospered recently, and though I supplied him with small sums, they were insufficient to satisfy his need or wants. I think he conceived the scheme of removing Lenora and Vane from my path, and then of holding it over me afterwards and the means of getting large sums of money from me, which he reasoned I would pay rather than suffer the matter to become known.

But I never even mistrusted it until Vane recovered his reason and brought suit against me. Then love, jealousy, fear, and the old instinct to pit my faculties against the world arose within me. There seemed no other course open than to oppose the suit and everything seemed in my favor. This was at the outset. But as the days went on, and I saw the anguish of Constance, the dejection of Vane, a great, shuddering pity for both, both, and horror for myself, awoke in my soul. The utter wickedness of my course arose before me, and I could not escape the constant contemplation of it. At times such a rush of remorse overwhelmed me that I would cry out in actual pain. I would think of our mother, of her love for us both, of her dying request to Lane, of his long search for me, of my treachery in allowing him to fall into the clutches of the law in my place, of his recovery to reason, only to find me in his place, and the cumulative wickedness of my course would grind me as if I had been fastened into the torturous iron frames used for criminals in olden times.

But slowly up from under all this anguish of mind there crept up a firm resolve which comforted me. Comforted while it made me stretched. I determined to let matters take their course, play my part to the end, and when that end should come, which I was confident would establish me in the eyes of the law as Vane Hamilton, I would go away and give him his rightful place. For to confess would be to bring upon myself the false accusation of murder, which I felt I could not refute. Even if it should be proved that Marks was the perpetrator, it would be through me as the instigator. So, as I have said, I played my part to the end, though determined not to take advantage of the edict, which it was said was soon to be in my favor.

Vane was—arrested, and—released free. That was as I expected, but I lingered a few days on the scene of my quiet, happy, yet happy life for it seemed hard to cut myself off from it all. I do not know to prevail, but I want to say that good people know little about what they condemn so readily; they know little and seem to care little about the lives of the poor creatures offered from their courts of justice. They build fine churches and pay men to preach to them, while outside the shut churches are thousands of human souls crying for the bread of life to revive their dying condition.

There, on that lonely jungle trail, looking down upon the slain warrior, Tarman of the Apes vowed that he would hunt down this Thing that killed with talons, at no matter what risk. As the protector and friend of his people he must assure their safety.

While the Taloned Death has found its victims in distant regions, Tarman had been unconcerned, but now that it had invaded his own domain he considered that a definite challenge had been hurled in the face of his jungle sovereignty. His duty was clear!

His lifted the dead warrior to a shoulder and set out for the village which had been the man's home. But when the villagers saw that their kinsman had been a victim of the Taloned Death, a strange hush fell upon them; and even the bravest of the warriors trembled.

Oh, I bless General Booth and the Salvation Army for the good work in the closed churches, but, with people as they are constituted, and the world as it is, there will always be room to say that he might have been like me, with the same environment. Then, if I so fell through the wicked environment of my life, what chance is there for the poor and women whose parents and grandparents were criminals? None, I should say, if I did not recollect Booth and his glorious army and his plans for their salvation.

I go away, and I go a thief, a criminal in the eyes of the law. But I know Vane's heart, and I feel that I may hope for forgiveness, and that he will believe me when I say that I will repay him some time if possible, the money I took while occupying his premises. And, Constance, I promise you that I will live an honest life hereafter. I can promise that confidently, for I have little hesitation in asserting that I should have been equally as good a man as my twin brother, perhaps better, in so far as I can say that he might have been like me, with the same environment. Then, if I so fall through the wicked environment of my life, what chance is there for the poor and women whose parents and grandparents were criminals? None, I should say, if I did not recollect Booth and his glorious army and his plans for their salvation.

But the men of the poor, unfortunate creatures had by circumstances outside this current? Is it a wonder the old heathenish instincts revive in them, or fail to be roused?

I have thought of this much in the past week, and I have wondered what my life would have been if I had not been taken from my mother, but allowed to grow up in the midst of good influences; and I have little hesitation in asserting that I should have been equally as good a man as my twin brother, perhaps better, in so far as I can say that he might have been like me, with the same environment. FIRE SWEEPS ALGOMA BUSH LANDS

Forest fires, roaring through northern Ontario's timber country, have caused loss in Algoma estimated as high as $3,000,000. In one week the flames, shooting skyward from a score or more fires, licked up valuable timber over an area of 75 square miles and robbed the land of its fertility by burning away the top soil. Clouds of smoke rolled across the country and hindered pilots of forestry department planes in the observation work.

FARMERS PRAY FOR MORE RAIN TO SAVE CROPS

'Wonderful' Results of Recent Rainfall Seen at Kingston

SCATTERED RAINS

Occasional Thunder Storms Are Forecast Over Ontario

Ontario farmers eagerly scanned overcast skies today and hoped for a continuation of the showers that fell over almost the entire province yesterday and last night but failed to penetrate the drought-baked ground more than an inch at most.

The rain definitely checked the forest fire menace that had threatened Northern Ontario for three weeks, benefited small fruits and probably saved many fields facing a total loss. It came after nearly a month of dry, hot weather. At Owen Sound it was accompanied by hail.

Forecasts promised, occasional thunder showers today and part of tomorrow in the lower lake and Georgian Bay region and occasional showers in Northern Ontario.

Steady Rain At Woodstock

At Woodstock a steady rain lasting for several hours brought hope to farmers. Although the amount that fell could have little effect on the dried-out grain and pasture crops, overcast skies and high humidity gave promise of more showers.

Owen Sound district enjoyed the first rain since June 26, with a steady downpour accompanied by hail. No damage was reported. The crops, although suffering, are in fairly good condition and will give a better than average yield. Small crops benefited greatly.

Guelph reported less than a half inch of rain, which, however, cooled crops and late oats will benefit, Ontario Agricultural College officials said. The Galt district farmers declared a 24-hour downpour was necessary to save the crops and thereafter they had their first rain since June 26.

Crops Improve At Kingston

A generous downfall was reported from Kingston, Gananoque, Napanee and Sunday had aided pastures and crops and the amount of precipitation was described as "wonderful". Rain in the Sarnia district was a boon to the celery and beet sugar crops. Wheat has weathered the dry spell very well and harvesting is in progress. Pastures are also expected to benefit.

A night-long rain at London brought less than half an inch precipitation and it penetrated the dry earth only about an inch. Pasture lands were also benefited. Farmers said much more rain is needed if crops generally are to benefit.

The longest drought on record in the Brantford district was broken with a continuous but not heavy downpour. Official records showed the fall was only .21 inches. At least three inches was needed. Farmers are clinging to the hope the showers will follow.

At Kitchener the fall was 33 inches. It relieved the drought in and garden produce. The moisture penetrated only one inch and farmers said this hardly reached the roots of crops.

Many Fields Saved.

Preston farmers felt the rain there would save many fields threatened with entire loss. It was especially good for hard pressed crops in the area.

A thunderstorm which swept over the Peterborough district brought a quarter of an inch of rain. A. D. Runions, agricultural representative, said the moisture would have a very beneficial effect especially upon the pastures and potato and root crops. Too late for barley and oats, it was expected to help hay.

Dot-threshold of an inch of rain fell at St. Catharines and the temperature dropped from 80 to 64 degrees. A heavy downpour began shortly before noon. St. Thomas reported less than a fifth of an inch.

Huron and Perth counties recorded a half-inch downpour, while Nelson Monteith, former Minister of Agriculture, said it would be a "great help" to farmers. The rain that fell in Strathroy was said to be a "beneficial amount".

FAST C. N. TRAIN NEARLY WRECKED BY FRUIT THIEVES

Watchfulness of Police Prevent Terrible Catastrophe

JIGGER ON TRACK

Son of Section Foreman Fires Gun in Direction of Marauders

Hamilton, Ont., July 23 (CP)—A fast Canadian National Railway train to Toronto narrowly escaped being wrecked early today when thieves placed a heavy jigger on the railway tracks near Aldershot. The possible wreck was averted through the watchfulness of Canadian National Railway and provincial officers.

Provincial officers here were notified some men were trying to break into the storehouse of the station at Aldershot. Officer W. H. Hawkins of the provincial police and O. Boyle of the Canadian National Railways force were despatched to the spot. The trio arrived in by J. McDonald, section foreman who saw several men near the storage sheds and became suspicious. Just before police arrived the men had rounded a heavy jigger on on the main line and were loading it with fruit. Ross McMillan, one of the thieves, drew a gun, fired a shotgun in the direction of the shots whistled over the marauders' heads, frightening them and they fled, leaving the jigger on the tracks.

Police reached the scene at this moment and were approaching the truck when they saw the headlight of an approaching locomotive rapidly nearing along the tracks. The officers had to jump to get clear from the trucks and had only gotten it clear when the fast train from Hamilton to Toronto thundered by.

A moment later another train passed on the opposite track from Toronto. It is believed that the men had been about to load fruit from nearby orchards and the jigger was found to be loaded with baskets of produce.

First Rain in Weeks Falls, Thirsty Ground Soaks Moisture

One Fifth of Inch of Fall is Recorded in Belleville

MORE IS NEEDED

Gentle showers, freighted with promise of revival crops and greener pastures, pattered over the city and rural districts today on parched lawns and gardens.

The first actual wetting of the ground received since June 1st began with a light fall on July 3 and 4.

One-fifth of an inch of rain was received in the interdiction showers that were general throughout this section, and were coming up to a late hour this morning. Commencing shortly after eleven-thirty o'clock last evening the rain fell gently, bringing with it a soothing coolness during the night. Afterwards replaced by a sticky, muggy humidity that was present this morning of today.

Like a sponge, the hardened ground soaked up the moisture, which even though bringing immeasurable relief to many, was hardly of sufficient duration to offset the effect of the weeks of burning sun and constant drying of the ground.

Not less than twenty-four hours of a soaking downpour was actually needed, it was reported by rural residents attending the regular mid-week market in the city today. Although, it was pointed out by many, even this slight downpour will be the salvation of many, "If it does nothing else, it will show that there is water in the clouds, and that is one of the first conditions are right," declared one farmer, causing a weather wag to at the dull skies. "But this is only a starter. We're liable to get a whopping big downpour before it's finished. A good week's rain always starts off like this."

Throughout Cannifton, Foxboro, Stirling and other districts surrounding the city, pastures have turned brown while the grass on lawns and fields, shrubbery and cattle and other stock roosted dejectedly. The unappetizing fodder, the same showers were experienced, although here as elsewhere, the fall was not heavy enough to be actually needed.

Dray roads which hung pall-like over the district today, however, gave further promise of more rain to come—rain of sufficient quality to make up for the loss suffered by the agricultural districts during past weeks of dryness.

Official figures of precipitation last night given at the local pump house are: June 1st—.47 inch; July 3 and 4th—total of .12 inch.

BRITISH BOAT ROUTS PLANE WITH GUNFIRE

Fired on When Bringing Fuel Oil to Loyal Spanish Cruiser

BOAT FIRED ON

Situation at Gibraltar Has Taken a Serious Turn

Casablanca, French Morocco, July 23.—The British Spanyer Thistlebull routed a rebel Spanish plane with gunfire today after the aviator had machine-gunned a British steamer bringing fuel oil to loyal Spanish cruisers in Tangier harbor.

The steamer was identified in first reports as the Ethel Dris of the Bland Line, but was believed to be that line's steamer Ethel Dersa.

It had arrived from Gibraltar and anchored in the harbor where it was bombarded at noon.

The Whitehall is of 1120 long standard displacement. Its maximum speed is 34 knots and its armament includes four 4.7 inch guns. The crew normally is 130.

Retaliation is Seen If Act is Repeated

London, July 23 (AP)—Great Britain, in a firm protest to General Francisco Franco, the Spanish rebel leader, today warned Fascist insurgents against "drill-ing and irresponsible bombing of the shipping straits" off Gibraltar.

Repetition of the incidents, the statement said, would lead to prompt and relentless action.

It was issued in the name of Sir Roger Admiral in command of Gibraltar.

At the same time, both British and French jelned in a concerted warning to the Spanish government to keep its fleet out of the internationalized harbor at Tangier, Morocco.

The British Embassy in Spain was instructed to act with the French Embassy in calling the Spanish government's attention to the "difficulties which arise if Tangier is used as a base of preparation for the Spanish fleet."

The Admiralty announced the destroyer Shamrock was proceeding to Cadiz to vacuate British and American subjects in the Seville region.

Five ships of the fourth flotilla squadron also were heading for the Malaga and Cadiz straits.

CUTTEN'S ESTATE GOES TO WIDOW

Estimated Value is Only $350,000 Officials State

Chicago, July 23 (CP)—A one-page document on file today disposed of the $350,000 estate of Arthur W. Cutten, grain trader whose wealth at its zenith was estimated at $100,000,000 by leaving it all to the widow, Mrs. Maude Boomer Cutten.

The estimated current value of the estate, fixed yesterday by Attorney Dwight Green, was about half of the sum the United States government fixed as allegedly unpaid income taxes for 1929, 1930 and 1933.

U. S. District Attorney Michael L. Igoe said he would file a lien for $644,469 against the estate.

Cutten, a native of Guelph, Ont., who came to Chicago as a youth, made from a $7 a week stock clerk to become "the global giant of the grain pits, rated one of the outstanding speculators of the century."

His career ended amid two serious brushes with the federal government, one of them an effort to dis-bar him from trading, in which Cutten won out, and another in an investment charging income tax evasion. Cutten's death June 24 at the age of 66 cut short efforts to bring him to trial.

The financial crash of 1929 was understood to have wiped out much of his holdings. His fellow traders believed he had largely recouped.

Green said the bulk of the estate had been made, but that he was certain it would not exceed $350,000, divided $300,000 in personal property and $50,000 in real estate.

They entered a window to get into the office and make a hole in the washroom to get into the vault.

Burglars also got into the office of the Hawtrees Milling Company, at Wallaceburg during the night. While they ransacked the desks, nothing was reported missing.

COUGHLIN WORDS REACH VATICAN

Reference to Roosevelt as "Liar" Creates Sense of Pain

Vatican City, July 23 (AP) — A high United States Prelate said today Pope Pius considers Rt. Coughlin's political activities and a recent speech in which he called President Roosevelt "a liar" had caused "a painful impression" at the Vatican.

Pope Pius, nevertheless, will await the report of Bishop Michael Gallagher of Detroit, before taking any action, Bishop Gallagher is Father Coughlin's ecclesiastical superior, and now is en route to the Vatican.

Much will depend on what Bishop Gallagher has to say to the Pope, the prelate said.

It was made subject of Father Coughlin's political activities undoubtedly would be discussed, and Coughlin's radio talks likely the Bishop had been summoned to the Vatican to talk over the matter.

(In New York, Bishop Gallagher said that while he disapproved of the panguaga used at the Cleveland Townsend convention by Father Coughlin, he had not relished the radio priest, nor did he intend to [illegible].

The American prelate also said he understood the principal complaint against Father Coughlin was of alleged misquotations in papal encyclicals on economic subjects.

Bishop Gallagher in New York said he had not heard the Coughlin speeches had been sent regularly to Rome.

The Bishop added: "Father Coughlin has done this and done it well.")

KAHOS COMET NOW RETREATING

Earth Bears Three Scars to Show What Collision Might Do

(Editor's note: This is the third of four stories on the nature and habits of comets, two of which are visible now).

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

Boston, July 23 (AP)—One of the two comets now in the heavens, drifting out into space today, but the guesses of astronomers that it might strike the earth collide with the head of one of these celestial wanderers instead of the interest of astronomers and of amateur star-gazers.

The planetary theory reported Kahe's Comet discovered by an amateur astronomer in Japan, which had turned from the earth and sun and would approach no closer than 100,000,000 miles.

Astronomers, however, continued its approach at the rate of 25 miles per second. Astronomers estimated it was passing its closest point, 16,000,000 miles by August 4.

One of them, spread over the United States and North and South Carolina between a Savannah River and Cape Lookout, is made up of 1,500 impact craters. These craters have been made by stones forming the head of a comet.

The other tell-tale spots on earth are in Missouri in Arizona where giant meteors hit the earth.

SPAIN SILENT SAYS RADIO MAN

Local Amateur Operator Recalls Recent Oriental Silence

Licensed, registered amateur radio station owners of this city who have lately been communicating fellow operators in Spain report an ominous silence from that country during the past week or so since the outbreak of civil war has occurred there. Despite the fact that some of the "hams" have been sitting up far into the night sending their queries and call eiters into the ether, asking Spanish amateurs to answer, silence has greeted their attempts at contact.

Although his station has not been "working" for some time past, Edward Goodier, 21 Yeomans Street, owner of VE4KK, local short wave set are known throughout the greater part of the world, stated today that apparently government orders had closed the amateur stations in Spain.

"Last winter when we were getting nightly contacts with stations in Japan the stations suddenly went dead. We couldn't contact them at all after that. We found out later that as the result of the war between the two countries, radio transmission by amateurs had been forbidden. It is quite likely the same order is now in force in Spain. Ordinarily we would have had trouble in 'working' that country", declared Mr. Goodier.

"However, I'm going on the air again in a day or so and will make a really serious attempt at contacting some of the fellow amateurs down there."

FEW SEE COMETS ON MISTY NIGHT

Interest in Celestial Visitors So Far is Small

If there's any sky gazing being done these evenings in Belleville in search of the elusive pair of comets which have aroused the interest of a majority of citizens, watchers of the heavens are using the naked eye in preference to field glasses or telescopes, it was indicated by leading opticianists of the city today, basing their statements on the little enthusiasm that has been shown locally regarding the purchase of spy glasses, telescopes or special attachments for the purpose.

Canvass of the shops today failed to reveal any individual purchases of optical aids. In a few of the stores, owners themselves, although not connected with the ship of field glasses and telescopes, have been out on the hunt for the uninterested to bother looking for the tailed stars.

Sky Clears in Time

Two nights of sky gazing for comets have left some searchers with their quest unsatisfied. The second evening found a sky recently covered with light raincloods gradually clearing so that ten o'clock in the northeast part of the sky, one third of the way up to the zenith was free of clouds and mist.

Through a light haze or dimness could be seen Cassiopeia, the constellation of the Lady in the Chair, in the form of a large "W" and above it the less graphic group of stars known as Cephous. Between these two constellations and well up exploding star some weeks ago which led to the discovery of the Comet Peltier. Through field glasses this comet was visible today, like a small section of the Milky Way, the grey comet being faintly marked with towards the head there was a little lighter spot. The comet is some distance east of the eastern extremities of the two constellations and on a line connecting the latter between them. At eleven o'clock miels had obscured this part of the sky.

Tuesday night was a much more favorable night for sighting the comet as the sky was clear. Some thought they saw Kaho's comet in the west after sunset. Others were sure they saw Peltier's comet at ten o'clock and after with the naked eye or glasses.

The Ontario Intelligencer reporter called on two in a number of persons whom two comets in the sky did not interest from their normal routine of existence.

Mathematics Away

Mathematicians were about all out of town on their holidays, and whether they caught a glimpse of Comet Peltier, could not be learned.

Not many telescopes of large size are to be found in Belleville and whether any member of persons sought out with the naked eye the sky visitor in the northeast, but it was certain they had seen it as they did not known exactly where to look.

Kaho's comet is now retreating from earth and can not be seen but approximately more than 100,000,000 miles to earth. But Peltier's is coming closer to earth at a rate of 2,000,000 miles a day. Its tail can be distinctly seen swung eastward and towards the zenith.

CITY BIDS IN 34 PROPERTIES

Adjourned Tax Sale is Brief Matter of Twenty-Five Minutes

At the adjourned tax sale held in the city hall this morning, a total of 44 properties which were offered were all bid in for the city by the city's representative, Alderman J. W. Barlow and Thos. Cushing. The complete sale occupied only twenty-five minutes.

Garbage in Pelee will be collected after midnight in the city, decided upon by council at the last time to listen of the residents. All they have to do now is to put their garbage by seven o'clock of each morning and the complete collection will have been made. Traffic on streets is practically nil after midnight and at this time the work will be speeded up.

"All we need to make this successful is the support and co-operation of the residents. All they have to do now is to put their garbage by seven o'clock of each morning and the complete collection will have been made. Traffic on streets is practically nil after midnight and at this time the work will be speeded up. We have instructed the men to make the least noise possible while on their rounds," commented Ald. Cushing.

CLIFFORD TEMPLER NAMED ORGANIST

Belleville Man Given Appointment to Ottawa Church

Ottawa, July 23.—At a meeting of the official board, Monday evening, Clifford Templer, of Belleville, was appointed organist of Parkdale United Church, Ottawa.

Mr. Templer is a former organist of Holloway Street United Church, Belleville. He holds degrees of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, and is registered with the Royal College of Music and the School of English Church Music, of London, England.

He studied abroad for several years, and while in London had the distinction of playing at a service for the Archbishop of Canterbury, at Lambeth Palace. He is a former organist and choir leader of St. Mark's Anglican Church, Trenton, and of Grace Church, at Caledonia.

GOES TO OTTAWA

CLIFFORD TEMPLER, organist of Holloway Street United Church choir, Belleville, who has just been appointed organist at Parkdale United Church, Ottawa.

Mr. Templer will replace Miss Lillian Revill, who recently resigned to take the post of organist at Parkdale United Church.

Mr. Templer tendered his resignation as organist of Holloway Street United Church to the officials of the church last evening, tendering the resignation to take effect in the month of August.

While Mr. Templer's home is in Hamilton he received his music training in England, and then returned to Canada. He was for six months supply organist and leader at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville, and later was appointed to the Holloway Street United Church position, where he has served for the past three years. He is held in high regard by local musicians.

EFFORTS MADE TO CLEAN STREETS

Special By-law May be Prepared Says City Engineer

In a further effort to keep the business section of the city clean, particularly in the summer time, Bridge Street tourists, who have in the past allowed the sweeping of papers, dust and refuse from stores to lie for the prevalent road without may be prohibited from such practice by a special by-law which will be submitted for consideration of City Council at the next regular meeting, by City Engineer Chas. Mott. The recommendation that the by-law now being prepared be passed follows long continued complaints on the part of Front Street fall residents, and citizens in general, annoyed by the condition.

They say that the trouble out into the streets in the afternoon just prior to closing time the condition wouldn't be so bad. Then the city sweeper, which makes its rounds at night, would have a chance to clean it up. As it is the refuse is left on the streets for twenty-four hours subject to the wind. Warnings have been given in the past regarding this condition but they have never been acted upon. The by-law seems the best resort," stated the city engineer.

COLLECT GARBAGE AFTER MIDNIGHT

Collectors Will Work Under New Hour Arrangement

In an advertisement appearing elsewhere in this issue, Alderman Thomas Cushing, chairman of market and city property, calls attention of citizens to the new hours for garbage collection which will be observed during the remainder of the summer months.

ONE LESSON LEARNED

In most lands Turkey is given credit for the excellence of her diplomacy and the nations taking part in the conference at Montreux are praised for its dependence upon conciliation and negotiation.

While some may see a very adept hand in the springing of the notice of Turkey's intention at the time when Germany had without notice begun remilitarization of the Rhineland in contravention of treaties, and whereas Italy had found a way to go to war against the self-imposed rules of nations, the fact remains that Turkey chose the way of diplomacy in preference to force.

Refortification of the famous Dardanelles straits, the most impregnable channel of the world does not give unlimited power to Turkey, for commercial navigation is to be free if it does not aid the belligerents in the event of war. The waters are to remain open to all nations, but Turkey will be the supervising authority.

There were weeks of debate. Russia is said to have gained in freedom of movement for her fleet, but there still remains the fact that the league covenant is superior to the new treaty. Turkey's right to close the straits when she is engaged in war, or considers herself to be threatened by attack may be reversed by a two-thirds vote of the council of the League. Over all is the evidence that the lesson in the African mess has not been forgotten.

Turkey no doubt feels a victory has been achieved. She has won consideration for having the question to a conference.

Germany can hardly be expected to look with favor upon this greater freedom given to Russian fleet movements. Italy by absenting herself has lost prestige, but doubtless Italy was not willing to confer as she had herself so recently refused to confer with others over Ethiopia.

All this shows that the millenium of world brotherhood while fareff, has skirted one danger, such as was revealed in the war in East Africa.

WHEN TO RETIRE

The New Outlook appears to regret that possibly Mr. George Bernard Shaw may retire as he has reached the age of eighty years. The Outlook does not think Shaw too old.

Recently at Newcastle-on-Tyne he said he was making his last speech. But his remark was met with shouts of "No". "It would be very difficult to think that Mr. Shaw is 'to old' or to believe that he feels himself to be an old man. If he is old, what about some of the rest of us?", the Outlook asks.

Shaw has taken an interest in the world and its institutions and society, though some have been unkind enough to think that he likes paradox for paradox sake and loves the critical spirit. Many however credit him with being earnest beneath all the satire.

The New Outlook asks when a man ought to retire and find it difficult to say. "Mr. Shaw has said he is retiring but if he finds it somewhat impossible to carry out his threat and to live up to his promise, no one is going to blame him much," remarks the church paper. "It may turn out to be a better thing to break a foolish promise than to keep it."

Continuance of health is bound up in work, the journal says, seeing that Shaw has kept himself in vigor of mind and freshness of spirit up to his fourscore years (he is to be eighty on Sunday) by the zest of his concern in life and his activity in all the lines of his chosen interests. The New Outlook thinks perhaps it would be better not to decide until "we are ninety."

This much is clear. Shaw has made persons think as his remarkable wit and his dramatic power have made his message to the world on various things outstanding, whether one follows him in everything or not.

WOES OF SPAIN

Spain is in the throes of bloodshed and civil strife. Once one of the most powerful nations of earth and proud of her imperial sway, being as she was a very integral part of the Old Roman Empire, when she controlled the Netherlands, had union with Austria, threatened England's increasing navy, held sway over the Spanish Main and made great wealth from the New World, she is now the plaything of rival forces. Spain's only prominence of late has been in the story of revolutions and in the League problems arising out of the Ethiopian trouble. Too weak to play a great part, just as weak as Austria's, once part of the Spanish Empire, her proud people can look upon remnants of her greatness, even while they are fighting, Socialist Government against Fascistic forces. South America, Mexico, part of the western coast of what is now the United States, Cuba, the Phillipines, all once hers, lost irrevocably!

How will she work out her destiny for surely Spain deserves a better destiny than she now has. She has had a lesson which she can doubtless learn, but it has been a bitter one. Yet history will probably say that Spain does not possess the colonizing genius such as is possessed by other states. Her colonial experiences are sad dest ones. To most people her diplomacy and statecraft resemble those Spanish galleons which were routed by the sprightly, quick-moving English craft in 1588 and fell a prey to wind and wave as they fled northward and tried to escape back to Spain.

SONNET FROM AN OIL-FIELD

IF IT'S A WELL
BY DOROTHY McFARLANE

Each time we move, we break another plate,
Another chair, some little thing I love,
I hang my curtains, fix the house and wait
For him to say we're due another move.
I'm tired of owing bills. I'm sick of setting
Out flowers whose blooms I know I'll never see
And we keep moving, moving, and we're getting
No younger. Well, we'll have an apple tree,
Some chickens and a cow—we'll have a farm.
Buy it outright, pay everything we owe—
If it's a well, of course. But there's no harm
In planning it. I always do, you know.
Like children with their hopes and dreams
Who tell
Of ships come home, I say—"If it's a well."

THE MOIRA RIVER IS A FAKE AND A FOOLISHMENT. With a rush of fuss, fume and fury last spring the old river rose right up on its hind legs, metaphorically speaking and gave a creditable imitation of a tidal wave in installments with plenty of ice on the side. Now look at the gof durn thing. Kids, not knee-high to a grasshopper, can walk across it at the lower bridge without getting their chins wet. An eminent engineer once said that flood control of the Moira would not be a very difficult or very expensive engineering problem, but after the floods are over folks seem to forget that there is ever a possibility of another one. Seems as if it might be a good idea for the government to make a survey and see just what can be done in the way of controlling the waters of the Moira so that there can be no recurrence of last spring's disstrous flood and providing at the same time a generous flow of water through the summer months when the river all but dries up.

SIDELIGHT READER LIVING IN THE COUNTRY PROTESTS AGAINST THE HABIT FOLKS HAVE OF BEING LATE —a habit which seems to be growing—"Wherever you go," says this protester, "they are late as usual in starting the program, and farmers must come home before it is ended to milk their cows. If leaders were as prompt in starting as they should be the farmers and their families might be able to see all the program. After paying to get in on the grounds it was very disappointing to have to pick up and leave before the ball game was hardly started at the Orange celebration. It is the same at everything you go to anymore. It is high time the leaders start in learning the rule of promptness. What would our public schools be like if they didn't start at nine o'clock sharp? There is only one thing to do—it is to start everything on time. Don't wait for the Slow Pokes to come, go on without them for some will always be late, but if they are left behind a few times it might start them thinking. So please think of the Farmer who pays the price and must go home at a certain hour, and be prompt in all you do or say."

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS HAVE BEEN CAUSED BY BEES AND BOOZE and many other things, but the latest discovery of danger to motor car drivers concerns cigarette smoking, reminiscent of the song "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes". Smoking a cigarette while driving, a news item relates that a gust of wind blew the ashes in the driver's eyes with the result that he was temporarily blinded and the car ran wild, leaving the road, climbing the sidewalk and crashing into a tree. Moral seems to be don't smoke while driving.

I. and their friends. Also a number of visitors from Bloomfield, Melville, Massasaga, Redeersville, women promising to join the W. I.

With the president in charge, the minutes and reports of business were taken up.

Report of Hillier W. I.'s work at the garden party held in aid of the hospital on July 8 was given. Discussion followed concerning the possibility and need of the Operating Clinic at Hillier town hall for local and adenoid patients.

Many fine medals were given in response to the roll call.

The visitors were called upon to make a few remarks and the first was Mrs. Charlotte Cox of Bloomfield who, as this meeting's program feature was to be the showing of antiques, showed a box of antique needlework, explaining what the pieces were used for and by whom made.

Mrs. Cox organized this W. I. at Hillier twenty years ago and has made several visits to it during the years.

Among these things was the grandfather's clock brought by Mr. Bedell's ancestors from the State of New York when they (U. E. Loyalists) came to Canada. He also told much interesting history of the community. Very thankful indeed were the guests to the host and hostess for this interesting afternoon.

After the singing of the National Anthem a collection was very carried by the hostess. A generous collection was received.

A NEST OF TROUBLE

The would-be sporting curate, armed with rod and line, stopped the village urchin. "Tell me, my boy," said, "Can you inform me where I may find the best place for fishing in the neighborhood?"

"Yus" replied the youngster promptly. "Go over that there field where the bull is and mind 'e don't get yer; then sneak around be'ind Jackson's farm, but look out 'cos 'e's got a gun, and then yer can't miss the trout stream; but if yer want to catch any yer must tickle 'em. Look out for the water bailiff, though, 'cos if yer gets caught it will mean six months in stir!"

Loving Is Not Inherited Trait

Writer Warns Against Influencing Child to Overlook Sentiment

(By Lisa Grenelle)

Bradley's mother and father belonged to one of those new schools of parental thought by which it is considered a sin to kiss, hug or otherwise caress your own child.

Old-fashioned methods by which the youngest member of the family is passed from the arms of one adoring relative to another, there to be squeezed, bounced, hugged, kissed and cooed over, was looked upon with horror by these modern parents. To hear them talk, you wondered how so many babies survived such brutal treatment and retained their sanity.

From the beginning Bradley was picked up and put down only when necessary. He never was held, was kissed, on the forehead, only by his mother twice a day and never hugged or bounced by anyone. Bradley was his name and Bradley he was called from the first hour; never darling, or Bunny or anything of that sort. Baby-talk, or any of the nonsense that went with it, was never spoken to Mr. Baby Bradley. He was addressed as a grown-up from the beginning and left much to his own devices.

Rootless Child

Everything was done to make Bradley independent, self reliant and entirely self-reliant. Nothing, of course; was done to stimulate or develop his emotions or sentimentalities in any way. Special care was taken that Bradley never should become more attached to one member of the family than another. He was sent away to school at five and from his earliest years he spent much time visiting relatives and friends.

As a result, was Bradley independent, and self-reliant. He most certainly was. He had amazing poise for a child—and, was strong on nothing, dependent on nothing and completely self-confident.

But none of us liked him. It is strange about the antipathy this little six-year-old aroused in all of us.

"He hasn't any heart," one of my companions said.

Certainly Bradley showed no feeling for anyone, not even his mother. You felt that all he thought of was —"what can I get from this one?"

Not Born Loving

Too much caressing and handling is bad for any child. No child should have too much of a fuss made over him, nor should he be allowed to become too dependent. He should be encouraged to like, even to love, as many people as possible, but he must begin by loving one.

Some sentimentalists think that babies are born loving. But I think they must be taught and they cannot be taught without a certain amount of physical caressing. Words mean nothing to a small child and he takes nothing for granted. It is dangerous and unfair to let a child become too much and too long dependent upon home and mother. But without the softening influence of some sentiment a child becomes too hard and egotistical.

Crank Case Oil To Kill Mosquitoes

Millions of lives will be taken in this city during the next week or so —but the lives will be those of bothersome insects, mosquitoes and common houseflies which have been congregating in cloud-like masses at the east side city limit since the start of the recent warm weather.

Accepting the offer of fellow councillor, Alderman G. Clapp, of a plentiful supply of used crank case oil, Alderman Thos. Cushing, chairman of market and city property, will use the oil for the purpose of smothering the flies on the dump and the mosquitos in sewer by shallow pools of water. The work will be carried out this week by relief labor.

POLICE KILL GOAT AFTER DOG'S ATTACK

After lasting been attacked by a band of ferocious dogs on Tuesday night, a goat, the property of Mrs. E. Mahon, Purdy St., had to be destroyed by P. C. Wm. Evans this afternoon. P. C. Evans had to fire two well-placed bullets in the head of the animal before it succumbed. The dogs attacking the animal are believed by police to be some local pack that caused considerable annoyance and disturbance to cattle in that part of the community late last spring.

Not al the big fish are hauled in by the male of the species. Mrs. Isabel Martin, of Toronto, had a battle last week with a forty pound muskie down Hay Bay way, struggling over two hours before finally bringing the big fish unassisted. Aviation Must Not Destroy What We Want, Lindbergh

Berlin, July 23 (AP)—Col. Chas. A. Lindbergh, speaking at an air club luncheon, said today aviation leaders must realize the responsibility they bear for the deadly weapons they have created.

Aviation, he said, had created the most fundamental change ever made in war.

"It has abolished what we call 'set' defensive warfare," he asserted. "We can no longer protect our families with an army.

"Aviation has brought a revolutionary change to a world already staggering from changes.

"It is our responsibility to make sure that in so doing we do not destroy the very things we wish to protect."

Gibraltar Rock is Shelled, British Guns Warn Spaniards

Air Bombs From Reckless Spanish Fliers Menace Ship

PROTEST LODGED

Gibraltar, July 23 (AP)—British naval guns boomed off this famous rock today in grim warning to reckless Spanish Warfare rebels.

H.M.S. Wild Swan, a British destroyer, sent out a "warning" volley off Tarifa, Spain, in answer to air bombs which fell close to the warship's bows.

Simultaneously, British naval authorities ordered, like rebel leaders they must cease their "deliberate and irresponsible bombing of the shipping straits" near the Rock.

Britain and France joined, too, in telling the Leftist Spanish government to keep its fleet out of the international harbor at Tangier, on the Moroccan side of the narrow passage.

The aviators, presumably rebels, were stated to have dropped a number of bombs which exploded close to the Wild Swan's bows.

After delivering an answering fire, the 1930-ton British destroyer returned to Gibraltar.

The Rock is Struck

Previously the local authorities had warned the Spanish, whose artillery fire from Rock guns yesterday, that the British did not intend to have such incidents repeated.

The acting governor of Gibraltar protested to Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the rebellion, against rebel planes flying over Gibraltar after being warned that Spanish warships had been given a warning.

The governor said that the flying of airplanes over the fortress and its vicinity was in contravention of international treaties.

Bombs Over H.M.S. Wild Swan

The British reported the planes dropped a number of bombs while flying over the Wild Swan off Tarifa.

There were no hits but the bombs exploded close to the Wild Swan's bows.

The Wild Swan responded with a warning fire, then proceeded to the shelter of Gibraltar's waters.

British authorities warned Spanish government warship commands that if the guns guns of the Gibraltar fortress would go into action if more shells fell on the Rock.

Capt. J. Ripley, assistant military secretary to the governor, boarded the Spanish cruiser Cervantes which was flying the admiral's flag and demanded to see the senior officer commanding the squadron.

A petty officer replied, declaring he was the commander. Captain Ripley insisted on seeing the flag officer and was conducted to the commander who was under arrest.

Replying to the formal warning, the commander stated he was no longer responsible for the ship, but informed Ripley the petty officer was.

Spanish Fleet Steams Away

Shortly afterwards the squadron steamed in the direction of Malaga.

Anti-aircraft batteries aboard the Spanish warships yesterday fired on rebel airplanes which bombed the royal vessels, of the shells falling on Gibraltar.

The insurgent aircraft attempted to drive off the cruisers which menaced the rebel strongholds of Algeciras and La Linea.

Gibraltar observers of the engagement were forced to flee to cover when shells fell near the British town.

After the skirmish, two chimneys and a roof on garden on a local hotel were found to have been damaged by exploding projectiles from the cruisers Jaime I, Libertad and Abe Cervantes.

Barcelona, July 22 (C.P.-Havas) —Four British destroyers, the Douglas, Gallant, Gipsy and Garland were awaited today at this port, where they will stand by to take aboard British nationals endangered by the civil war.

Bellaville, Ont., July 23 (CP)—Chicken thieves have been making inroads on farm flocks in this section of the Niagara district, Clifford Hitchcock reported to police that chickens valued at $150 were taken a couple of nights ago. Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Duggan and Crawford by Fraser Harvie.

McKenzie Red Lake

This promising junior mine increased its daily production from the current 160-ton day rate to 200 tons a day, it is learned. The increase will be effected quarter of this year ran slightly in excess of $200,000, or approximately $70,000 a month. The former production peak was in the three months ended December 30th last year, when recovery amounted to $180,398.

Production at McKenzie Red Lake mainly consisting of 2 new levels down to 950 feet. While no estimate of ore reserves has been made, officials state that more than enough have been found for every ton mined in the past year. Record high grade ore finding at the adjoining Gold Eagle have naturally augmented the potentialities of McKenzie Red Lake.

An increase in the price of copper as well as in newsprint is considered anticipated in the not distant future. In the case of copper, the technical position of this commodity has improved in recent months and with the persistent demand from Europe continuing, leaders in the industry feel that an advance in the price of the red metal is not far off. This explains the strength in such issues as Noranda and International Nickel.

It is generally conceded that a firming in base metals generally is in the offing which, of course would include such products as lead and zinc. The importance of an advance in lead and zinc to Consolidated Smelters is well known. The popularity of Smelters is well reflected when the earning possibilities of this company are considered. The street feels that the recovery often attractive appreciation possibilities over a period of time, many remembering the sensational market record of the issue in the bull days of 1929.

Okotoks, Alta., July 22 (CP)— Loss of $60,000 was caused to the business section of Okotoks early today when fire destroyed the two-storey Lineham Block and spread to adjoining buildings.

Flames also injured two persons, families living in apartments in the Lineham Block were made homeless.

Cardinal Fights Image in Glass For Five Years

Bronte, Ont., July 23 (CP)—With proud ferocity a fleeing red cardinal has fought his image in the window of the home of James Partridgher daily for more than five years.

The bird, whose determination to oust its "rival" is so great that he has been given the name of Jack Dempsey, launches himself headlong at the image starting at him out of the darkened window. Six years ago the cardinal and his mate first came to the Partridge home at Bronte, near Hamilton. During the summer he discovered the mirror-like window, shadowed by the trees, and promptly began his duel with the shadow.

Scriver Shelled from Mound As Belleville Seniors Win Second Game of the Season

Whitehill Pitched Hitless Ball For Nearly Seven Frames

McIVOR STEADY

Utronki Triples in Second to Give Locals a Winning Margin

Bunching all but one of their hits in the second frame the Belleville seniors hung up their second win of the current O.B.A.A. season by downing the Peterboro squad 5 to 3 on the home ice last evening before the smallest crowd ever to witness a league game in this city. The locals pounced on the offerings of "Spook" Scriver, who went to the well once too often and scored their entire five runs in the second frame on a batting splurge and then settled down to play splendid ball behind the superb pitching of Ken Ivan, who hurled the locals to their second win of the season as he registered six Peterboro hits and at no time was in danger, after the Belleville gang moved into the lead.

Last night's tussle was purely a pitchers' battle, after Scriver had been shelled from the hilltop and "Gunner" Ed Whitehill assumed the Peterboro pitching role hurling his best ball for over seven innings. Practically all hits accumulated by both teams were acquired in the early stages of the game as the pitchers took complete command of the situation to give the more hand-ful of fans on hand the finest exhibitions of pitching seen locally in some years. Whitehill relieved Scriver and stacked up against McIvor, who was in complete command of the game from the outset. McIvor allowed six scattered hits and but for Utronki's error might have fared much better in the ultimate score.

Fine Fielding

Although the game was marked with superb pitching, numerous sensational fielding efforts were supplied by the fielders on both teams, the Weir-led clan kicking in with the only double killing of the game, which was started by Manager Weir. Roy Covert, ex-Belleville pitcher was the only player on either squad to count more than one hit, as he banged out two singles. The Peter cut-bit the local six to five, but failed to bunch their hits as McIvor bore down in the pinches and buried a splendid type of winning baseball. To Vinny Utronki went the honors of the longest hit of the day as he cracked out a triple with two aboard to run the locals count of runs to four and then scored on Gray's out for Belleville's last run in the second frame. Bill Calladine and Kingdon hit doubles for the visitors.

Ed McIvor, local hurler, was in rare form as he allowed six scattered hits, struck out three and only walked three. McIvor, pitcher for a third inning error, deserved a much better fate than that which befell him as he hurled the locals into for the second time this season. Scriver's slants proved no mystery to the locals as they shelled him from the box after the second frame, only to have Eddie Whitehill, brother of Earl Whitehill of the Washington American League team, step into the Peterboro breach and pitch no-hit ball until the final out. Whitehill's control was superb as he constantly baffled the locals, but his efforts in no way over-shadowed those of McIvor.

The Play

Scoring opened in the second frame as Weir singled and stole second. Latchford sided to left, but Bennett laced out a single and went to second standing up, when Weir remaining at third. Henn singled scoring Weir as Bennett moved to third. McIvor hit to P. Calladine at first, who bobbled and Bennett scored, Henn moving to third and McIvor went to second on the next pitch. Utronki stepped to the plate and laced a mighty triple to right to score Henn and McIvor and subsequently scored on Gray's infield out to end the Belleville scoring with five runs as St. Louis proved to abort. The Petes scored two in the third. After one was out Kearns strolled, Calladine hit first and Utronki threw wild to third to let Kearns score and Calladine move up to the hot corner. Calladine ——— on Burton's single. In the ninth Kingdom, hitting for Clarke, doubled to Wright, moved up a base on a passed ball and scored on Mcivor's fly to Utronki, as the Belleville team were playing defensive ball and defending their lead.

Henn, Whalley and Gray supplied the fielding sensations of the game.

MARANVILLE WILL LIKELY MOVE UP

Playing Flashy Game And Hitting Better Than Ever

Elmira, N.Y., July 23.—(CP) — Rabbit Maranville, hitting .370 for Elmira and playing a flashy second base as 44, predicted today he would go back to the big leagues soon in a manager's role.

As injured leg kept Maranville out of all but a few games the majors last year and bothered him this spring but the diminutive diamond star said that "today the leg is just as good as ever."

He is playing and managing the Pioneers in the New York-Pennsylvania League, but is not considered in more than 75 games and leads the team both in batting and driving in runs.

"I guess it's because I love the game so much and don't want to quit," he said. "I'm hitting better this year than ever did before in my life. Of course the pitching here in the class isn't quite as tough as it was in the big show, but it's tough enough and if I wasn't in top physical condition I couldn't hit like this."

Everything the Rabbit does is all right with the fans, Roars of approval greet his flamboyant pocket catches. He has pulled more strategic and freak plays this year than they've ever seen before.

End of Fistic Trail Appears for Berg

New York, July 23.—(CP)—End of the fistic trail appeared near today for Jackie "Kid" Berg, once a contender for the lightweight championship of the world, following his knockout in two rounds at the hands of Aldo Spoldi, Italian lightweight champion, here last night.

The Londoner, in his first appearance since returning to North America, was belted hard by the Italian, The "White-Chapel Whirlwind", who in 1930 gave Tony Canzoneri a beating was put down three times in the second round before the referee stopped the fight.

A left to the jaw floored Berg soon after the second round started. He no sooner got to his feet after an eight count than Spoldi left caught him in the same place. Berg sank for another eight count. Gamely he struggled up but Spoldi connected a sweeping right to the head. With Berg on the floor Referee Billy Cavanaugh stopped the fight without count on the end of Berg.

During his golden years Berg fought them all. He holds decisions over Kid Chocolate, Billy Petrolle, Billy Wallace, Tony Herrara and several others. He was knocked by Sammy Fuller and Cleto Locatelli not bunch their hits to shove another across.

Foxboro came right back in their half to score three runs when Seeley, Ashley and K. Ketcheson singled in succession. Blakely flew out to centre and Seeley scored easily after the catch. Breese was safe when Ashley was forced at third, Clay got a life as Semark bobbled his grounder at second with K. Ketcheson and Breese scoring on the error. No more scoring was in evidence until the fourth, when Wall and Stewart both drew passes and scored on successive singles by H. Ketcheson and Ashley.

Line-ups: Melrose—Howard, Semark, Knott, Barriage, D. Rimmett, Booth, R. Rimmett, Coutts, and Pearce. Foxboro—Seeley, Ashley, Ketcheson, Blakely, Breese, Clay, Wall, Stewart, and H. Ketcheson.

FOXBORO DOWNS MELROSE BY 5-1

Game Called on Account of Rain in Last Half of Fifth

Foxboro, July 23 (Special)—Old Jupiter Pluvius stepped in and halted the Melrose at Foxboro game here Wednesday night and although it was only a shower, Umpire Thomas called the game at the half-way mark in the fifth with the homesters leading 5-1.

Barchilla were at premium on both sides, as H. Ketcheson on the mound for the winners, set the Melrose nine down with four safeties while fanning seven. In the meantime his teammates nicked the combined offerings of Cy Barriage and Knott for five safeties, all singles. Snappy fielding by both teams pulled their pitchers out of bad holes after which they got men in scoring positions with the Foxboro team kicking in with a fast double play in the fourth to nip a Melrose rally in the bud.

Melrose started out like a ball team in the first inning when Howard worked Ketcheson for five transportation to the initial sack and promptly stole second with Cy Barriage scoring him on a single tonight. This home tally culminated the Melrose scoring as they could

Story Book Filly Likely to Win the Hambletonian Race

(By Orlo Robertson)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Goshen, N.Y., July 23.—(AP)—They're calling out the foremost three-year-old trotters for the $40,-000 Hambletonian, richest of the harness horse stakes, and it looks like Rosalind, a story book filly, will lead the parade home at Goshen's Good Time Park, August 1.

Child of Shakespeare's "As you Like It", 21-year-old Gibson White of Lexington selected the name for the horse, that is expected to follow in the footsteps of such great trotters of Greyhound, the Marchioness, Mary Reynolds, Walter Dear and Spencer.

But whether she wins or not, the daughters of Scotland has gone a long way toward restoring the health of her youthful owner, son of the famous trainer, Ben A. White, who won the Hambletonian with Mary Reynolds.

Two years ago, Gibson, horseman almost from the time he could toddle, was seriously ill. His father, knowing his son's interest in horses gave him two yearlings. One was Rosalind. The other was Jack Orr, champion two-year-old pacer last year with a mark of 2.04 1-4.

Gibson was given permission to re-name the colt after his father had decided that the name of an old product was more appropriate. Young White first selected "Dot" nickname of a high school sweetheart but when he found that another had settled on the name of Shakespeare's heroine . . .

From his sick bed, Gibson directed the training of both his charges. With his father and Will Dickerson alternating at handling the reins, Rosalind chalked up six victories in nine starts as a juvenile, setting a mark of 2.03 in winning the Kentucky Futurity at Lexington.

DAY BY DAY

The "upper-crust" that's what we'll have to call Alex Watro (2, 0, 1), is now tied for top honors with Central League team is going places the local ballsters step in and out—as the dope fly swatters a game, just as they did last night by nicking the Pelee limit champ 5 to 4. And the matter should have been 5 to 1, no error. In the third frame saved for a two run rally on the part of the Petes.

Once again Ed McIver laboured in a most praiseworthy manner and he deserved more than a handful of the C.O.B.L. lastnight. For the Petes, Whitehill, was touched for five hits and pitched no hit ball from the middle of the second frame to the end, but he no way over-shadowed McIver as a pitcher, the local mound-man pitching a great game. Incidentally Whitehill hurled the best six innings of ball we have witnessed locally in quadrille time. Middle had everything while his nine inning opponent, McIver had just as much and well deserved the victory he gained. The game was purely a pitchers' duel with Whitehill and McIver clashed.

Manager Ethner Johnson had considerable fun giving his budget of best fans in the grandstand the well known raspberry. "That's swell support you've given Belleville team", yelled Ethner as he gazed at the fans as he gave them the bird the crowning crack of the game. Well when Roy Smith fired his Whitehy and broke a bat—There goes the gate receipts," shouted Ethner as he headed over the dug-out and added—"why don't you support your team? Apparently you're not going to do so, Belleville, it's your fans and dandy when you head a wheelbarrow to the corner club game are in the dumps all I see is a few of the old die-in-the-wool fans. What's wrong with the fans of this town a year team head have been the cellar occupants upside the past" buried Ethner in defiance.

While all of this was going on the Napanee Oldsmith took the Kingston Frontie into camp to the tune of 5 to 4. Hughie Brennan's timely double drove in three runs to put the game on ice and chalked up a defeat against Jack Williams. Incidentally 470 witnesses inform us that Williams practically lost his own game, when he over-ran second base in the ninth inning with Brennan at bat after he had doubled to right. Incidentally "Lefty" Bishop south-paved the Frontie to defeat which after all should in the box tough a job for the swarge Yorkfillege.

The fight game has been rather dormant locally of late as head athletes, who are interested in the manly art of self defence in Belleville, should stroll themselves to tonight's gathering at the Belleville Yacht Club rooms where plans will be formulated to revive boxing locally. Promoter Charles Jaffy has engaged Eddie Lee, six-foot Toronto boy who has been engaged in the fight racket across the border to the south for some years past, to box Jack Belleville athletes are interested in training and subsequently sparring matches with the Men in mind of trying to return the fight game to its former place in the sun as popular sport. Everyone is open to all and it is hoped a good deal of interest and of opinion of the matter will be seen and heard.

Did you know that Vern Tu Geer holds an international boxing title? Kevin Field press boy. Working for the Border Cities Star in Windsor, across the river from Detroit, he is the only Canadian scribe who writes regularly from first-hand observation of the major leagues.

Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune and originator of the All-Star game presented Gabby Hartnett with the Most Valuable Player League awarded by the B. B. W. of A. which voted the honor to Cubby last autumn.

It seems there was a terrible lot of jockeying for positions in the local Industrial Softball League kick-off. After the Corbin "Sealmakers" staged a comeback and eliminated Glen in the play-off for fourth position, they the heads of both Belleville-Sargent and the Bells. month, the two clubs tied for first place, debated as to which team which would rather meet in the league semi-finals, the third placed Wood End or the Corbins. When the Belmonts and the Belleville-Sargent met, in a sudden death game, the ultimate winner was slated to meet the Corbins on Friday, while the losers naturally took on the West End crusty Cardinals.

And Hornsby, with a bunch of St. Louis Browns, who weren't expected to go any place in the American League chase—and aren't. But he has become the only man in the league to solve the slugging tyrannic of the Yanks. "Feed 'em slow balls" he told his pitchers. "They did, and the "Browns became the only club to hang three straight losses on "Murderers' Row" this season.

When Carl Hubbell and Mel Ott are right, Terry's Giants go places. At the moment, both "The Hub" and the "Kid Veteran" are red-hot, so the Giants have taken two straight over the Cards. Hubbell's pitching won Tuesday's game, and Ott, Mancuso and young hurler Gabby Gabler, making his first start of the season, combined to take an 8-3 decision yesterday.

Giants Win Third

With the Giants leading a 15-4 slugfest to the Phillies, in which Johnny Moore belted three homers over the Baker Field wall, the Giants shot into third place and the Reds slipped to fifth. Cincinnati Reds, who won their second straight over Boston Reds 7-4 took over fourth place. The league lead of the Cubs was stretched to three full games by the Cardinals' defeat, since the Chicago champions nosed out the Dodgers 3-2 again as Larry French posted his 10th pitching win.

The Browns, who came out of the American League cellar by defeating the Yankees Sunday and Tuesday, stretched the New Yorkers' losing streak to three—their longest of the season—yesterday with a 6-5 win, chiefly on the hitting of Agtig and ailing Jim Bottomley and the hurling of Ivy Andrews, who followed Sam Horsley's advice, fed "Murderer's Row" his slow ball, and held their bats to ten hits.

By the defeat the Yankees' American League lead was cut to seven games, smallest it has been in weeks, for the second place Cleveland Indians again slugged the Red Sox, winning 8-3, with Earl Averill leading a 19-hit attack, to drop Boston to fifth place.

Chicago White Sox took over fourth place, just beating the Senators in a 13-inning pitching thriller, in which Johnny Whitehead bested Earl Whitehill 3-2. The Tigers found Rookie Herman Fink in particular and the Athletics in general too tough and suffered a 7-5 setback, but managed to hang onto third place.

Bill Terry and Rogers Hornsby, a couple of McGraw boys who learned baseball under the "Old Man," are themselves "Miracle Men".

For instance, there's Terry, whose New York Giants were expected to romp and stroll out of the picture for good long about mid-season. They collapsed, all right, but Terry brought them back, and now they're in third place again, but after the cruelly Cardinals.

Royals Take Home Run Route to Defeat Newark

(By the Associated Press)

Just when it was beginning to look as if the rest of the International League pennant race would be strictly a three-club affair among Rochester, Buffalo and Newark the other five members of the circuit have come to life.

Tops among recent developments are the four straight victories the cellar dwelling Syracuse Chiefs have rung up against Buffalo's second place Bisons. But Toronto also has staged a recent comeback, winning ten of its last 12 games and the fifth-place Montreal Royals have knocked off Newark twice in succession.

Bob Logan's home-plate wedding at Albany apparently was enough for the Senators last night, for they succumbed to Rochester Red Wings 11-3, scoring most of their 11 hits while the league leaders finished off with a five-run blast in the ninth.

Leo Mangum, Syracuse veteran, chalked up his 100th International League victory while Carl Fischer suffered his first defeat since joining the Bisons as the Chiefs knocked off Buffalo 6-1. Mangum scattered nine hits, expertly while Fischer was touched for 11 of the Syracuse blows and all the runs in 8 1-3 innings.

Twenty-game Baltimore Orioles at their own game, whaling Cliff Melton, the Cubs ace, off the hill in the third inning to score five runs and win 9-6. Julia Wera was the only Leaf regular, who failed to hit but the Orioles did about as well, getting to John Moore for four doubles and a four-run cluster in the eighth.

Montreal took the home run route to its second victory over Newark 4-2, in the only daylight game. Bob Seeds accounted for all the Royals' runs, three of them on a pair of homers, and had a perfect day at the plate. Larry Lajoie's dyknanga limited the Bears to seven blows.

RUSSIA TO BUILD STRATEGIC RAILWAY

To counter Germany's attempt to cut off France from her Little Entente Allies, Soviet Russia is reported to have reached an agreement with Roumania whereby Russia would build a strategic railway line through Roumania to Czechoslovakia thus making it possible for her to rush troops into the heart of Europe the instant trouble breaks out. As the map shows, Czechoslovakia is hemmed by Poland, Germany, Austria and Hungary, now all allies of Germany. The military advisers of the Little Entente are said to have advised the railway.

100 YEARS OF RAILWAY HISTORY COMMEMORATED

The advance made in the 100 years of steam railways in Canada is graphically illustrated in the above layout. The old timer is a reproduction of the first steam locomotive in Canada, operated in 1836. Beside her stands the gigantic streamlined "6400" of the Canadian National, the largest streamlined locomotive in the world. Both are taking part in the centennial celebrations of the opening of the Champlain and St. Lawrence railway. Engineers A. J. Shapter and G. F. Moran, both of whom have seen more than 50 years service are seen in the 21-foot full size model of Canada's first train. They are making a cross country tour.

SPRUCE SAWFLY SEEN AS MENACE

Creates Problem For Salvation of Forest Areas

Complete destruction within a quarter of a century of Canada's unrivalled stands of spruce, threatened by a rapidly spreading outbreak of foreign insects, with a monetary loss of an estimated $18,500,000,000 if their ravages go unchecked, is the situation which confronts the authorities of this country, and particularly those experts of the Dominion Entomological Laboratory here, who are laboring ceaselessly in an effort to provide sufficient control measures in order to combat this newest menace to standing timber. The threatened spruce saw fly which has made such inroads in Quebec forests during the past few years.

Introduced accidentally into this country for first noticed in 1930, the fly is now known to have spread from Gaspe Peninsula and to Nova Scotia and west as far as Temiskaming, destroying 8,000 square miles of dead timber in Ontario.

Between Gaspe and Temiskaming lies a vast area of forests which the fellow-settler fly may have established itself in, if being observed. Government experts and private researchers have failed in their efforts to check the pestilence.

From the Belleville laboratories greatly enlarged this year with the completion of the new addition, starting the line on the largest and most complete in the world, comes the hope that the insect's parasites, that have been cultured here, to fight the saw fly which resembles in appearance a great wasp, spare a small bee and a house fly, may be the answer. In the form of the spruce trees, which labor health and small-grown caterpillars, which eat until mature, and then fall to the ground making a cocoon. The cocoon is then exposed indefinitely.

Found with the fact that the saw fly has been increasing at an incalculable rate for several years and is now firmly established, the local entomologists are handicapped by their numerical inferiority in the matter of parasites. This, coupled with the large area that must be covered by them, presents a problem in itself.

It is hoped by officials of the local laboratory that the larch saw fly, a somewhat similar insect, destroyed all mature larch in the country in about 20 years, beginning in 1880. Parasites introduced to check their ravages were unable to cope with the pest, and it was not the larch was destroyed the filler died of starvation, and the parasites gathering numerically eventually, effecting an apparent balance.

CHAPTER 30.
CONCLUSION

Husband and wife read the confession together after he had been released and returned to his own home, and a great pity took possession of his soul for his unfortunate brother.

"He had great innate nobleness," said Constance, "or he would not have given up everything when he might have kept it."

"Yes, that proves it," said her husband; "but for this I might still be in confinement and awaiting trial on the charge of murder; but I owe it to your faithfulness, my wife, first of all."

"O Vane," she said, "we don't half appreciate our blessings! Think of poor Lenore and Hazel!"

"I know it, dear, but we will try to be as kind and tender henceforth as to compensate for our lack of charity in the past. And, first of all, we will try to find Vane and restore him of our forgiveness and affection."

"I am afraid we cannot, and I am afraid, Vane, that he will be arrested some time, that would be dreadful."

"Yes, but he is keen and determined. Let us hope otherwise."

The Hamiltons continued to reside in Greendale, the children grew to be a tall youth and maid, and great comfort to their parents, as they were taught to feel pity, rather than detestation, for all the wrongs.

After one or three years passed away, a large box or fruit came to them from Australia, and they felt sure the sender must be Victor; in five years more a check for one hundred dollars. It was signed "Charlie Rogers," but they were sure it came from him also, particularly as others followed from time to time. Vane wrote to Charles Rogers, but receiving no reply decided that he did not dare answer them, and so they would not write again.

But at last they heard of him, and in a way to cause the utmost consternation. He had been arrested. An all read the account of a certain fifty ranch owner who was arrested and held for trial on charges of forgery and robbery. How for years he had commanded the universal respect of the community in which he lived; how he had risen from being the manager to the ownership of a large fruit ranch, and how his friends fell at his arrest. We all read it, and were sympathetic with the returned man, who yet must be dealt with as a criminal by the law and we watched the newspapers for further accounts. But after a time the matter was dropped and we wondered at it.

Long afterwards, the reason was known in a few. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton read the account of the arrest, and immediately started for California. They went to the governor and laid before him the whole story of his life, temptations, and struggles. Vane pleaded and circumstances pleaded, and both were made eloquent by their great sympathy and sensibility. The governor fortunately was a man of heart as well as of justice and discernment. Perhaps, too, the grace and beauty of Constance touched him, for he was a gallant man.

At all events, after some delay and no little consideration, a full pardon was granted Victor Hamilton, and henceforth he was free to travel as he would, and without fear. It was not known for a long time that it was Solomon Marks who denounced him, because his demands of "hush money" were disregarded—not until the arrest, confession, and death of Marks took place.

His visited Greendale, and such was his genial nature and manner that he was well and even cordially received, for his story was well known, as well as his subsequent reformation. Then he returned to his California ranch, as he shook hands with Constance at parting she said to him:

"You should marry, Victor. The ranch needs a mistress, you know," she said. "You have spoiled me for any other woman."

But his head was lighted and he breathed a full breath at thinking he had been able to give up the chance of winning her when in his absence it was held his friend's own hands was held his friend's own. "Cherish her, Vane, as you would cherish your own life, for she is a jewel."

"She is more than my life to me," said Vane.

"Then why will you send for me to keep house for you?" asked Clare, glancing out into the sunshine before him.

"Next year; and when the consignment here follows—as no doubt he will in a week—we will have a grand wedding at the ranch. How does that strike you, missy?"

Clare blushed a little, for the unnerving hero was not a myth, and wedding actually took place that summer at the ranch, as her uncle proposed. Her parents and brother were present, and the ring used at the ceremony was the one left "in trust" by the sorrowing mother years before. Christmas spirit must have been present to bless them all.

THE END.

More Money

by

Charles Grant

(Note: The financial details contained in this story, while purely fictional, have been testified to as accurate and corroborated by L. C. Forbes, Editor of Forbes Magazine and distinguished financial writer, and by Henry P. Kendall, who has recently investigated the activities of Ivar Kreuger, Roger Shinnes and Alfred Lowenstein.)

CHAPTER I.

The great Jasper H. Ingram needed money. More money. Sixty million dollars, to be exact.

The amount did not startle him. His dreams were not vast to be measured in terms of dollars. Since his projects demanded more money, he had but to ask and it would be produced for him. He had little reason to fear that his new financing would not be accomplished.

Yet, as he stood looking out of the window of his private office on the forty-second floor of the Ingram building, he thought for a moment of the seeming incongruity of Jasper Ingram being in need of more money. His wealth, credit and resources were so boundless. But it always had been that way; unrelenting pressure for more money.

From the time he had started to make his own way, to escape from the bitterness of his early poverty, needing a few dollars more a year—and getting it—there was that constant and irresistible impulse to forge ahead.

He smiled now, as he recalled the time he thought a hundred dollars a month was the highest salary in the world. Then, after a while, the feeling that if he could earn as much as ten thousand a year he would have achieved life's most bountiful promise. Only to find that wasn't so. Increasing wealth brought with it increasing demands. More money. Always more money.

How he had looked to the men with wealth, envying them, fancying their problems solved—that they were but absolved from worries and longing. How mistaken he had been! Just when was it he had ceased to think of money as money and had seen it as Power, as the leverage with which gigantic undertakings could be swung breathlessly forward? Time mercifully, but the creative impulse back of the change, definite and obvious.

As he turned from the window his confidential secretary, Rejnor Alspaugh entered the room and stood respectfully waiting the great man's command.

Tate Alspaugh, thought Ingram, as he moved toward the table at which he worked—a steady, safe, dependable yes-man, getting ten thousand a year—and satisfied. Paying for a home in the suburbs for himself and his exceedingly pretty wife who was inclined to be flirtatious. What of it? Most young women were like that, Alspaugh. Ingram was sure, had little worry about the need for more money.

After acknowledging Alspaugh's good morning greeting, Ingram said, "We can go ahead with the expansion plans. Osgood has completed his group in the flotation of a sixty-million bond issue. They're settling the thing now. Osgood should call any moment."

Alspaugh shook his head in profound admiration. Who but Jasper H. Ingram in these dark days, could ask for sixty million dollars—and get it! But he said simply:

"That's fine, Mr. Ingram. But as he moved toward the table at naturally no surprise to me."

Yet, behind this lip service, enthusiastic though it sounded, Alspaugh felt a twinge of envy—a stirring of something surprisingly like resentment. Why should the powerfully rich have such ease in adding to their fortunes, while such as he was always so pressed? Obviously Ingram had not correctly analyzed his obsequious employee.

Money! More money! Jasper Ingram able to raise new millions for the expansion of vast holdings, while he, Homer Alspaugh, would have a devil of a time getting an extension of the mortgage on his home. Banks weren't reviewing mortgages in the times. Not for men of his financial standing.

No worry about the need for more money Ingram had thought. But Alspaugh was constantly harassed for money. True, a few years earlier he would have thought no man could ever feel hard up on the liberal salary he was receiving. But somehah, well, it might still be all right if Marian weren't so extravagant.

A gentle buzz from Mr. Ingram's private telephone interrupted his meditations. As he listened, and watched, he knew that Osgood, evidently Ingram's banker but actually his financial wheel horse, was on the wire.

"It's all set," was Ingram's only comment to Alspaugh. The fingers of his left hand drummed on the arm of his chair his nostrils dilated slightly, but he gave no other sign of triumph.

Alspaugh's imagination was too limited for him to grasp the free and intricate pattern of Jasper Ingram's gigantic dreams.

Jasper Ingram worked alone. All those who were associated with him—bankers and promoters and the members of his board of directors—seemed to become lesser Ingrams, but they were never admitted to his holy of holies where the fire of his unlimited ambition burned. He was a dreamer but his dreams were practical. He kept his eyes on a vision of the future yet held his mind to the sound practical details of the immediate step—one small unit at a time. To control power you simply bought, or bought into, a local power and light company. You recapitalized and formed a holding company. Acquire in the same way a dozen or more strategically located. Soon you could cover this country!

Power! Transportation! Communication!

To unify and control. That was Ingram's dream. Overwhelming and simple. Holding companies. Voting trusts. Investment trusts.

To Jasper H. Ingram there was nothing complicated or involved in these ramifications. To Homer Alspaugh they simply were beyond comprehension.

All Alspaugh knew was that when Ingram wanted to add to his holdings he called up Osgood, or some other banker, and got the money to carry out his plans. Poor little Alspaugh, blind to the sweep of genius, ready to think that were the Ingram he too could guide the destiny of great enterprise.

AT THE REGENT

"Early to Bed"

From the moment the picture opens, when you learn that Reggie, is a trusted clerk of the Matchless Rye Company who has been employed for twenty-six years, "with a bright future" until the close of his hilarious honeymoon with Mary Boland at Lake Oskawoshabogee, "Thirty to Bed" is one long riot of laughter.

The latest Boland-Ruggles farce, at the Belle tonight, and Friday, matinee and evening, is unusual in many ways. Its gags are entirely new; it has no drunk scenes; it presents the pair as newlyweds rather than as a much-married couple. Yet it is Boland-Ruggles comedy of the highest order, surpassing anything the two have done together before.

Charlie has no drunk scene . . . but to make up for that lack he appears in a sleep-walker. Probably no funnier sequence has ever been thrown on the screen than that in which Charlie, pajama-clad and eyes tightly closed, takes to the fields in a somnambulistic search for something his subconscious mind believes. The writer thinks Charlie is a better somnambulist than he is a drunk . . . and no higher praise can be given.

You laugh when Ruggles and Boland first appear as antiquated lovers; you laugh when they stumble their inefficient way about as a murder and jewel robbery mystery; you laugh at Charlie's valiant attempts to sell the world's largest order of glass eyes, and at his worry when he comes to believe he is a "Tiger Man" during his sleep-walking period. You laugh heartily at all when you discover what he really does on his nightly walks.

"Early to Bed" was written for the comedy team by Lucien Littlefield and Thaddeus Sperry. Members of the excellent cast include George Barbier and lovely Gail Patrick who aids in pulling over the laughs.

"The Country Doctor" Returns

The Affection of a father for his two motherless sons and the heartbreak and sorrow, turmoil and triumphs that lives brings the parent is the motivated background for the widely heralded Twentieth Century production, "Sins of Man" announced as the second feature attraction on the same program.

Hershott, elevated to stardom for his now famous portrayal of "The Country Doctor", is said to carve a new niche for himself in "Sins of Man" the production, besides handsome young Don Ameche, sensational new screen "find", charming Ann Shoemaker, and Allen Jenkins.

At rare intervals there comes a picture made memorable by a great characterization of a role in which Chaney in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and Charles Laughton in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street". The Belle theatre welcomes another such triumph . . . that of Jean Hersholt, one of the fine character actors of our time, in his first picture since "The Country Doctor". "Sins of Man" at Monday completes a program of grand screen entertainment, varied and entertaining, that every member of the family will enjoy.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Murder by an Aristocrat"

A new and baffling mystery melodrama, "Murder by an Aristocrat," with Lyle Talbot, Marguerite Churchill and Chris Dodd in the leading roles.

Produced from the exciting novel by Mignon G. Eberhart the picture is said to be packed with thrilling situations, suspense and blood curdling episodes that make the hair stand on end.

Five members of a proud, aristocratic family are being blackmailed by a blackmail ne'er-do-well, who later is found with a bullet through his heart in the library of the house. Another member of the family is found dead in the attic, evidently a victim of a poisonous drug.

The others of the family are suspected as also are the butler and two maids. To complicate matters, however, the aged spinster head of the family declares that a strip of costly samples has been stolen, and the district attorney, also a relative, tries to make out a case of murder for the purpose of robbery in order to save his kin from scandal.

The murder is eventually solved by a nurse and a doctor, who have been called to the house, after a series of harrowing events in which an attempt is made to kill the nurse.

Added Attraction

"Western pictures have maintained their tremendous popularity" declare John Wayne, because they are actually moving pictures. Without having the burden of talk which characterizes most other pictures, ninety percent of the story is told in action. This makes a motion picture stand still, and it is movement—fast and continuous movement—which very apparently the public wants in motion pictures."

An outstanding sample of Wayne's entirely correct theory is "The Lonely Trail", Republic's thrilling Texas historical picture which brings Wayne, Ann Rutherford, Cy Kendall, Yakima Canutt, Lloyd Ingraham and others to the Capitol Theatre starting tomorrow. Flight raids, prison breaks, gun battles in the dark, running gun fights on horseback, fist fights and six-shooter duels in a continuous succession of thrilling action scenes tell this story of how the Texans led by Wayne, waged guerilla warfare with the carpet-baggers who invaded the south after the Civil War.

Port Hope Man Won the Prize

Figures don't lie but they certainly can tell queer tales. Many people have been pursuing their brains for the past week or so in the endeavor to estimate approximately how many articles could be placed in a store window on Front Street in plain sight. Being invited to guess with the prospect of winning ten dollars for the nearest correct answer as announced in this newspaper, many tried their luck. But who would believe that as many as 3,960 estimates were made and deposited as claims against that ten dollar bill. As to the number of articles in the window estimates, off hand, might run from one hundred to one thousand, the latter figure being deemed "tops". However, many of the estimaters will be surprised to learn that the number of articles in the window by actual count numbered 2187 and the estimate submitted by H. L. Mack, of Port Hope of 2186 won the prize offered by Bowra Electric and Hardware.

M'MAHON REMANDED TO JAIL AFTER HEARING

Two Men on Mission for U.S. Consulate at Barcelona, Spain, Slain

Constable Anthony Dick And Other Witnesses At Old Bailey Hearing

Attorney General Quoted Accused as Saying He Wanted to Shoot Self

TWO NEW CHARGES

Constable Tells of Words of McMahon to Get Horse Out of The Way

London, July 24 (AP)—George Andrew McMahon, the man who drew a revolver during a military parade headed by the King last week, was remanded to jail for a week today after a hearing on a charge of producing a weapon "with intent to alarm His Majesty".

The decision to grant a remand pending continuance of the hearing next Friday was made after Alfred Kershaw, counsel for the prisoner, had announced McMahon wished to testify himself and to call witnesses.

Constable's Story.

Sitting in Bow street police station court room in the heart of Covent Garden Market, the 34-year-old crippled war hero's special Constable Anthony Gordon Dick told how he smashed at the prisoner's revolver hand when the king rode by on Constitution Hill eight days ago.

The hand had an "object" in it, the constable said, so he struck. "I did not leave the hand at the actual moment it knocked down," he added.

Other testimony bolstered the allegation of a homicidal intent, when all the talk of the Attorney General, Sumner Richard Green, rather inconsequential, had been over the cool drop between the horse's feet, but did not actually see McMahon fire with the weapon.

"Take That Horse Out of Way.

Constable Francis Dick, who was mounted in front of McMahon at the parade, testified that later had shouted:

"Take that damn horse out of the way. I want to see the procession."

The constable added: "He seemed excited."

McMahon sat in the iron-railed dock. His face was flushed crimson and he repeatedly passed notes to his solicitor, Kershaw. He wasn't present as the parade of prosecution witnesses.

Course of Revolver.

Eyewitness accounts showed discrepancies of opinion over whether the revolver accidentally misfired or fired by chance or whether it landed in front or behind the animal; whether it was thrown or knocked from McMahon's hand.

The revolver's spare cylinder previously with striking McMahon's arm did not appear, Constable Dick, however, testified there was a woman in a blue dress at the scene who did not touch the arm.

The formal charge against McMahon was that he produced a revolver with intent to alarm His Majesty.

London, July 24—(CANA)—Andrew McMahon, who appeared with a loaded revolver at a parade headed by the King on July 16, came up for trial in Old Bailey Court, Attorney General Sir Donald Somervell, in charge of the prosecution in Bow Street police court, quoted the purpose of bringing the police: "I wanted to shoot myself in front of the King, but I lost my head."

Sir Donald said: "This first offence with which this man is charged with presenting near the person of His Majesty a weapon with intent to break the public peace; the second with producing a revolver near the person of His Majesty with intent to alarm His Majesty."

These charges, he said, were in addition to that of being unlawfully in possession of a revolver with intent to endanger human life and property.

McMahon, bald-headed and clubfooted, limped into court by the side door, accompanied by a police-man. He was wearing a dark-brown suit.

Sir Rolle Graham Campbell who presided, told him: "You may sit down if you like."

Makes Statement

The Attorney General said the prisoner had told the police: "I wish I had done the job properly." And that subsequently he had said, "It would have been better if I

COMETS MASSES OF LOOSE STONES

Confirmation of Theory Is Seen in Meteoric Showers

Boston, July 24 (AP)—Peltier's comet, approaching the earth at a rate of 26 miles per second, and Kahek's comet, now retreating into space, are the first such heavenly bodies visible to the naked eye since 1918.

They are the first comets to appear simultaneously since 1853. That year two celestial wanderers were seen only 200,000 miles apart.

The current heavenly visitors have stirred interest in previous comets, two were visible to the naked eye in 1910. One was the January to Johannesburg comet which did not attract much attention.

The other was Halley's comet, through whose tail the earth passed in May that year. It was a gleaming, vast spectacle on the western horizon after sunset.

Theories of Comets.

The idea that heads of comets are loose collections of stones and bits of matter created much consternation years ago when astronomers of a Detroit, July 24 (AP)—A public apology to Father Charles E. Coughlin for calling President Roosevelt a "liar" was in the record today, but the Radio Priest said the United States President that controversy was closed and he would be unable to do all possible to defeat him for re-election.

In a subsequent interview at his church of the Little Flower, Father Coughlin said that he knows no personal quarrel with the President and that he is well-intentioned but he succeeds in surrounding himself with crackpots.

The formal statement was published under the heading "an open letter of apology to President Roosevelt in the July 27 issue of "Social Justice," organ of Father Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice.

NO GENERAL VOTE DECLARES HEPBURN

Toronto, July 24 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario yesterday indicated there would be no general election this year, but reference before the next session of the Legislature.

"There will be no election before February," the Premier told a delegation, "because the Legislature usually convenes in the middle of February.

PUBLIC APOLOGY HAS BEEN MADE BY FR. COUGHLIN

Radio Priest Says He Will Do Utmost to Defeat Re-election

Vatican City, July 24 (AP) — A humanized telephone conversation between Father Charles E. Coughlin and Vatican officials aroused speculation today among prelates who acknowledged that the priest's "liar" address to President Roosevelt had created a "painful impression" here.

Father Coughlin's recent blast, which a reliable source said took place last last week, had anything to do with Vatican silence on the encyclical agency and promise to "obey orders" from the Vatican were his silenced, was not disclosed.

Vatican officials yesterday made public the text of a public apology for terms he applied to the President, and which the Vatican considered old age pension schemes recently, but declared that he still feels justified it best that the President "be supplanted."

Prelates were said on excellent authority to be awaiting with interest the arrival of Bishop Michael Gallagher of Detroit, Father Coughlin's ecclesiastic Diocesan.

TRUCK RAMS TAXI CARRYING POLICE STORE IS LOOTED

Surprised in Act by Constable Harvey of Fort Hope

FOUR SHOTS FIRED

Chase Through Fort Hope District at Times Over 70 M. P. H.

Fort Hope, Ont., July 24 (CP)—Police searched the district between here and Longlac today for a man who was caught robbing a Fort Hope tobacco store and escaped police by ramming his truck into a taxi in which a constable rode in pursuit.

Surprised by Night Constable Harvey, the thief dashed to his truck and started north on the highway to Peterborough. Obtaining a taxi, Constable Harvey gave chase. All the way to Beardtoe the truck kept slowing down, hoping that the taxi would crash it from the rear. Constable Harvey fired several shots but the truck kept on.

Finally the fleeing truck thief stopped completely and backed up to collide with the taxi which was put out of commission by the impact. The truck then raced northward on the road toward Peterborough.

The pumps at a Cavan street service station were also smashed and gasoline stolen.

Officer Tells Story.

According to Constable Harvey, the man was about thirty years of age, of dark complexion, and talked like an Italian. He was dressed in a dark suit.

"We had a fast machine," related Francis, driver of the taxi, "and figured that the man having gone north through the town, would make for highway No. 28. We drove three miles out and found no clues. We returned and made another and figured we would find him in town, waiting for a get-away. I turned the lights out and saw the wanted truck sitting near the Ontario Colonization Co. Ltd. Summer School. He started up and failed to see us, so we hurriedly followed him with our lights out. When he turned on to the side road we lost track of him for a minute and the lights had to be turned on. The jig was then up and the chase on."

"He tried to crash us several times, continued Francis. "When we tried to get up even, he would turn out and slow down. We were hitting 70 miles an hour on the down-grade near Waipoos when Constable Harvey let him have four shots from a .32 colt automatic. When he stopped and backed into the taxi after going at such a speed, it was totally unexpected."

Hitch-Hiked 23 Miles to Job And Then Hitch-Hiked Home

Just When Two Belleville Men Were Getting Used to It, Job Over

FEAR OF 'SOFTNESS'

Hitch-hiking may be the method of spending a pleasant vacation for some people, while to the knights of the road it constitutes the only method of transportation but when a man has to hitch-hike to get to a day's hard work with pick and shovel, all the glamor is removed, and it becomes just the category of hard labor.

This was the experience of C. McPherson and D. Bowder, two unemployed men of this city. Securing a job with a construction company through the medium of the local unemployment bureau they were detailed to work in a stone quarry some twenty-three miles from the city. Transportation was lacking, but rather than pass up the opportunity of earning much-needed dollars to feed needy families, they set out on foot on the long trek to the quarry.

For two mornings they tramped the long distance picking up occasional lifts. Then they discovered a stone-hauled truck driver who offered them a free ride every morning.

"We appreciated that," said McPherson, "but we had to make the long hike back at night. All day long we worked in the quarry swinging picks and shovels, and by the time night came, that twenty three miles stretch ahead of us did not look very enticing. But you can get used to anything especially when you have a wife and four children to support. The only trouble is that we found it sooner got used to it than the job finished. I hope sincerely the clue turns up pretty soon because I don't know what I might do next time with enforced idleness", he concluded.

Work on the provincial highway between Foxboro and Stirling, which Belleville unemployed hope will provide employment for parts of this district has been completed, according to a communication received by Superintendent Kerr of the Unemployment Bureau this morning.

"The most of them do not like to leave the city", said Mr. Kerr in an attractive young lady, in search of employment as a domestic, declined to investigate a position with a family living outside the city limits. "The lure of the stronger than their actual need it seems."
